MRS. SIEDOLIN ARNAULT DIES IN HER 68TH YEAR

Following an illness of one week's duration with pneumonia, Mrs. Claire Arnault, widow of Siedolin Arnault, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Sidney Scruton, of 279 Leland avenue. She was born in France sixty-six years ago, but came to this country when a child. She has made her home in Plainfield for several years. Beside the daughter with whom she lived, one other daughter survives her, Mrs. Rudolph Heilshorn, of New York.

The funeral service will be held at the late home tonight, at 8:15, Rev. Edward S. Ralston, pastor of the Netherwood Reformed church, officiating. Burial will be made tomorrow in the Cedarlawn cemetery, Paterson.

HOME FROM AUTO TRIP.

Dr. Arthur H. Dundon and J. Alexander Wilson, of the borough, have returned from an automobile trip into Virginia. The trip was made partly for business and partly for pleasure, and consumed a week.

Staunton, Va., was the objective point of the North Plainfielders. Dr. Dundon said that he found the roads through Maryland and Virginia fine, but had no such good expressions to make concerning the roads in the vicinity of Philadelphia.

SIXTH ANNIVERSARY.

Captain Hudson Kitchell celebrated the sixth anniversary of his conversion at the Rescue Mission Saturday night. Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church and Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, of the First M. E. church, made brief addresses on the occasion. John LeMatty, superintendent of the mission, also spoke. Miss Jennie Sears sang several selections, and a number of converts gave testimony.

EXTINGUISHED DUMP FIRE.

Complaints made to the head of the fire department concerning the unpleasant odors which arose from the dump on Randolph road, resulted in Chief Doane sending No. 1 hose wagon to the scene yesterday morning at 9:10 o'clock to put out a fire among the rubbish. Hose was attached to a hydrant and 1,450 feet of hose were run out. The dump was drenched thoroughly, the firemen remaining on the job until 12:30.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Wharton, of 819 West Sixth street, observed their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary Saturday night. The silver aniversary was made the occasion of a gathering of relatives and friends, who passed the evening pleasantly and wished the couple many happy returns of the day. The couple were remembered with many handsome gifts.

HEALTH BOARD MEETING.

The North Plainfield Board of Health will hold its regular September meeting tonight. This is the meeting which was postponed from last Monday, on account of Labor Day. It is expected that the new plumbing ordinance will be presented by the committee having the preparation of it in charge, and that it will be acted upon.

MEETING POSTPONED.

Owing to the fact that there is practically no league business to be attended to this evening, the weekly City Baseball League session has been postponed until Friday.

KNOWLEDGE THAT FILLS THE WORLD

Public Schools and Religious Education Theme of Rev. Dr. Hudson's Sermon.

Taking the public schools of the country and religious education as his subject, under the title, "Knowledge That Fills the World," the Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, delivered a plea for Bible training in the public schools yesterday morning. Going back to primitive times in Bible history, he chose a text from First Samuel, 17 46, "This day will the Lord deliver thee into mine hand: and I will smite thee and take thine head from thee; and I will give the carcasses of the hosts of the Philistines this day unto the fowls of the air, and to the wild beasts of the earth; that all the earth may know that there is a God in Israel."

Dr. Hudson likened the situation of the Israelites, grappling with the wild people, the Philistines, to the Christian church today in its struggle against godlessness. While one side or the other in a great struggle seems to be victorious, he said that that was no reason to suppose that God was on the side of the conquering host just because that side happened to be winning. He referred to the situation in Europe, and made this same statement regarding the struggling armies there.

"There is at hand an opportunity for the United States to demonstrate that there is a God in Israel," he said. "This demonstration must be made by a people who have comfortable homes, large cities and evidences of culture.

"Public sentiment is so emphatic in its approval of President Wilson's stand in the present world war situation that I do not hesitate to refer to it. He stands for a stability among nations that will place this country far above them all."

Dr. Hudson said that education of the people was the means which would make this possible. He made a plea for the use of the Bible in the public schools. Only one-fourth of the children of New York, he said, are under some religious instruction. He called attention to the appalling conditions existing which allowed 600,000 of them to go untaught in Bible truths. And this, he said, is a condition prevailing in New York, where we look for the best culture and education.

Dr. Hudson outlined a plan in vogue in at least one city in the country where school children are dismissed at a certain hour each day to receive religious and Bible historical education from competent instors in the various denominations and sects represented in the schools. This work is undertaken by the churches, and at a certain time each day the pupils are to be found in the different churches in the city studying the Word of God—the Roman Catholics in their churches, the Jewish children in their synagogues, the Protestants in churches of their denominations. In this way the religious training of the children is not neglected, and there is no opposition from parents and others who might not be in accord with the particular religious education that might be given by the public school authorities.

BOROUGH SCHOOL BOARD DISCUSSES LEGAL MATTERS

The Borough Board of Education met Saturday night to discuss the Harrison Avenue School tangle, and adjourned to meet again tonight, when it is expected that some action will be taken.

The members of the board refused to make known the business of the session for the reason that any publicity would injure the Board in the event of future litigation over the action of L. Belluccio & Brother in throwing up the school contract just before the work was completed, and after a large payment had been made to them. Borough Counsel Isaac P. Runyon met with the Board and advised them as to their actions.

ALL SERVICES LARGELY ATTENDED AND INTERESTING

All the services yesterday at the First Baptist church were remarkable both for attendance and interest, the atendance at the Bible school was fifty-four more than the corresponding Sunday of last year, while the young people's service in the evening was perhaps one of the most interesting the society has ever held. Young people of Plainfield who have no other religious affiliations will find it a pleasure and profit alike to become members of this Christian Endeavor Society.

The evening discourse by the pastor, Dr. Philip B. Strong, in the series "Through the Year with Bards and Bible," was very closely listened to by an unusually large congregation for a September evening. The choir yesterday did most effective work both morning and evening.

Your next new boarder is probably watching the classified ads just now—for "opportunity news."

Plainfield, N. J., Sept. 7, 1915.

AN ORDINANCE

To License and Regulate Itinerant Venders of Merchandise, Medicines and Remedies.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. In the construction of this ordinance the term "itinerant vender" shall be taken and construed to mean and include any person or corporation engaged in or carrying on, whether as principal or agent, a transient retail business, whether of the nature of those usually called bankrupt sales, fire sales, assignee's sales, damaged goods sales, retiring from business sales, or the like, where the seller gives out or pretends that the sale will last for a limited time only, or where in fact it is the intention of the seller to continue such sale only temporarily. This ordinance shall not affect any sale made by virtue of an order of any court nor a sale made by any person or corporation who or which has been actually engaged in business in the City of Plainfield for a period of at least six months immediately preceding such sale in respect to the same kind of merchandise, medicines or remedies theretofore carried in stock by such person or corporation.

Section 2. Hereafter no itinerant vender of merchandise, medicines or remedies shall begin, enter upon or carry on any sale of merchandise, medicines or remedies at any house, store, warehouse or other fixed place in the City of Plainfield without first obtaining a license so to do as hereinafter provided and paying therefor a license fee of Two Hundred Dollars for each month or fraction thereof covered by such license. Such license fee is and shall be imposed for revenue.

Section 3. The Mayor of said City is hereby authorized, upon application in writing, to grant and issue under his hand and the seal of said City, licenses to such and so many persons or corporations as he may think proper to engage in, conduct or carry on at any fixed place in said city named and specified in such application and in such licenses, and at no other place, any such business as described in Section 1 of this ordinance. Every such license shall state the period during which it shall be and remain in force and shall be void and of no effect both before the beginning and after the end of such period. The City Clerk shall keep a detailed record of every such license issued and shall attest the same. The license fee shall be received by him before the license is so attested by him and all by him paid over promptly to the City Treasurer.

The Mayor shall have power to revoke any such license at any time if he shall become satisfied that the licensee has been guilty of misrepresenting in any way the character of the sale or of the goods, wares or merchandise sold. No such sale in the nature of an auction shall be carried on except through a person holding a valid auctioneer's license issued by authority of said City.

Section 4. Any person violating any of the provisions of this ordinance, whether such person be acting as principal or as agent or employe of a natural person, or as agent, employe or officer of a corporation, shall be liable upon conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ninety days.

FOUND CYCLE STOLEN HE LOST A YEAR AGO

Vehicle Stolen From Him Was Purchased by Elizabeth Man in New York.

His unrelenting search for an Excelsior motorcycle that was stolen from him about a year ago yesterday afternoon bore fruit for Frederick K. Hansgen, of 215 East North avenue, Westfield, when he detected the missing vehicle in the possession of Charles L. Noe, of 29 Elm street, Elizabeth, who was riding along South avenue. Hansgen recongized the machine from his automobile and after riding alongside of Noe for some distance, stopped him.

The two men came to police headquarters, where Noe told of having bought the cycle, valued at $400, from a second-hand dealer in Veysey street, New York, for $125. It was kept at police headquarters and will be turned over to the Westfield man as soon as he furnishes the necessary proof showing that it belongs to him.

Noe comes from a responsible family in Elizabeth and was entirely unaware of the fact that he was riding a vehicle that had been stolen. He bought the machine in good faith.

AN ALLEGORY WILL DEPICT RECRUITING

Attractive Exercises Will Mark Rally Day at First Presbyterian Church.

Decidedly unusual features will mark the rally day exercises of the First Presbyterian Sunday-school on the last Sunday of this month. An allegory depicting the recruiting of new soldiers in the army of the Lord will be the central theme. The details are now being worked out, and the full program cannot be entirely announced. In fact, the committee plans to retain many of the features of this rally day exercises as a surprise.

The details are being worked out by a special committee, consisting of Acting Superintendent Robert H. Radford, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Palmer, Mrs. George N. Karner, Miss, Leah Hammond, Mrs. Grove Hinman, Miss Adie Dietrich and Miss Clara Van Fleet. A number of the children of the Sunday-school will participate, and one of the leading parts will be taken by Miss Ethel Hazel, a member of Miss Linda Cave's Camp Fire Girls of the Presbyterian church, and by Howard Allegar, Jr., a member of Champion Troop, No. 5, Boy Scouts of America, of which John Richards is scoutsmaster. Both will appear in uniform.

An important meeting of the teachers of the Sunday-school will be held on Wednesday evening, at which time an attempt will be made to elect a successor to Henry W. Herrman, resigned. For several months the members of this school have been balloting for their choice for Mr. Herrman's successor. The referendum has resulted in a large number of votes being cast, and the sentiment of the school will be reported on Wednesday evening. A number of prominent men identified with Christian work outside of the school have been prominently mentioned, and the keenest kind of interest centers upon the result.

Troop No. 5, Boy Scouts of America, which will be called upon to defend the Paul R. Collier championship pennant, on Columbus Day, at Parker Field, against all the other troops in the city, have challenged Troop No. 8, of the Crescent Avenue church, Douglas Davis, scoutmaster, to a stalking competition this Friday evening. The boys of Troop No. 5 will be called upon to defend a certain prescribed territory against the passage of secret sealed orders carried by a member of Troupe No. 8 between two given points.

Class 22, conducted by Allen E. Beals, is out to raise its membership during the coming year from 35 to 70. An invitation to young men between the age of 15 and 19 years not already connected with any Sunday-school is going out. A new course of lectures on "Meeting the Problems of Young Manhood" began yesterday. These talks are based upon problems that young men meet in college and in business, and are in serial narrative form. The class meets at 10 o'clock every Sunday morning.

The annual banquet of the Young People's Social Christian Endeavor Society will take place tonight.

Announcement was made yesterday that Charles L. Lewis, instructor of music in the Plainfield High School, has been engaged to regularly conduct the singing at the First Presbyterian Sunday-school, beginning next Sunday. The music, led by Miss Clara Van Fleet, pianist, and Alfred Korff, violin, accompanied, perhaps, later, by members of Troop No. 5 Fife and Drum Corps, promises to be a distinctive feature of this school this year. Next Sunday, therefore, has been designated as Lewis day, and every member of the school is urged to be present to get the musical feature of rally day well developed for the grand reunion on Sunday, September 26.

BOY EVANGELIST WILL COME HERE

Fifteen-year-old Youth to Hold Services in Park Avenue Baptist Church.

It is likely that a series of evangelistic services will be held in the Park Avenue Baptist church soon by the Rev. Charles Taylor and his son, Charles, who come from Bedford, England, the home of John Bunyan. The son is only fifteen years old and is known as the "boy preacher." Those who have heard him preach are loud in their praises of him, and if the two, father and son, come to Plainfield, it is thought that an evangelistic movement of wide importance will be the result.

The Taylors are now in this country, and will open a series of meetings in a Brooklyn church in a few days. The Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, is in New York today endeavoring to make final arrangements insuring the presence of the evangelist in his church some time during the next few weeks. Dr. Hudson will be ready with a further announcement concerning these services at the prayer meeting Wednesday night.

These services wil have no connection with the union evangelistic campaign to be held in this city in the spring, in which all the Plainfield churches will participate.

DEMONSTRATION TO BE HELD OCT. 12

Boy Scout Council Meets Tonight to Discuss Program and Other Details.

Chairman Paul R. Collier, of the annual Championship Boy Scout Patrol competition, will make his final report to the Boy Scout Council tonight regarding the program and other details. The meeting will start promptly at 8 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. parlors.

An acceptance has been received from Walter Price, president of the Boy Scout Council of Staten Island, and a personal friend of George P. Mellick, president of the Board of Playground Commissioners, of this city, to be the guest of honor for this event. He has planned to bring a special trolley car load of Staten Island Boy Scouts to this city on Columbus Day, October 12, to witness the demonstration of the Plainfield Boy Scout work.

Committees in charge of the Boy Scout camp in Terrill road will also report at tonight's meeting with reference to figures obtained for the construction of the building. There is in hand at this time $245 with which to build the structure, but it has been difficult to get the cost down to meet the amount of money now available. In the meantime the new scout organization of the farm districts back of Netherwood is without a suitable meeting place and scout troops from this city have been camping out on the site of Camp Coriell under canvas and in charge of Assistant Scout Master William Tompsen.

Commissioner Allen E. Beals will report vacancies in two scoutmasterships tonight, that of Troop 9 in the First Methodist church, and of Troop 12 at Hope chapel, to succeed Dr. Raymond S. Stevens and Alfred P. Palmer of the respective troops. The commissioner said this morning that there was grave danger of these two very highly trained and efficient troops being disorganized from lack of suitable leadership. If there are any men in the community who are lovers of the woods and enjoy the training of boys in good citizenship, self reliance and general preparedness there is a splendid opportunity for the right men in these two troops. They will be welcomed at tonight's council meeting.

POLISH FALCONS HOLD A SUCCESSFUL OUTING

The final picnic given by the Polish Falcons Gymnastic Society yesterday afternoon on the grounds at West Seventh street and Rock avenue was most successful. Races for children, men and women; jumps and other outdoor sports were features in which practically every attendant participated. Handsome and useful prizes were awarded the winner in each event. During the afternoon, a woman's auxiliary to the Falcons Gymnastic Society was organized, fifteen young women entering their names as charter members. A meeting will be held this week, the night to be decided later, at which time the officers of the organization will be elected.

CHURCHMEN TO MEET.

A meeting of the members of the Park Avenue Baptist church will be held tonight, at which the church will make arrangements for its share in the union evangelistic services to be held next spring.

BATTLE 15 INNINGS WITHOUT DECISION

Tabs and Plainfield A. A. in Hard Sunday Struggle at Avon Park.

Darkness put an end to an exciting fifteen-inning game between the T. A. B. S. and the Plainfield A. A. at Avon Park, Sunday afternoon. During the first half of the game both teams batted freely, but for the last seven innings it was a solemn Indian file procession to and from the plate, and the eight to eight score that stood at the end of the eighth was never changed.

Dixon and Gunzelman led at the bat for Plainfield, while T. Denny and Kyle hit hardest for the T. A. B. S. Both teams fielded well. Miller pulled down one that was labeled a hit in center and Lawton started a double play, after making a hard catch near the scoreboard. Both pitchers tightened up after the seventh and delivered a clever brand of twirling. The game was witnessed by a large crowd.

FARMERS TOOK CLOSE GAME FROM RIVALS

Good Hitting Brought Home the Bacon for Winning Crew.

The Farmers' A. C. defeated the Queen City nine Sunday by a score of 5 to 4. The Queens held the lead until the ninth inning, when a batting rally brought in two runs for the Farmers. In the first half of the ninth Ryan flied out to left. Anderson singled and Kachelries hit, sending Anderson home with the tying run. Joe Morley then brought Kachelries in with another safety, and the Queens were unable to overcome the one-run lead in their half of the inning. The score:

Although Netherwood has already capturde the flag in the City League and has completed its schedule and retired from the firing line, interest in the standing of the teams is not lacking because of the warm fight now on for second place. Through a victory Saturday the T. A. B. S. stepped on the Saurers, pushing them further toward the bottom. While the latter team was losing Clinton avenue defeated the First Baptist team and is now in third place, only a few points behind the T. A. B. S. and within shooting distance of the only prize left to strive for. If either team wins while the other loses this week a big advantage will be gained.

A meeting of the league will be held in the office of the Daily Press tonight.

SAURERS LOSE AFTER WARRY IS BENCHED

Local Factory Team Defeated by St. Peter's Nine of New Brunswick.

A heated swatfest in the initial round, Warry MacLaughlin, an ex-leaguer, driven from the bullock, shoe string catches by Jefferies and Leo Harkins, were among the innumerable features of the brilliant baseball encounter waged on the East avenue ball field, New Brunswick, Sunday afternoon, when the Knights of St. Peter triumphed over the Saurers, of Plainfield, by a score of 9-8. The phenomenal contest was played before the presence of seven hundred dyed-in-the-wool baseball fans.

REACH SEMI-FINALS IN TENNIS TOURNEY

Collier and Bellows to Play Conway and Brown for Title.

Semi-finals in the tennis tournament of the Netherwood Tennis Club were played Sunday and the teams of Collier and Bellows and Conway and Brown won out after two hard fought matches. They will meet sometime this week in the finals.

The most bitterly contested match of the tournament resulted in the elimination of Rockwell and Uhler by Collier and Bellows. The losers won the first set, 6-1. In the second set they needed but one point to win, but were finally defeated 6-8, and lost the third set, 6-4. Conway and Brown defeated Nash and Rafferty in the other match and the two winners of Sunday's matches will decide the double tournament championship sometime this week.

The Netherwood club will have four representatives in the night tournament of the Westfield Tennis Club, which will be held next week. They will be Collier and Bellows, Rockwell and Uhler.

WHEAT OUT FOR WEEK.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 13.—Zack Wheat, the Robins' star left fielder, who pulled a tendon last week, left for his home at Polo, Me., today, with his brother Mack, to rest up for a few days. He will rejoin the team late this week in Chicago.

LARGE ENROLLMENT MARKS RE-OPENING

Pupils Resumed Their Studies in the North Plainfield Schools Today.

The borough public schools opened this morning for the 1915-1916 school year. Teachers and pupils were in their places promptly and settled down to work. At the Somerset School, Principal Albert Early called the school to order for the opening exercises. Supervising Principal D. Fred Aungst introduced the new supervisor of music, S. Frederick Smith, who took charge of the singing.

Principal Aungst presented the new teachers, each one being greeted with the High School yell led by Cheer Leader Willett. Miss Mildred Hodges, the new instructor in French and Latin, was educated for her work in Columbia University and has taught at Hamburg, this State.

Miss Irene Duchesne, instructor in English, received her education in the College of Mt. St. Mary and at Columbia.

Miss Jennie Bonring, who will instruct in science, prepared for teaching in the Millersville Normal School, Bucknell University, the University of Pennsylvania, Columbia, and Franklin and Marshall College. She formerly taught in the High School at Ephrata, Pa.

The morning exercises closed with an address by the supervising principal, D. Fred Aungst.

Before the classes turned to their first day's work, High School Principal Early explained the courses. A teachers' meeting, in charge of the supervising principal, was held in the Somerset School at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

A CHOICE WITHOUT AN ALTERNATIVE

The Grouch was dying, and the doctor said: "Are you prepared to go?"

The Grouch answered, "Yes," and the doctor said: "Then it is now unanimous!"

Wherever there is unanimity of opinion it is safe to assume the opinion is correct.

But it is more than an opinion—it has the tenacity of conviction — it stands the acid test of competition and time—it is, in fact, established beyond peradventure in the minds of hundreds of Plainfielders that Rothberg clothes are a choice without alternative!

GEORGE P. BULL DIES IN EL PASO, TEXAS

Former Plainfielder Succumbs to Long Illness From Stomach Trouble.

George P. Bull, a former resident of this city, died in El Paso, Tex., on August 14, at the Providence Hospital, where he had been taken on account of stomach trouble, with which he had long been afflicted.

From Plainfield, Mr. Bull first went to Ojus, Fla., many years ago, and became prominent in business and political circles. He was Dade county Democratic chairman and a member of the County Board of Bond Trustees in that State. Later he took up his residence in El Paso.

Writing editorially of Mr. Bull, the Miami Herald said: "General sorrow will be expressed at the news of the death of George P. Bull, which occurred at El Paso, Tex. Mr. Bull was well known to the older residents of Dade county, where he had been a prominent figure for many years. He was a man of the staunchest integrity, and earned the goodwill, the respect and the confidence of all with whom he came in contact."

MRS. HELEN H. GREELEY GIVEN CORDIAL RECEPTION

A cordial reception was tendered Mrs. Helen Moy Greeley, of New York city, who appeared here Saturday night, in the weekly street meeting of the local branch of the New Jersey Equal Suffrage League. Mrs. Greeley is not unknown in Plainfield, having spoken here on several former occasions in the interest of the ballot, and her coming last week brought out the largest crowd of knowledge seekers ever attending an open-air meeting in this city.

A lawyer by profession, Mrs. Greeley presents her facts in a clear, logical way, and holds a wonderful control of her audience. Starting promptly at 8 o'clock, she held the two hundred or more listeners in rapt attention until shortly after 10 o'clock. Time after time spontaneous applause greeted her remarks. Another rousing meeting will be held this Saturday night at the postoffice corner. Suffragists are making arrangements to have six local ministers present the cause of suffrage to the people. The names of the men will be announced later.

JOSEPH GRANDL RETURNS.

Joseph Grandl, proprietor of the Kensington Riding School, returned to Plainfield today after spending three months at Saratoga, where he had a most successful season. The horses used by the members of Troop D, of this city, are now quartered at Mr. Grandl's school.

RESIDENTS TO CONSIDER SCHOOL ACCOMMODATION

The question of school accommodations for the children of the East End will be considered at a special meeting of residents of the Netherwood section of the city to be held tonight at 8 o'clock in the Netherwood Reformed church.

The residents of that section are thoroughly aroused over the lack of school accommodations in the neighborhood, similar to those provided for them last year, and a request is made that every resident attend the meeting. They are determined that their children shall not be compelled to go to the Lincoln School on half time, as has been proposed by the Board of Education.

MOTORCYCLE SPEEDER GETS SENTENCE IN CITY COURT

Charged with repeated and flagrant violation of the laws governing motor vehicles, Elroy Giles, of 115 West Fifth street, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning and sentenced to pay a fine of $10 with the option of spending forty days in the county pail. Giles, according to testimony given by Patrolman Joseph Dunlap, has been warned on several occasions for various offenses and he arrested him Friday night for speeding his motorcycle at thirty miles an hour along West Front street, near Grant avenue.

Giles admitted going twenty-five miles an hour, which is well over the limit. Dunlap claimed that he refused to stop when hailed.

WAR ON THE DEFENSELESS.

Whatever may have prompted the entry of Germany into this great war; whatever justice there may have been in the cause of The Fatherland at the beginning, there soon will be little or no sympathy on this side of the world for the armies of the Kaiser if barbaric methods now being used are not discontinued.

War in itself is the greatest atrocity conceivable to the civilized mind, but there are certain humane rules to be followed even in its inhuman prosecution.

Sherman was not inspired to his vividly profane definition by scenes of dead and dying soldiers on the battlefield. It was only after his destructive march through defenseless Georgia when he was forced to wage indirect war on women and children, that he said "War is Hell." And even then he only destroyed their homes and crops. He did not murder them.

Every Zeppelin crew that leaves its aerial base for a raid on London or other English towns goes forth with a deliberate intent to murder helpless women and children, old men and sick and wounded soldiers. Every sailor on board a submarine that fires a torpedo into a liner loaded with passengers of both sexes and all ages knows that the women and children will be the first to perish because they are weakest, and each one is as guilty of deliberate murder as though he had killed his victim with a knife thrust.

Blinded with frenzied hate born of war the Teutonic horde has discarded civilization's teachings. The Germans may have been inspired by nobler motives at first but greed for glory and lust for blood are driving them now. A Zeppelin raid on London does not aid the German cause. When bombs are dropped on trenches camps, munition stores, war bases or executive offices, damage is done the fighting force of the enemy and that is war. To even slay the King of England with an aerial bomb as he sleeps would be defendable but promiscious bomb dropping into thickly populated civilian centers is bestial slaughter and cannot be condoned by civilization. The Kaiser is rapidly becoming the most brutal soldier leader since Attila the Hun.

There are many in America who would still pray for the success of German arms but they fear to ask God's help in such wicked work.

Proofreaders are human, and will make mistakes at times. That is the only explanation we can give of the fact that we said that more parks are needed for "breeding" places instead of "breathing" places in last Thursday's paper. One of our readers inquires whether we mean to breed mosquitoes, and we hasten to assure him (or her) that no more places are needed for that purpose.

One of the first things a stranger notices in visiting Plainfield is the absence of public parks or recreation centers. A few open places in the center of the city would cost but little now and mean much to the children and grownups of the bigger Plainfield that is sure to come.

President Taft urges the American people not to force suffrage on the women of the country. Forcing the ballot into the hands of the women of New Jersey is going to be a performance similar to Belgium forcing war on Germany.

The conflict now waging near Warsaw may be Armageddon. The Kaiser still insists that God is helping him direct the German and Austrian warriors, while Old Nick has taken personal command of the Russian armies.

A New York woman is asking $5,000 as damages for two teeth broken while eating candy. If that is the market price for teeth we know a man who is indebted to us in the approximate sum of $100,000.

President Wilson may as well keep that diplomatic rail on which he rode Dumba out of the country near his desk. There are others in training for the trip.

That partnership between the Kaiser und Gott may still exist but we haven't heard him bragging about it lately.

The Plainfield Business Men's Association was organized to boost YOUR business. Do you believe in that? Well, join.

If you spend your dollar in Plainfield you have a better chance of getting it back next week.

These Puzzling Days

"What is your offspring—boy or girl?"
I asked the parents of the freak.
No, I am not a grouchy churl;
I had no vengeance dire to wreak.
I was not stirred with indignation,
I simply asked for information.

The child that puzzled me was not
A tiny thing in swaddling garments—
It was a five-foot-eleven tot,
Yet one of those deceiving varmints.
It had on trousers, right enough,
But still the problem sure was tough.

The elbow sleeves—O goodness, Mabel!
The sport-shirt, wrist-watch, flowing tie—
All these were why I was unable
To fathom, with the naked eye,
Just whether 'twas a male or 'tother—
If 'twas a sister or a brother.

Kraut

The papers say the sauerkraut crop this year is going to be a humdinger.

Almost any family addicted to the kraut habit can put aside seven or eight barrels for use in case of sickness.

The art of making kraut is an elusive one.

It is very easy to make it if you can.

The cabbage-polls are violently massaged across a knife-infested board, until the head is all shot to pieces, and the débris is put into a stone jar and brutally treated with a wooden maul.

When the kraut is bleeding white blood at every pore, salt it just exactly enough. Nobody knows what quantity of salt to put in, but the regular kraut virtuoso will not put in a grain too much or too little.

Disintegrate another cabbage bean and repeat in layers. When the jar is full, put two little pieces of board crosswise on the top, lay a rock on the place where the two boards cross, and forget it.

Shortly afterward, the juice will stand above the boards, and then the kraut is fit to eat.

Kraut used to be tramped, but people began to wash their feet so often that the kraut's flavor changed noticeably, and the wooden maul was adopted.

Therefore, while the kraut of this year's vintage may seem somewhat insipid to those who ever inhaled the old chiropodistic kind, it is perhaps just as sanitary, if not more so.

Sad Indeed

The observant citizen had just watched one of those famous light cars go by, with a sloping radiator on it that made it look like an incipient case of goiter.

"You can't do nothing to improve a ford that don't make it look just like a ford or worse," he sighed.

Exploding The Gas Bubble

AMONG the exquisite pleasures of the human animal we should number yawning, stretching, snoring and eructating gas.

Everybody loves to take issue with a doctor.

You must eat this and that, the doctor orders.

Oh, I can't digest this and that, the patient declares. It creates so much gas and I suffer dreadfully.

No matter what the trouble, or whether there is more or less gas than physiologically should be present, the sufferer from digestive disturbance invariably assumes that the gas is the cause of any pain or distress his ailment may give him, and that "something to raise the gas" is an indispensable adjunct of treatment.

The unhappy fact is that gas never causes pain or distress under any circumstances whatever. Conditions accompanying it, such as colic (muscle spasm) or excessive acidity (secretory or fermentative) or inflammation (gallstones, chronic appendicitis, duodenal ulcer, etc.), often enough distress the patient, but gas itself never.

Things which happen to give relief coincident with the expulsion of gas do so by relaxing colicky spasm of the muscle wall of stomach or bowel, or by neutralizing acids which cause burning or pain, or by relieving the inflammatory condition underlying the "indigestion."

Yet patients will refuse this and that sound article of diet, and insist upon dosing themselves with this and that remedy, merely because they are obsessed with the gas bubble.

Worse, they will nibble at soda, magnesium carbonate, and similar alkalies which give off quantities of carbonic acid gas on contact with the normal acid of the stomach. This gas is then belched with great relief—to the mind.

Persons subject to gallstones usually do not know it until an accident like gallstone colic or jaundice occurs, but for years they will drive doctors to distraction by their demands for a diet to prevent and medicine to raise the gas.

If the doctor frankly asserts that it is of no avail to get up the gas he is discharged forthwith.

Hence the gas bubble sails merrily on unpunctured.

George Bernard Shaw said it.

A doctor dare not tell the truth. He had much rather write.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

An Internist Defined

Will you kindly inform me, writes a druggist, what an "internist" is? I find Dr. —— —— listed in the medical directory as an internist.

Answer—This is the first time we have been stumped in six months. We can't tell you precisely, but in a general way an internist is a high priced family doctor who stays in his office most of the time and maintains a corps of assistants, nurses, laboratory slaves, etc. He is sort of an all-round specialist on inside complaints, if you know what we mean.

Bromidrosis

Can you suggest anything for perspiring feet which give forth a bad odor?

Answer—Smear glycerin over the soles of the feet and the toes each morning before putting the stockings on.

SEE AMERICA FIRST—PUGET SOUND

PUGET SOUND was constructed many million years ago, but lay in a neglected and disheveled condition entirely surrounded by pine trees until the early seventies of the last century.

It forms the northwest corner of the United States and makes this country look as if someone had bitten a chunk out of it in a moment of great ill-feeling. It is about 150 miles long, but is so littered up with islands that it does not appear to be very wide. A strong man can see across it anywhere. This, however, is because Puget Sound is decorated on both shores with mountains of great size and dignity. One of the pleasantest tasks in America is to stand at Seattle or Tacoma and look across Puget Sound at the Olympic Mountains. Owing to the fact that they are covered with fog in winter and with forest fire smoke in summer, this is a rare privilege. Old settlers in Seattle date events from the last time they saw the Olympics.

Puget Sound is a beautiful and harmonious collection of waters. It is famous for being the most peaceful body of water on the globe, which accounts for the phenomenal growth of Seattle and Tacoma. They have been populated by travelers who are subject to seasickness and have gazed upon the calm sound waters after having endured $135 worth of ill health with tips extra on the Atlantic.

The greatest forests left in America come down to the edges of Puget Sound and the buzz-saw and salmon cannery work overtime along its shores. The United States almost went to war over this collection of wetness in the forties and then forgot all about it for thirty years.

Now it is lined with roaring cities which grow two acres every night and like nothing better than to cut down a 300-foot fir tree and built a 400-foot skyscraper in its place. Over six hundred thousand people now live around the Sound, though forty years ago the traveler who dropped his matches in these waters would have had to travel 150 miles to find the nearest cigar store.

Steamships from China, Japan, Europe and Alaska jostle each other in Puget Sound and more motor boats than can be found anywhere else on earth navigate its waters. It would take an industrious man 100 years to seek out all the beauty spots in this region with a motor boat, and many earnest, enthusiastic skippers are putting off their deaths indefinitely for this reason.

Views Of The Press

Where We Get Our Weeks

THERE are seven days in the week, because of the Oriental tradition that the world was created in seven days. The Romans had no week, but reckoned the months, counting forward and backward from the ides and nones, until the fourth century, when they adopted the Jewish-Christian week.

Because of its relation to the creation the number seven has always been invested with an occult and mystic significance. There were seven wise men in antiquity, and seven wonders of the world. The seventh son of a seventh son, or seventh daughter of a seventh daughter, was supposed to possess powers of prophecy or divination. For seven days seven priests with seven trumpets invested Jericho, and on the seventh day they encompassed it seven times. The ancients knew of seven planets and seven metals. There were seven heavens and seven hierarchs of angels.

Seven had a mystical significance among peoples who had no tradition of a seven-day creation, and this was due to its being indivisible by any number but itself and to its being a combination of three (called by Pythagoras the perfect number, representing beginning, middle and end) and four, the square number.

The Pythagorean idea about three received confirmation when the doctrine of trinity in unity was promulgated by the early Christians. For three is itself at once trinity and unity.

The number nine was endowed with mysterious properties because it is the product of three times three—perfection multiplied by perfection. To see nine magpies was remarkably lucky. Nine grains of wheat laid on a four-leafed clover enabled one to see the fairies.—Detroit Free Press.

Intellect In Warfare

IF WE carefully analyze the military ability we find that very little of it is intellectual.

The qualities that go to make a successful leader of men, either armed or unarmed, are not intellectual, but matters of temperament.

The self-reliant force of character that never hesitates, and imparts to others the confidence felt by its possessor, is not the product of brain.

On the contrary, thought is the greatest antagonist of action.

The more we know, the less confidence we have in our knowledge.

Doubt, the offspring of study, creates distrust.

In the calculation of chances one must be quick to act.

The road to military success is lit by flashes of lightning on scenes that shift as rapidly as the waves of the sea; and no time is given the leader of men for thought and study.

The prompt action that sends fools in where angels fear to tread sometimes leads on to victory. But there is no place in such a field for

"The kings of thought, who wage contention with their time's decay,
And of the past are all that will not pass away."

Given an army well equipped for service, and a clear, quick eye to the typography of a country to a man so confident that he will risk an empire in a campaign and a campaign in a battle, and we have the higher qualities of a great general.

Right here we find a solution to a mystery that has puzzled us through the history of all the wars, and that is that in the host of men killers from Cain to Kaiser two only have gone on record as thoughtful men. These two are Julius Cæsar and Napoleon Bonaparte. One left the Code Napoleon and the other his Commentaries.—Athens Daily Messenger.

Stockholders As Receivers

Q. May an officer or a stockholder in a corporation be appointed as its receiver?

A. Officers and stockholders are not, on this ground alone, disqualified as receivers. However, where mismanagement has created the necessity for the appointment of a receiver, the court will not look with favor upon the selection of some one who has been officially connected with the company, and if an officer of the corporation has interests of a personal nature which are antagonistic to those of the stockholders, he will not be appointed receiver.

Rights Of Married Women

Q. Does a married woman have the right, in all the States of the Union, to make contracts, and may she be bound by them?

A. In nearly, if not all, the States, the restrictions formerly placed on a married woman in this respect have been either wholly removed or largely modified.

Endowment Insurance

Q. Please tell me the meaning, in a legal sense, of "endowment insurance."

A. Endowment insurance is that form of insurance by which one person, in consideration of the payment of a premium or premiums, is entitled, under the contract or policy, to receive a designated sum of money at a fixed time, or upon the death of the payee in the event that such death should occur prior to the time specified.

Where Hubby Comes In

Q. In a suit for divorce, is alimony ever allowed the husband?

A. In most of the states alimony is granted to the wife alone. This situation arises from the fact that the husband is under a legal duty, at common law, to support the wife. In some states, however, by virtue of legislation on this subject, alimony may be granted to the husband also, or he may be given an allowance out of the wife's estate.

The Lawyer's Fee

Q. How much should a lawyer charge for conducting an ordinary suit in court?

A. Questions of this sort cannot be answered with any degree of definiteness. So much depends on circumstances. The lawyer usually bases his fee on the amount of time and labor involved and on the care and skill required. He may also take into consideration his general experience in the practice, or his experience in particular branches of the practice. Moreover, it may be a matter of grave doubt as to what would be called an "ordinary" suit. Many supposedly "ordinary" suits have some very extraordinary features.

To Qualify For The House Of Correction

Q. What offenders may be placed in a house of correction? Is there an age limit?

A. The original intention, in establishing houses of correction, was to provide a place of confinement and correction for petty criminals or wrong-doers. In some instances, the statutes of a state prescribe a condition with reference to age. In other cases, there is no such condition and the matter of age is unimportant.

Employers' Liability

Q. Are employers' liability insurance contracts legal?

A. Yes. Contracts of this character were at one time attacked as being opposed to public policy, but the prevailing view now is that they are valid

The Woman Who "Has Had a Great Shock"

Her dearest friend has just died. "It's been a great shock to me," she tells us. She tells us this, though her friend has been ill over a year! But we don't ask her what she means; we know better than she, herself, what she means: we know that she belongs to that pathetic class of human beings who are able to know a thing, and yet not to realize it. All her life she has known that death is inevitable. Yet, when it comes, she is "shocked" by it. The word "shock" refers not to an unexpectedly sudden death, but to an unpreparedness in her own consciousness. She has gone through life like a child, not realizing the uncertainty of it. And, consequently, not using each day, as it came, as fully as she would have had she taken into consideration the fact that it might easily be her last. "But that's morbid!" she would have told us, if we had tried to awaken her—morbid to take facts into account! Only blows can awaken her.

She's still playing with her dolls.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Story That Little Evelyn Told.

"DADDY," said Evelyn, "I'm going to tell the bedtime story tonight."

"Very well," said daddy, cuddling his little girl close to him. "I'll listen real hard, for I am sure that I can learn a thing or two about story telling."

"I'm going to tell about a fairy princess that lived in a rose," said Evelyn. "I thought it all out myself today, and I think it's a very nice story.

"This little fairy princess had the bluest eyes you ever saw, an' her hair was like—was like beautiful gleams of sunshine, an' there was some red in it, an' her teeth was just as white as they could be, but she didn't have to brush 'em, 'cause fairy princesses don't have to eat anything but honey.

"This fairy princess that lived in a rose had just the loveliest disposition. She was so little that nobody could see her, an' she lived away down inside the soft, red rose. That is, she slept down there. Daytimes she would come up on top of the rose an' walk around enjoying the sunshine, but she was such a little thing that nobody could see her and that rose was as big for her to walk around on as a yard would be for us children, don't you see, daddy?

"An' that dear little fairy princess had such a lovely disposition that it fairly breathed out of the rose, an' any one who came near that rose just felt it, so they were happier without knowing why. They just knew they were happy, that was all, an' all the time it was the dear little fairy princess' beautiful disposition just breathin' out of the rose in that garden.

"Well, one day a beautiful lady came into the garden, an' she was awful sorrowful about somethin', I don't know what, an' her dark eyes were very mournful, an' her face was very white an' sad, an' she looked as if it would be very easy for her to start cryin' any moment. An' the beautiful lady came into the sunshine, daddy, an' it was just the same as if she didn't see it.

"An' the dear little fairy princess saw the beautiful lady all sorrowful, an' she was so sorry that she tried to have the beautiful lady look toward her home, which was the rose. But the lady didn't see it, an' so, by an' by, she went away, still sorrowful an' sad.

"An' the next day it was the same, an' the next. But on the next day the lady saw the rose an' said, 'What a lovely rose!' An' she plucked it, an' she was happier without knowing why. An' the fairy loved her so that even after the rose had faded the fairy always lived with the lady, an' the lady was happy without knowing why. How's that for a story?"

"That's a splendid story!" said daddy heartily. "I will have to think hard to keep up with my kiddies if this keeps on."

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. WM. LECKIE.

"What! Your coat? Lord, no. You have a raincoat and a sweater. What in the world would you want with a coat?" Dick was charging around the room in a vain attempt to hurry things up.

"We will have to be out there evenings, remember." Nell's voice was muffled by the garments among which she was searching.

"What in the world are you doing so long? Scott's been waiting half an hour now." Dick stuck his face, flushed with the exertion he had made to get the camping party under way, in at the door. "Come on!"

"If you'd help me find things instead of wasting your time yelling at me, we'd get started sooner. It's so small job to collect everything we'll need for two weeks, with a baby."

"You wait till the machine's in front of the door before you begin to get ready. It's a shame to keep him waiting when he was good enough to offer to take us out."

"Well, maybe you think you're helping to get us off by deluging me with a constant stream of language. If you can't help, keep still. It's the least you can do." Nell was certainly irritated. "I was up an hour before you were, and I haven't been sitting around smoking, either. That's all you've managed to do to help along. Have you both baskets and the suitcases in the machine?"

"Everything's been in half an hour. You're holding up the procession, as usual." Dick was anything but composed in his mind.

"Well, at last we're ready, Scott." Dick's tone was slightly mollified now that they were climbing into the machine.

"Hand me my cap from the top of the basket, please," he called when they were under way. "If I go bareheaded all the way I might get cold in my hair."

"I don't see any cap," answered Nell, pawing around among the luggage at her feet.

"I put it under the handle of the basket; it must be there."

"It's not here. Are you sure you put it in?"

They were drawing in front of the Parsons'. "I'll run back and look; I'll be here before the women are ready," and Dick scuttled off down the road.

"Oh, these men! If he'd spent the time getting the things he needed that he wasted nagging me we'd have made better time," called Nell mockingly after him.

Jo was ready. She had seen the machine in front of the Mortons and had her things all on.

"Where's Parsons?" asked Scott when she appeared.

"He's coming out with the doctor and Olive," explained Jo, "and they bring out most of our luggage. He said four grown folks and three babies were load enough for one machine."

"Who held the procession up after all, I should like to know?" Nell asked as Dick came running up with his cap in his hand. He ignored her remark and Nell winked triumphantly at Jo as he climbed in.

"Morton, we men will have to form a protective leage, I see, or we shall be browbeaten beyond endurance," laughed Scott, seeing that Dick was fussed over the incident.

"There's one thing I hope we have not forgotten," said Jo.

"Don't talk of forgotten things," sighed Nell; "I'm afraid to unpack."

"If you have forgotten things there will be the more need of this. I call it the first requisite for camping."

Nell looked mystified. "What is it?" she asked.

"A sense of humor," replied Jo. "Don't you agree with me?"

PROLOGUE.

Did you ever hear of a successful combination of love and business? Probably not. Well, here is the opportunity to learn just how it can be done. The greatest force in modern commercial life has undoubtedly been shown to be effective advertising, and in this interesting narrative you will see how this fact comes into operation. Based on one of the most popular plays of the year, this story will be read with interest by the business man, the ambitious youth and the trustful young girl who looks at life with more or less of perplexity. It is a story that reveals how the spirit of hope overcomes the deepest despair, even when the outlook is most disheartening. It combines the practical with the sentimental affairs of business and home life and at the same time running through it is a vein of humor irresistible in its appeal. The characters are true to life, and the net result of their activities is that you should never acknowledge defeat while you have a breath to breathe.

CHAPTER I.

A Rich Man's Son.

OLD CYRUS MARTIN, the soap king, sat in his library in no very contented frame of mind. There was a thorn in his flesh, and he began to feel it more and more. It was not an agreeable sensation, a thorn in the flesh, for a soap king whose cuticle was not accustomed to it.

He traced it more or less vaguely to his meeting that morning with his old friend and rival in the soap business, John Clark. They had fallen in with each other, as often happened, at the Directors' club about lunch time and had one of their half friendly, half hostile chats together. And to make a long story short, Martin had bet Clark $30,000 that his son, Rodney Martin, would be making more money in a year's time than Clark's son Ellery. As neither boy had ever made a penny in his life, unless betting on a football game or winning a jackpot could be called making money, there was a fairly sporty flavor to the bargain.

The bits of business lore and anecdotes of sagacity and trade that Clark represented as coming from the precocious lips of the marvelous Ellery had finally goaded old Martin into fury. He at least knew that Rodney was a nincompoop in business, if he was his son; he had no illusions about that. But the comparisons had reached a point finally beyond which he would not let them proceed unchallenged, and so he had made his ridiculous wager and must abide by it. The prospect of turning over $30,000 to John Clark in a year's time and admitting Rodney's incompetence to boot was devilish.

What was the matter with rich men's sons anyway? thought Cyrus Martin. Rodney's father had not spoiled him, his father's conscience was clear on that point at least. Perhaps he had not spoiled him enough, his mother used to think so. Perhaps his mother, had she lived, with that nervous way she had of prodding people on, would have been of benefit when mere sternness had failed.

The boy had spent more money in college each year than the sum total of his father's and mother's expenses during the first childless years of their married life; not necessarily on fast living, his father was reasonably sure of that, but for luxuries and gewgaws at which young men in the old days would have turned up their noses. Rodney's father had not gone to college himself, though his parents could have sent him. He was not altogether a self made man. His own father, Rodney's grandfather, a country banker in Connecticut, had left him the heritage of a modest fortune and thrifty habits, and in the soap king's mind now these seemed more to be thankful for than half a dozen college professors and their snap courses. Yet there was nothing particular the matter with Rodney's inheritance and environment, there was just something lacking in the boy himself.

Compare Rodney, for instance, with young Rufus Plodman, son of old Elihu Plodman of the State Wire and Iron works. Rufus was one of the liveliest young men in the business world, married to a nice wife and with a family growing up already. His name was beginning to be mentioned more and more. Then there was Chauncey Brinkhurst, who took the burden of the Excelsior National bank almost entirely off old Brinkhurst's shoulders, and a good thing for the depositors too. There was even Will J. Robinson, Jr., of the Pine Hill Dye Works company, who had brought in orders that set the concern on its feet, there was good reason to believe, in just the nick of time. Compare all these and a good few others with his own young hopeful, and which name got the best of it?

The boy was attractive, too; his father had always liked him. Perhaps that was one of the chief troubles. Even as a little child he had never flown into tempers or had hateful ways. His own winning and noncombative disposition had been the chief means, no doubt, of warding off the disciplines of life. He was amiable and good looking in an unobtrusive way, and everybody liked him. To look at him impartially you would not have thought he lacked character, unless you yielded too much to your prejudice against a slight lisp and an otherwise somewhat finicky way of talking. He did not run into debt now, nor overdraw his allowance, or at any rate not very much; he had never done so much, and in college he had got fairly good marks, as nearly as his father could make out, and had won his degree of A. B. without too obvious difficulty. Didn't the precious sheepskin hang framed on the wall of his room, surrounded by a veritable picture gallery of college glee clubs and elevens and nines? Cyrus Martin had been credibly informed that you could not actually graduate from Harvard or Yale or Princeton without some portion of mentality. Where did it show itself in Rodney? As a boy he had had his flashes of cleverness and wit; what propensity had been revealed in them? Ransacking his memories, old Martin could not remember what they were; had they been merely the subjective readings of fond parents minds? Why was Rodney so different from old Clark's boy Ellery?

Well, perhaps Clark was a good deal of a bluffer in this instance. Martin must call the bluff and win out somehow in the matter of this bet, or his life would not be worth living.

He rang the bell sharply for Johnson, his butler, prepared to have a pretty sharp twinge of gout if the summons was not promptly answered?

"Any one call this afternoon, Johnson?" he asked, when that silent footed dignitary appeared.

Johnson took a silver tray from the table near the hall door and glanced downward at it stiffly.

"The Countess de Beaurien," he said impassively.

"Who's she?" asked Mr. Martin.

"I don't know, sir. She couldn't speak a word of anything but French.

Why Was Rodney So Different From Old Clark's Boy Ellery?

Marie was off today, sir, and nobody else could get anything out of her. She claims she had a letter of introduction to you from your Paris partner, M. Rivard."

"Has Rivard lost his mind?" muttered Martin. "Was she old or young or pretty or what?"

"I couldn't say, sir. You can't sometimes always tell with them French ladies, sir."

"A letter from Rivard?" muttered Martin. "I don't believe it. He's never given any one a letter to me without tipping me off. Johnson, hand me that fat red book in the lower right hand corner there."

Johnson did so, and Mr. Martin began turning over the leaves rapidly, observing:

"You know, Johnson, it's easier to read French than to speak it."

"So I understand, sir," returned the butler.

"Beauclair, Beauville—oh, here she is, Beaurien. No, she is not. A fake, Johnson, just as I supposed. The Countess de Beaurien is seventy years old, and at her death the title becomes extinct. Was the lady this afternoon as old as seventy, Johnson?"

"Oh, no, sir. Not at all, sir."

"Are you sure she asked for me and not Mr. Rodney?"

"Quite sure, sir. Miss Grayson was here, sir, and can tell you. We had a time of it."

"Some lady going into business to do America or the Americans," was Mr. Martin's inward comment. "Anybody else?" he added aloud.

"Yes, sir," said Johnson; "Mrs. Cheysemore. She left the blank for the Y. M. C. A. subscription."

"I hope you remember that I'm always out for her, Johnson."

Mr. Martin thought it really a little shameful how many times this pious lady came to see him.

"And who else? Give me that tray."

Mr. Martin took the salver and peered beneath the rims of his glasses at the bits of pasteboard. "Ambrose Peale," he read, "press representative 'Belle of of Broadway' company."

"Now who was that, Johnson?"

"He was calling on Mr. Rodney, sir," said Johnson. "He's been here several times, but never left his card before."

A press agent from a Broadway show after Rodney? The young man's father groaned inwardly. "Oh, Lord," he thought, "what next?" Visions of breach of promise, of blackbird dinners, or even elopements, flashed through his mind. This settled it. Rodney simply must be anchored somehow.

"Is Mr. Rodney in, Johnson?" was the next inquiry.

"No, sir. Not now, sir."

"Do you know where he is now?"

"From 1 to 2 he was at a downtown restaurant at lunch, sir. From 2:30 to 3 he was at the horse auction company looking at a new hunter, sir. From 4 to 5 he's at the Municipal club, sir."

"Good heavens, Johnson, how do you know all that?" exclaimed Mr. Martin.

"Because he left the telephone numbers, sir, and I was to let him know if Miss Grayson came in, sir."

"And has she been here, Miss Grayson?"

"Yes, sir; she's been here since 1 o'clock, sir, doing some typing. She's still waiting for you."

"Why the devil didn't you say so then?"

"I was coming to it presently, sir."

"Tell her to come in, then, to the library. And, Johnson, don't you bothe to ring up and tell Mr. Rodney anything, do you understand?"

"Yes, sir. Nothing, sir."

It was really faithless of Johnson, the soap king thought, to betray Rodney's well laid plans, but Rodney's father had plans of his own in frustrating them. Let that silly ass Johnson think what he had a mind to. He didn't want Mary Grayson for himself, and he didn't care if she was poor. She came of good stock—he had known her mother—and there could be many a worse fate for Rodney than being caught in her net. He was not sure, in point of fact, if the girl wasn't spreading her nets quietly. The old man was a shrewd judge of character, and there was an idea taking shape in the back of his mind that Mary Grayson might help him earn that $30,000.

Mary Grayson! Well, what made young men work? Love, sometimes, and poverty and necessity. The first might stir Rodney up, if not the second and third. But why not all three?

"She stoops to conquer," he muttered to himself. To tell the truth he had heard this phrase all his life without really taking in the meaning of it. Now he had seen the old farce comedy prettily played not long ago, and the hackneyed title of it had been ringing in his ears with rather a new meaning. Rodney might be made to stoop to be conquered—to conquer himself and his laziness of a rich man's son. On Mary Grayson's part it was not really stooping if you considered Rodney's mentality and character. He admitted it sourly. If Rodney could find an incentive in Mary Grayson, the stenographer, what did old man Martin care? He knew her for a good girl, as she was a pretty one, and nicer in speech and manners than some of the widows who made heavy eyes at him from the windows of their limousines. Lots of old fellows, he thought, might feel like making up to Mary themselves. And why not? Well, one reason for Cyrus Martin was that he had known her mother. Besides—

"Did you want me, Mr. Martin?" said Miss Grayson quietly, interrupting his reverie.

Miss Mary Grayson was as pretty as her name. Her big round eyes, that were too full of merry shrewdness to be merely doll-like, her dazzling teeth, her clear and rosy skin, her well bred figure and attractive way of dressing, made up a whole that old Martin never saw without some inward breathing of contentment. Old Martin looked up at her now with a sigh.

"Well, how are you today, Mistress Mary?" he said aloud.

"Very well indeed, thank you, Mr. Martin. I'm always well," said Miss Grayson. "Have you any letters for me today?"

They had got into the way for the last six weeks or so of having her come up to the house occasionally when Mr. Martin did not feel equal to going to the office.

"Yes, a few. But there's no hurry," he answered presently.

"Oh, by the way, Miss Grayson," he went on, "Johnson tells me you were here when that countess called this afternoon. What did you make of her?"

"Nothing, I'm sorry to say, Mr. Martin," replied Mary, laughing. "It was really too funny. I feel, as Johnson said, that my education has been neglected. 'I regret that I was not better educated, ma'am,' he said to me."

"It was really too funny."

Mary went on in imitation of Johnson's inimitable manner. "'Nothing like this has ever happened to me before, miss, but I can't make her comprehend anything I say. She just sit and waits.'"

"What was she like?" demanded Mr Martin, laughing too.

"Well, she was really rather fascinating," Mary began, taking her cue from this encouragement. "And stunning too. The French always are, don't you think? And she had on a duck of a dress. She walked straight in and looked straight at me and began to jabber like a streak of lightning. The French fairly flew out of her mouth. I told her it was impossible for her to see Mr. Martin—that he was confined to the house by a severe attack of gout and couldn't she leave her message?"

"And did she?"

"Well, her message sounded something like this: 'Jedesireparleramonsieurmartinapropossdes AFFAIRES. Je suisrichemaisonpeuttoujoursetre plus riche. Sijepouvaisobtenirlecagent celus avonmartinpourlafrancecesacalumeceib AFFAIRE. Jedonneralcinquantemille francspour cetteAGGENCE. * * * *"

Mr. Martin's mouth fell open with amused astonishment during this tirade. He had once met a young woman who could make a noise like Sarah Bernhardt without knowing more than half a dozen words of French. But Mary Grayson beat her.

"Well, well," laughed Mr. Martin "it's a wonderful language, French."

"Isn't it," said Mary. "So finally we tried signs and pantomime. I made a wild, sweeping gesture at her to show that you were out. She rattled on worse than before. Then I pretended Johnson was you, Mr. Martin, and I shoved him out of the door and shrieked 'out!' Sometimes if you talk loud enough it seems as if they might understand you, but this one didn't. And then she began to act at Johnson and me too. She evidently wanted to know when you'd be back, whereupon I ran over to the clock and pointed violently to the figure 8.

"I told Johnson never to let her in again unless Marie was here to interpret her," said Mary in conclusion.

"Quite right," said Mr. Martin. "By the way," he added, eying his pretty secretary shrewdly, "do you think she was after Rodney? Was she young enough for that?"

"Some women are never too old for that, are they, Mr. Martin?" she said coolly.

He glanced at her furtively a moment, as she patted back her hair, looking pleasantly at the crackling fire. There had been a time in those early days, when she had first come to him, to try her hand at a secretaryship, when she had reminded him alternately of her two parents. It was in loyalty to one of them that he had given her a chance. Sometimes, in a flash, there would be a curiously vivid suggestion of her mother in her—something in the way she raised her head and looked at him, a sound in the tone of her voice as she said good morning. Such moments, for a long time, gave old Martin a sharp pang that he could not ignore even in his inmost heart. Then there was that even sharper twinge, and a curiously less pleasant one, when she reminded him of her father. He had been a handsome dog in his day, Rob Grayson—there was no denying that.

An idea was taking shape in Mr. Martin's brain pan; if only he could put it over.

FASHIONABLE MODEL FOR THE YOUNG GIRL.

No. 9037.

The selection of a dress that is up-to-the-minute, yet that is not so extreme or unusual that it will be in bad taste in a short while is a problem with which many young ladies contend. It is very satisfactorily answered by the selection of Ladies' Home Journal Pattern, No. 9037, the distinguishing feature of this being a sleeve bolero, now in such good taste. There is also a foundation waist, with flowing sleeves and a one-piece gathered skirt, finished with a deep hem and tuck. The pattern cuts in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years, size 18 requiring, if made of one material, 8¼ yards 36-inch goods, and 10¾ yards ruching.

Patterns can be obtained at the store of A. E. Force & Co.

BILLY JOH, REFEREE, DECLARES NEITHER FIGHTER COULD BE GIVEN THE VERDICT

Mike Gibbons (top) and Packey McFarland.

Following up its principle of furnishing first-hand and detailed information concerning all sport events the Plainfield Daily Press kept a throng of 500 fight enthusiasts posted on each move in the Packey McFarland-Mike Gibbons bout in the Brighton Beach arena Saturday night, the frames being described punch by punch through a megaphone a few seconds after the action took place in the ringside. This was made possible by the telegraph service furnished this paper and in order to ascertain the various versions of the scrap the Associated Press was commandeered with. This verdict, giving the bout to Gibbons on points, was announced several minutes before the telegraph decision, and many of the favorites of the supposed victor left North avenue in a satisfied frame of mind. When the telegraph verdict came, however, it gave the fight to McFarland, thus causing a conflict and considerable criticism in sport circles.

Yesterday Billy Joh, the referee of the fight, stated that in his opinion the bout was a draw, but could not give any official decision owing to the New York State boxing law, providing for no-decision fights.

The decision of the referee was all that was needed to complete the satisfaction of those who considered that the bout was an up and up affair, and that both boys tried all they knew to master each other, the attitude of the Secretary of the Boxing Commission to the contrary notwthstanding. It established a precedent that could not in the slightest way be taken advantage of by any unscrupulous persons who might want to tempt a referee to swerve from the straight and narrow way under pressing circumstances.

According to the figures given out yesterday afternoon at the Brighton Beach office of the Ocean Athletic Club, there were 26,092 persons at the fight, with 24,845 paid admissions. The total gate receipts as given out at the clubs' office amounted to $58,369. This is in striking contrast to the statement issued on Friday over the signature of the Ocean Athletic Club to the effect that the advance sale of tickets amounted to $50,000 on Thursday night. The official figures as issued yesterday showed that there were 4,437 who paid $5; 5,450 who paid $3; 4,576 who paid $2, and 10,382 who paid $1 each. The bleachers, which surround the big inclosure and are built up on the outer edge of the motorcycle track, seat 5,500. These were supposed to be the bleacher seats at $1 each, nevertheless the official figures assert that there were 10,382 such tickets sold.

BY MIKE GIBBONS.

Do I think I won? I most certainly do. I think that "Packey" is the best man I have ever fought and a thorough sportsman. I thought that I had McFarland on the go several times, but he weathered the storm I attempted to create in good shape. The heat from the arc lights bothered me considerably and made my head feel giddy at times, otherwise I was in good shape throughout. Yes, McFarland made me miss many times, but he is so clever that he'd make anyone miss. I am going to take the $15,000 I got out of this bout and invest it in good farming land in Minnesota. I will leave this afternoon for my home town in St. Paul and then spend the next three weeks duck shooting, which is my favorite sport.

BY PACKEY McFARLAND.

I think that I won. I think that Gibbons had the better of but two of the ten rounds. He was certainly the hardest man I have ever fought. His best blows were those which reached my body, as blows to the face and jaw were ineffective. Yes, I will continue in the boxing game if I can get the money for a bout which I think I'm entitled to. Just at present I am arranging to go back to Chicago and arrange for the purchase of a business, in which I will invest $90,000. I am very well pleased with the reception accorded me by my friends here, and hope that I may get another chance to box before them. My wife, who has never seen me in a boxing bout, has much to do with what I may do in the future.

ROBBIE SAYS BROOKLYNS WILL WIN THE PENNANT

Although many close baseball observers are inclined to believe that the Western trip will dash the Robins' pennant hopes to a hundred different pieces, there is one person who is ready to dispute any such argument. This is Wilbert Robinson, the robust, jolly, good-natured and well-liked leader of the Brooklyn team.

Robbie, or as he is often called by his Brooklyn admirers, "Your Uncle Wilbert," is confident that his team will land the National League flag, but believes that the race will not be decided until the final series between the Robins and Pat Moran's Phillies in Philadelphia on the last three days of the season.

PLAINFIELD HIGH'S FOE LOSES ITS STAR PLAYERS

Coach Walter E. Short and Captain Edwin Durand, of the Rahway High School, issued the initial call for football candidates Friday afternoon. About twenty-five boys responded and a short drill was held on Riverside Park preliminary to regular practice, which begins this week. With the loss of practically all of last year's stars through graduation and confronting one of the most difficult schedules in the history of the school, the coach of the Red and Black admits that it will take considerable effort to turn out a winning eleven. Mr. Short will endeavor to develop a light, fast team, as not one of the candidates for the eleven weighs more than 150 pounds, and the average is 135 pounds.

Among last year's stars lost by graduation are Alfred Brooks, Arthur Armstrong and Elmer Armstrong, who enter Blair Academy this fall; Fay Rossell, who migrates to Rutgers, and Samuel Dubow, who has moved on to Cornell. Other losses are George Schweitzer, who died several weeks ago; Bruce MacWhinney, Oscar Garthwaite and Edmund Bartlett. The only veterans remaining are Edwin Durand, Leonard Mantlo, Stewart Terrill and John Morris. Among the new candidates who loom up particularly promising are John Reitemeyers, E. Conover, C. McLoughlin, A. Hertz, J. Nelson, W. Rossell, G. Mantlo, R. Cross, R. Ludlow, E. Casey and R. Lukens.

The Rahway boys are not in the least discouraged by the unfavorable outlook, but intend to work hard to place the red and black colors on top in the scholastic world again this fall.

Manager Clifford Wooster has completed a schedule which provides for a game with Plainfield High School at Rahway, November 20.

PLAINFIELD ELKS OFF FOR REUNION

Train of Seven Cars Carries Women and Friends to Shore.

MAKE PARADE PLANS

Women to Ride on Motor Truck With Life-size Elk as Mascot—Newark Will Probably Get 1916 Convention.

Accompanied by their wives and other feminine friends, one hundred members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., left this morning for Atlantic City to be present at the second annual reunion and parade of the New Jersey Elks' Association, which will be held at the shore resort today. The vanguard of local Elks, numbering about twenty-five, left in automobiles Sunday afternoon and evening and will meet their fellow lodge members at the resort.

A train of seven vestibuled cars was provided for transporting the delegates from Plainfield, Somerville, Bound Brook, Westfield and Cranford to the reunion, and the special train was in charge of a committee from the local lodge, headed by Chauncey Stout. John P. Wessner, John H. Cose and Lewis A. Bellis are the official delegates from the local lodge to the gathering, and Mr. Stout was assisted in making preparations for the trip by George Pope, Dr. Chalmers L. Crist, John H. Cose and Lewis A. Bellis.

When the delegates arrive at the shore they will start immediately to make arrangements for their float in the parade. The life-size elk belonging to the lodge has been shipped to the shore and will be mounted on an elaborately decorated automobile truck. Twenty women friends of the lodge, including the committee in charge of the euchre held recently to raise funds for the purchase of a banner, will ride on the float dressed in white gowns. Each member has been provided with a bamboo cane and royal blue hatband and wears a Palm Beach uniform. Returning, the delegates will leave the resort about 10 o'clock tonight and will probably arrive in Plainfield about 1 o'clock. The train is in charge of William N. Dunham, a member of the Plainfield Elks.

Newark's request to have the 1916 reunion held in that city in connection with the 250th aniversary celebration next fall was assured last night, when Paterson, the principal contender for the honor, withdrew in the face of strong arguments brought out by Newark "boosters."

Last night the Plainfielders at Atlantic City attended the ball on the Million Dollar Pier arranged by the business men of Atlantic City for the advance delegation. Atlantic City Elks will lead today's parade with a representation of 400, and it is expected that all of the thirty-nine lodges in the State will have marchers.

The city is elaborately decorated, the purple and white of the Elks mingling with the national colors on business houses and national buildings.

BUSINESS MEN'S CONTEST WINNER BEING CONSIDERED

Competition for the $5 prize offered by the Business Men's Association for the best emblem has closed and the judges will announce the successful contestant within a few days. The emblem is for use on stationery, store windows, etc., and will be the official trade mark of the organization.

Numerous suggestions and sketches were filed with the committee in charge and considerable interest has been manifested over the outcome.

MISS MEANEY AN AUTUMN BRIDE

Will Become the Wife of J. P. Lynch in St. Joseph's Church Today.

FR. HART TO OFFICIATE

Miss Helen Meaney, Sister of the Bride, and J. M. Cullen, to Be the Attendants—Reception to Follow the Ceremony.

One of the prettiest of autumn weddings will be celebrated at 5 o'clock this afternoon in St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, when Miss Nora Marion Meaney, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Meaney, of 221 Watchung avenue, will become the bride of James P. Lynch, son of Mrs. Catherine Lynch, of 683 West Fourth street. The ceremony will be performed by Father Peter J. Hart, pastor of the church, assisted by the Rev. Bernard M. Bogan and Rev. John A. MacDonald, of St. Mary's church, Plainfield, and Father Delehanty, of Boonton.

The church has been attractively decorated for the event, the Sisters of Mercy having charge of the flower arrangement. Palms, ferns and cut flowers are used in lavish numbers.

Miss Meaney will enter the church with her father, who will give her away. She will be met at the altar by the bridegroom. Miss Helen Meaney, a sister of the bride, will be bridesmaid, while James M. Cullen will be best man. Miss Mary O'Connor, organist of the church, will play the wedding march.

The bride will wear a charming gown of white taffeta, trimmed with white chiffon and a picture hat of white taffeta and chiffon flowers. She will carry a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid will wear a gown of white crepe de chine trimmed with yellow chiffon and blue satin and a black velvet hat. She will carry an armful of yellow roses. Messrs. J. Francis Meaney, a brother of the bride, and John Doyle will be the ushers.

A reception will follow at the home of the bride's parents, which will be attended by the immediate relatives of the contracting parties. The home has been attractively decorated in yellow and white, asters being the principle flower of decoration. In the parlor an exquisite arch of palms has been erected under which the couple will receive the congratulations of their friends. Late this evening the couple will leave for a three weeks' tour of the west. They will visit both expositions and several cities in California. Upon their return they will live at the New Madison and will be at home to their friends after November 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Lynch are well known in this city and the borough being seen frequently at all the functions of the younger set in both municipalities. Mrs. Lynch was graduated from the North Plainfield High School with the class of 1915 and prior to her removal to the borough was a student at the city High School. Mr. Lynch holds a position with the D. L. & W. Railroad, and is a popular member of the Second Night Club, the Knights of Columbus and the Yea Bo Club.

ACCIDENT TO LOCAL AUTO CARRYING ELK DELEGATES

An automobile owned and driven by Hyman Adelberg, of this city, met with an accident near Red Bank, Sunday night, and was forced to lay over until yesterday for repairs. Mr. Adelberg left Sunday afternoon for the Elks' reunion at Atlantic City, taking with him in his car Chief of Police Kiely, Richard McCulloagh and Assistant Fire Chief Andrew Jennings.

The party were just outside of Red Bank when one of the rear springs broke and Mr. Adelberg was forced to take his car to a garage, where temporary repairs were made. The party arrived in Atlantic City yesterday afternoon and met the other Plainfielders there today.

SERVICE REFUSED.

According to a finding of the Public Utility Commissioners, the Public Service Gas Company will not be compelled to provide Mrs. E. M. Pierson, of Metuchen, with gas. It was brought out during the hearing that the applicant's husband had had trouble with the Metuchen Gas Light Company over a bill and service was discontinued. Mrs. Pierson then made application for service on the grounds that she was not the customer involved in the trouble.

Authorization for proceeding with the erection of the Boy Scout building in Terrill road, at a cost not to exceed $300, and approval of the report of Paul R. Collier, chairman of the demonstration day committee, on program, were the principal features of last night's meeting of the Boy Scout Council. President William N. Runyon was in the chair, and other present were Dr. George T. Moore, secretary; Councilmen T. A. Davis, L. M. Leek, Paul R. Collier, O. W. Smith, F. M. Genung, Deputy Commissioners A. V. Searing, Jr., E. A. Sprowl and F. E. Bach; Scoutmasters Benjamin Harris, Cedric Ostrom, Ernest K. Powlison, Joseph A. Garner, and the commissioner, Allen E. Beals.

The treasurer, Dr. Moore, reported that there was $245 on deposit account, the Boy Scout building fund. The lowest figure obtained for the construction of the proposed Boy Scout headquarters was from Councilman Alexander Milne, who promised to put up the building at cost. Deputy Commissioner Searing, reporting for Mr. Milne, said that the amount of money available would just about construct the main building and the fireplace, but it would still leave the interior of the building uncompleted, as far as ceiling and furnishing were concerned. BADLY INJURED, BUT INSISTS ON WALKING Jersey City Man Hit by Train at Bound Brook Brought to Hospital.

In attempting to cross the Central Railroad tracks at Bound Brook shortly after 9 o'clock last night, Edward Davis, aged 25, was struck by a west-bound locomotive and badly injured. He was placed aboard a train and during the trip to Plainfield revived sufficiently to sit up. The hospital was notified of the accident and the ambulance was in waiting at the North Avenue depot.

He insisted on walking from the train to the depot, but while receiving temporary treatment from Dr. Albert Fittis in the station he collapsed. He was then hurried to the hospital but en route to that institution he again regained consciousness. He insisted on walking from the ambulance to the hospital ward and it required the combined efforts of the two men on the ambulance to prevent him from doing so.

After being received at the institution he grew worse and his condition became serious during the night. While the doctors in charge have as yet been unable to take an X-ray examintion it is believed that some bones are broken and that the man is suffering internal injuries. This morning the man said he had been working at Pine Brook and was walking to Jersey City when the accident happened.

AUTO AMBULANCE NOW IN SERVICE

Handsome Car, Gift of Mrs. Samuel Milliken, Valuable Acquisition to Hospital.

An automobile ambulance of the latest type, fully equipped with all conveniences, was added to the service of Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday. The ambulance, which is the gift of Mrs. Samuel Milliken, of Central avenue, to the hospital, arrived yesterday afternoon, and after a short trip about the city, affording Plainfielders an opportunity to see the fine car, it was immediately put into service. It will be kept in a garage which has just been erected on the hospital grounds.

The ambulance, which was made by G. C. Graves, of Rahway, is mounted on a Stewart chassis. It is capable of reaching a speed of forty five miles an hour. The car is equipped with an air-cushion bed, full size, while there is also an arrangement for another bed, making it possible to carry two patients.

Among the other conveniences are to be found a seat for the hospital physician, who will in the future go out with the ambulance on all calls, and there is also a chest with provision for ice water and other necessities, while in cold weather provision is made to heat the ambulance through the exhaust from the engine. The interior is also equipped with an electric lighting system.

One change that will be welcome to everyone interested is the abolishment of the familiar gong, which has always been a dread to persons being carried in the ambulance. In its place is a Claxton horn. The new car is much longer than the old one, thereby giving greater capacity. It is highly polished and on either side are the words "Muhlenberg Hospital." Walter Emmons, of this city, has been engaged to drive the machine.

The ambulance complete cost $2,200, and it was built according to plans and specifications drawn by a committee from the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, comprising John M. Whiton, J. W. DeGraff and Herman Schwed. It is now proposed to store the old ambulance at the Plainfield Cab Company stables to be used in case of emergency. D. Fred Carpenter, of Union street, is the agent through whom the new car was purchased.

EAST END PARENTS HOLD AN INDIGNATION MEETING

Complaining that the local Board of Education had unnecessarily delayed action with respect to providing adequate school accommodations, a number of prominent East End residents held an indignation meeting in the Netherwood Reformed church, last night, at which time the entire case was discussed and Edward W. Hughes and the Rev. Edward S. Ralston were named as a committee to consult with the Board. It was the opinion of the meeting that the prospect of short sessions, congested class-rooms, and irregular hours should be remedied before the school term got too far under-way.

The East End parents take particular objection to having their children going and coming from school at all hours of the day, it being necessary in some schools to divide the schedule into two parts. Resolutions for presentation to the Board were adopted and signed by all present.

OFFICIAL ATTENDANCE FIGURES IN THE BORO

According to an official statement made public last night the attendance figures for the borough public school system are as follows: Somerset street building, kindergarten, 65, grades, 487; high school, 199; Harrison avenue school, 180; Watchung School, 172. The Harrison avenue school is not yet ready for occupancy and the pupils eligible for attendance to that institution are being cared for temporarily in the Watchung School.

The above figures are for the first day's enrollment and it is probable that they will get a big boost when today's returns are submitted. The totals are about normal in each instance and indicate that the opening of the Harrison avenue building will be welcomed by both teacher and pupil in relieving congestion.

Perfect Storage Facilities.

Why not store your car in a garage handy to the station? You can make arrangements to have your car at a certain place at the curb to meet your train, or you can have a place in our garage that you can get out of very easily. Stryker Motor Car Co., 149 East Fourth street.—Adv.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS TEACHING CORPS

Plans Made for Big Registration in This City Today.

IMPORTANT CHANGES

New Principals for Washington and Stillman Schools—Men Replace Women as Heads—Study Schedules Completed.

The Plainfield public schools opened today, and an unusually large registration was made in the High School and grades. Several important changes have been made in the teaching staff. Miss Anna M. Day, who was retired after last season's session, has been replaced by D. Ralph Starry, while Frederick W. Cook has taken the place of Miss Millicent M. Humpston, who was retired frmo the Washington School. In place of Charles R. Bostwick, former manual training instructor of the local public schools, Arthur F. Hopper has been engaged.

Enrollment in the Plainfield High School for the term will compare favorably with that of last year. When classes were called this morning 776 pupils were in their seats and ready for work. Not all who will attend were able to report on the first day and those in charge believe that the total for the year will reach 800.

BOROUGH'S 1915 TAX RATE WILL BE $2.54

Mayor Robert Clark, Jr., Officially Announces the Figures Today.

The tax rate in the borough for 1915 is $2.54 on each $100 of assessed valuation as against $2.36 last year. The figures were made public this morning by Mayor Clark after a conference with the assessor, Dr. J. H. Cooley. The increase in the tax rate over last year is 18 cents.

That taxes will be much higher in the borough is a foregone conclusion, because while the tax rate has climbed, the assessed valuations have increased very little. The increase is $12,700, a very insignificant increase in a municipality of that size, but it proves that little new building has been done in North Plainfield for a year at least. It is probable that nearly all of the increase in valuation is due to house improvements made during the year, and the ownership of automobiles, which are taxed as personal property. Last year's net assessed valuation was $4,565,650, for 1915 it is $4,578,350.

The 18-cent increase is made up of a 4-cent increase in the county tax, a 12-cent increase in the borough tax, and a 2-cent increase in the special school tax. For 1914 the figures were as follows: County tax, 56 points; school tax, 26; borough tax, 72, and special school tax, 82.

For 1915 they are: County tax, 60 points; school tax, 26; borough tax, 84, and special school tax, 84.

CHARGES EMPLOYE WITH THEFT OF DIAMOND RING

Somerville, Sept. 14.—Upon the complaint of Charles Geroffky, proprietor of the Regent Theatre in this place, Justice David Kitchen yesterday issued a warrant for the arrest of Edward Blancke, who was formerly employed as a piano player at the theatre, charging him with the theft of a diamond ring valued at $65. The complainant alleges that the ring was taken from a cash drawer. Blancke, it is said, has disappeared and is believed to be in New York. Efforts will be made to arrest him today.

Meyers was instructed to appear before Judge DeMeza in the city court tomorrow morning.

KEPPLER CONFERS AT HALL FACTORY

Vice-President of International Machinists' Union Meets Officials.

COMPLETES ADJUSTING

Hugh Riley Accompanies Him to Plainfield to Settle Outstanding Differences—Both Representatives Laud Local Concerns.

For the purpose of effecting a final settlement between the local machinists' union and factory heads in Plainfield, Jacob J. Keppler, vice-president of the International Machinists' Union, and Hugh Riley, business agent of District No. 47 spent yesterday afternoon in conference with certain local factory heads and had an encouraging report to make upon the completion of their work. The visit was made primarily for the purpose of adjusting differences between the Haail Printing Press Company, of Dunellen, and its employes, which have existed since the eight-hour day campaign here early in August.

Messrs. Keppler and Riley called upon the Hall management yesterday and were assured that the wage schedule demanded by the men would be provided and that the eight-hour day plan would be maintained. A visit to the other printing press plants in Plainfield revealed the fact that all of the concerns had introduced the eight-hour day. At the plants of the Spicer Manufacturing Company, at South Plainfield, and the Vitapnone Company, in Netherwood, it was found that the eight-hour day schedule had not been started. Both concerns assured the labor representatives that the demand would be met prior to October 1. As both are reputable companies the assurances of the officials were accepted.

Asked if the labor differences in Plainfield had been entirely settled, Mr. Keppler said: "As far as we have been able to learn everything is now adjusted in a way entirely satisfactory to ourselves. The eight-hour day demand has met with a general response and many mechanics have also been given a raise in pay. Of course, in Plainfield as well as in Bridgeport and other places, there is that element that is never satisfied and they will continue to grumble no matter how much conditions are bettered.

"Plainfield is a workingman's town and I have been impressed with its advantages during my visits here. In my estimation it is an ideal place for a mechanic to bring his family to and the fact that the factory heads co-operated with us during our recent campaign will do much toward booming the city's interests. The fact that the impending trouble was settled without a general strike being called speaks well for the relation bewteen the employer and employe and assures the prospective settler that Plainfield is not a trouble center where the workingman will be prosecuted."

Mr. Riley said: "I believe that we made our demand at the proper moment. The factories were well supplied with rush-orders and they had to have men to fill them. In fact a more appropriate time could not have been selected. Our representatives have met with courteous treatment from almost every quarter and I am gratified over the result. I anticipate no further trouble and am confident that all of the differences have been satisfactorily adjusted and that a state of harmony exists."

Asked about the Bridgeport trouble Mr. Keppler said that the strike was not entirely settled. He intimated that trouble would be experienced in making the Columbia Graphophone Company meet the shorter day and higher pay demands.

COUNCIL IN CONFERENCE ON CIVIL SERVICE PLANS

With a view to discussing the advisability of introducing a municipal civil service system in Plainfield, members of the Common Council met with Mayor Leighton Calkins last night and took up the matter from various points as presented by the Civil Service Reform Association. While the merit of the system found ready indorsement among the councilmen it was the general opinion that at this time it would not be expedient to introduce the changes and subsequently no action was taken.

In speaking of the conference this morning Mayor Calkins said that it was held merely to conform with a request made by the Reform Association. While he admitted that the Civil Service idea was a good one he expressed himself as being personally of the opinion that it would not work out to its best advantage at this time.

Premier Asquith Is Silent.

London, Sept. 14.—When Parliament reconvened today efforts were made to obtain from the Government a statement as to its attitude towards conscription. They failed. When Premier Asquith was asked what position the Government would take in regard to compulsory enlistment he replied:

The Premier, in making a statement on the Government's program, said that on Wednesday he would move a State credit and make a general statement on the situation.

German Rush Weak, Says Russia.

Petrograd, Sept. 14. Though the War Office admits that the Germans have cut the railway between Dvinsk and Vilna, the Petrograd military experts assert that present conditions agur well for the success of the Russians.

"The German rush has weakened greatly," says the Bourse Gazette expert. "The enemy is losing his strength. We are gaining in power. The heavy rains that are now falling will prove an enormous handicap for the enemy. The Russian troops on their retreat through the swamps destroyed all roads. Before the Germans can get through they must rebuild these, then they will find our troops waiting for them at the edges. They will be unable to use artillery which has played so great a part in their victories."

French Airmen Are Active.

Paris, Sept. 14.—French aviators on the southern end of the battle front are keeping up their offensive against the Germans. The important Germany railway point of Bensdorf has been bombarded. The Germans' cantonments at Chatel in the Argonne forests have also been shelled from the air. The latest attacks by French airmen were officially announced today by the French War Office. Bensdorf lies 28 miles southeast of Metz in Lorraine. Chatel lies west of Apremont and northeast of Binarville. There was a violent artillery action throughout the whole of last night at various points on the front, the War Office reported.

G. A. R. VETERANS TO ATTEND CONFERENCE

Experts Will Discuss National Defense at Convention in Washington.

Washington, D. C. Sept., 14.—Plans for the Conference on National Defense, which will be held under the auspices of the National Defense League in Washington, October 4-7, immediately following the Grand Army of the Republic Encampment, are rapidly being completed. The Navy League and the National Rifle Association are co-operating with the National Defense League in the conference. Representative Julius Kahn, of Cal., chairman, and Senator Robert F. Broussard, of La., vice-chairman, of the National Defense League, will preside at the sessions of the conference, which will last four days and at which will speak the most prominent men of the United States.

The Conference on National Defense probably will be the greatest convention ever held in Washington. Thousands of the Grand Army veterans have notified the League that they will remain in Washington to attend the conference, after the G. A. R. encampment ends. A very large number of Congressmen, members of State legislatures, mayors of cities, and others have signified their intention of being present at the conference.

It is expected that this conference will focus the eyes of the whole country on the preparedness for National defense agitation, and will have an important effect on the action of Congress at its next session for adequate defense measures.

Women are going to take a prominent part in the deliberations of the conference. Many have written the National Defense League they will attend the conference.

From thousands of letters received by the National Defense League it is shown that in every section of the country there is a strong sentiment for preparation for National Defense. Many of the writers say they will attend the conference.

A citizens committee of 500 prominent Washingtonians has been appointed to care for the local arrangements for the conference, and the press committee includes practically the whole membership of the Congressional Press Gallery.

President Wilson, former Presidents Taft and Roosevelt, and many other prominent men have been invited to speak at the conference.

WARREN TOWNLEY ELECTED PRESIDENT

North Plainfield High School's Athletic Association Holds First Session.

The North Plainfield High School Athletic Association held its first meeting of the year this morning, primarily for the election of officers. Following the custom, Warren Townley, '16, vice-president last year, was chosen president. Alfred Willett, '17, will fulfil the duties of vice-president, while Martin McDonough was elected secretary, with Harry Kirch as treasurer. Little business was transacted, a meeting for this purpose being called for the latter part of the week.

The A. A. will depart from its custom and hold the annual play in the fall term. This will allow those who participate in athletics to enter the dramatic line, as the lessons in the fall will be easier to cope with than they are in the spring.

A play committee will be appointed by the president at the next meeting which will select a cast and coach, so rehearsing may commence as soon as possible.

The suits, with their comfortably wide skirts and sensible jackets, are more becoming than the suits of past seasons. Many of the new separate coats are in Redingote styles, from three-quarter to full length.

Our display of Women's Apparel Fashions grows more interesting from day to day. New garments are added daily and the assortment is thus kept right up-to-the-minute and shows that Tepper's is always ahead of others.

BOROUGH ROADS ARE CRITICIZED

North Plainfield Township Improvement Society Also Hears Talk on Suffrage.

At the regular monthly meeting of the North Plainfield Township Improvement society, held in its headquarters at Watchung last night, matters pertaining to the roads leading into the township from the borough of North Plainfield were taken up.

Attention was called to the condition of Somerset street. It was pointed out that its condition was a great contrast to the well-kept roads of Plainfield, and as many residents of Watchung travel over the road daily, it was voted to make a protest to the borough authorities, with a view to bringing about an improvement in its condition.

The committee in charge of the Watchung avenue extension reported little progress, as several of its members have been away. It was said that the committee would recume work on this important matter very soon.

After the business session an entertaining talk was given by Mrs. E. F. Feickert on certain alleged unjust laws on the statute books and the ways to remedy them. Following the talk refreshments were served by the women. There was a good attendance. President Francis E. Bodin presided.

PLANNING FALL WORK.

The members of the Park Avenue Baptist church got together last evening for an informal discussion of the religious work of the church for the fall and winter and also to hear a report from the pastor, the Rev. Dr. B. S. Hudson, about Charles Taylor, the "boy preacher," who is expected to fill an engagement at that church soon. Dr. Hudson was unable to give any definite information about Mr. Taylor, and the meeting adjourned to meet later in the week for a continuance of the same business.

ROYCROFT WARE IN A NEW HOME

Elbert Hubbard II. Invades Department Store Field.

SELECTS LORD & TAYLOR

Will Now Be the Sole Agents for East Aurora Products.

The most important change in the commercial policy of the Roycrofters since the death of Elbert and Alice Hubbard on the Lusitania was announced to-day, following a series of conferences between representatives of the craftmen's guild of East Aurora and of Lord & Taylor, the Fifth avenue department store. Since the founding of the Roycrofters colony more than twenty years ago, all their products have been distributed direct to consumers, either by mail or over the counters of their shops. Under the new plan the Lord & Taylor store is made the sole distributor for the Roycroft wares in this city, and for the present, at least, the only agency of the kind in the country.

Elbert Hubbard II., the son of the founder of the colony, is now the executive head of the entire Roycroft organization, and it is understood that the new plan of distribution is in accordance with the wishes of his father, who desired to bring the art of East Aurora closer to the public by extending and improving the sales system. The fact that Lord & Taylor have been retail distributors for the highest grade of works of art for almost ninety years and only last year moved their stock into one of the most modern department store buildings in the world at Fifth avenue and Thirty-eighth street, is said to have been an important factor in the selection of the firm as the metropolitan distributor.

The first consignment from East Aurora, which arrived yesterday, shows a strong tendency on the part of the craftsman to popularize their products, though without sacrificing their ideals. All the work is hand-made, but in addition to the books of crushed levant, hand-illumined on parchment, and the costly carved furniture and wrought bronze, there are scores of smaller articles in wood, metal and leather, designed to compete on even financial terms with machine-made output of other dealers.

Baseballs and basketballs, bookends and paper cutters, card cases and smokers' articles, handbags, desk furnishings, candle sticks, and decorated goatskins are among the novelties. Lord & Taylor have set aside one section of the store for Roycroft wares exclusively, and have endeavored to surround that section with the true East Aurora atmosphere. The idea is to familiarize the public with the methods of the Roycroft guild and to heighten the metropolitan appreciation of art in common things. The same welcome is given the student who comes merely to view the products as is accorded the obvious purchaser. The Roycroft section is expected to prove of special interest to the students and teachers of the manual training schools of the city, where similar work is being done on an elementary scale.

The Roycroft community covers an area of more than a thousand acres in East Aurora, Erie County. The scheme of control is co-operative, and the aim of the organizers was to abolish poverty and wealth as well in that village. The craftsmen are potters, blacksmiths, bookbinders, wood-workers, stone-cutters, farmers, and anything else that may be in demand. The increase in the number of the workers in recent years and the restricted system of distribution prompted the arrangement with Lord & Taylor to make the products of the shops more accessible to the people.

REV. DR. ANDERSON NOT COMING HERE

Another Evangelist Will Have to Be Secured for Next Year's Revival.

The Rev. Dr. George Woods Anderson, the evangelist, cannot come to Plainfield in April to take charge of the evangelistic meetings after all, and another leader will have to be chosen. Word to that effect was made known by the committee of ministers and laymen that met in the Y. M. C. A. building last night. A committee of five was straightway appointed to secure the services of another evangelist.

It was a disappointment to the committee to learn that Dr. Anderson could not come here, but he is in such demand, apparently, that there is no chance for Plainfield. He will conduct a campaign for soul saving in Bridgeton, this State, during the period he was expected here.

The reason given for this change was that Dr. Anderson's manager had mixed up his dates. He had been invited to conduct services in Passaic, Bridgeton and Plainfield all at the same time next April. He did not give the local committee that invited him here any positive answer at first, agreeing to take the matter under consideration, and stating that he had these other two invitations. When his answer was delayed the committee wrote requesting positive information so that the necessary plans could be started here, and the reply came back that Dr. Anderson had decided in favor of Bridgeton.

The committee appointed to secure another evangelist is composed of George M. Rittenhouse, the Rev. Frank Fletcher, the Rev. E. C. Conover, John H. Maning and A. C. Estes. This committee will report at an early date.

Miss Marguerite Kress, of Brooklyn, has returned home after summering with her cousin, Miss Francis Newman, of Duer street, the borough.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR FATHER MILLER

Father B. M. Bogan, of St. Mary's Church, Preaches Impressive Sermon.

An impressive service was held in St. Joseph's church this morning at 10:30 o'clock, the occasion being the memorial mass for the late Rev. William H. Miller, pastor of the borough church for twenty-seven years, who died one year ago today, after a lingering illness. The beautiful edifice at Watchung and Jackson avenues, which will be a lasting monument to the zeal and work of the beloved priest, was thronged with his old parishioners and friends from near and far, who came to join in the service. Rev. Father Bernard M. Bogan, pastor of St. Mary's church, Plainfield, preached the sermon. Rev. Father John A. Baldwin, chaplain of Mt. St. Mary College, was the celebrant; Rev. Father Devine, of New Brunswick, the deacon, and Rev. Father Lionus Schwartz, of New Brunswick, the sub-deacon. Beside those mentioned, a large number of priests, friends of the dead man, attended the service.

A special musical program was arranged and in charge of J. R. Bailey. A duet was sung by Mrs. Alfred Seifert and Alfred Laporte.

Taking his text words from the third chapter of the Book of Wisdom, "But the soul of the just are in the hands of God, and the torment of death shall not touch them," Rev. Father Bogan said, in part:

"The sad duty has been put upon me and the privilege as well, to recall the fleeting memory of your pastor and your friend. More eloquent, however, than any words of mine was the simple, unobtrusive life of Father Miller. For you who knew him better than I, whose eternal as well as whose temporal interests were ever dear to him, no eulogy is needed. Upon the tablets of your loyal hearts the passing years—quiet witness of his love for you—have written indelibly the story of his faithfulness. You ever found him fearless in the discharge of his duties, yet ever congenial in his social life among you, and, old beyond his years, he long found the elders of his flock waiting upon the wisdom of his advice. In the long years of his faithful pastorate, time wrought many changes. The infants baptized by him found him waiting as the hurrying years slipped by to lead them to their first communion, the Banquet of Angels, and to prepare them later on for the administration of the Sacrament of Confirmation against the day of test and danger so soon to dawn upon them. All this but strengthened his zeal, though the toll was paid in his lessened physical energy. Among the few whose dire distress and the many whose passing anxieties it was his privilege to alleviate the records of his open-handed generosity are where other eyes that ours can read it. This innocence and penitence, poverty and pain found in Father Miller a consolation to his bishop and a model to his fellow priests.

"The towering shaft that wealth erects in affection for its dead will never rise above his mortal remains, but richer than the mausoleum of choicest marble is the faithful memory that shall enshrine him—see to it that a monument of prayers in whose erection the poorest may generously share, will arise for him, and loyal hearts make intercession for him, for 'More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of.'"

TRU-TRED SHOES

Give the Fullest Degree of Comfort

Tru-Tred Shoes are standardized in shape as well as in quality. They are so built as to conform to the natural lines of the foot, permitting the toes to lay flat side by side, instead of being cramped as a Chinese woman's foot might be, thus giving the fullest degree of comfort.

People who turn aside from ordinary Shoes and adopt Tru-Treds are astonished at the difference in their walking abilities and the great ease in which they can move along without fatigue.

The foot is given a chance for its life in Tru-Tred Shoes. It has space to breathe. It has a chance to grow as nature intended it should, and it gives you freedom from almost all the foot-ills to which humanity is heir.

Tru-Tred Shoes are sold exclusively by us, and may be had in all sizes, from Infants' to Men's.

Priced $1.50 to $6, according to size.

ELIZABETH MAY COPY OUR NEW ORDINANCE

Mayor Mravlag Has Been Supplied With Data by Mayor Calkins.

An ordinance, which will probably be the exact duplicate of the one introduced at the last meeting of the Plainfield Common Council, is being prepared by Mayor Victor Mravlag, of Elizabeth, for presentation to his Council. While the exact purpose of the local bill, which deals principally with traffic regulations, was not stated, the Elizabeth official has announced that the ordinance in that city will have its first trial in the handling of the Pillar of Fire proposition. It has been considered for many years in Elizabeth, as in Plainfield, that the Mayor has authority over street meetings, and it has been the rule to issue permits. However, this authority was procured by a stretching of the police laws.

Mayor Leighton Calkins has supplied Mayor Mravlag with a copy of the local ordinance and also considerable data relative to the Pillar of Fire situation. The cult applied for a permit in that city last Saturday night and although they did not get the sanction they have held frequent street meetings. Mayor Mravlag, however, has announced that he will take drastic action at the first intimation of trouble started by the religious sect.

FINED $5 FOR TYING HORSE IN FRONT OF FIRE HYDRANT

Charged by Patrolman Samuel Kriney with allowing his horse to stand in front of a fire hydrant, Elias Nadler, a peddler, of 311 Liberty street, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza, in the city court this morning, and sentenced to pay a fine of $5, with the option of spending twenty days in the county jail.

Nadler had been warned five times by Patrolman Kriney not to tie his horse at a point near the hydrant. In passing sentence Judge DeMeza took occasion to remark that his attention had been called repeatedly to violations of this traffic rule, and that he was determined to break up the practice.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

Although the total enrollment has not yet been computed Principal Earley expects the number will aggregate over 230. This will be an increase of twenty pupils over the preceding year.

Mr. Earley has announced that the faculty has thought it advisable to raise the exemption mark for examinations from 85 to 90 per cent. Although this did not meet with the general approval of the pupils, it nevertheless will be helpful to those who intend to take college entrance examinations.

The graduates of the 1915 class who intend to go to college are leaving daily to go to their selected institutions. Hyman Abrams, Hoyt Tomkinson, Russell Lee and Frank Fetherston were among those who left last night. Abrams will study law at Dickinson College; Tomkinson, who is considered one of the best mathematicians who ever graduated from the school, will pursue a course in electrical engineering in Lehigh University. Russell Lee, class valedictorian, together with Fetherston will seek the advantages offered at Carnegie Institute, in Pittsburg. Lee will enter the metallurgy department, while his classmate will take the minnig engineering course.

BOROUGH ENGINE TESTED.

The steamer belonging to the North Plainfield Fire Department which has just been overhauled after long use pumping out the sewer trenches, was given a test last night. The apparatus was taken to a position on Brook avenue and put through a severe test by Engineer Walker. Everything worked perfectly. There was a good turn-out of the firemen.

TESTING NEW ENGINE.

The automobile engine for No. 4 Engine House was given a road test this morning and is to undergo a pumping test this afternoon. In preparation for it the machinist of the Nott Engine Company had the apparatus apart yesterday afternoon.

"PEGS" TO MEET.

The next meeting of the "Pegs," the newly organized Plainfield Athletic Girls' Club, will be held in the Plainfield High School gymnasium next Wednesday, September 22. At that time plans for the presentation of a play the latter part of October or the first part of November will be discussed and the cast selected.

Daniel Shea, a clerk in the local postoffice, will return to his duties tomorrow, after enjoying a two weeks' vacation.

MOTHER ASKS COURT TO NAME GUARDIANS

Mrs. Florence Potter Sheppard Suggests Henry M. Maxson as One.

Florence Potter Sheppard, formerly of this city, mother of Alexander M. Ross, has an application on file today to the Supreme Court to have herself and Superintendent of Schools Henry M. Maxson, of this city, appointed as a committee of the person of her son. A New York sheriff's jury recently declared the son incompetent.

Ross married a servant in his mother's household at the age of seventeen, but it was later annulled. In October he will receive property yielding an annual income of $18,519. At the sheriff's jury hearing it was brought out that Ross had an uncontrollable desire to kiss every girl he met on the street, and had frequently gotten into trouble because of this practice.

ORGANIZE RELIEF WORK FOR WAR-STRICKEN PEOPLE

Realizing the urgent need of rendering relief to war stricken Jews in Europe and Palestine, the local active community workers have undertaken to arouse the interest and co-operation of every Jewish member in the city to carry out a comprehensive plan whereby everyone is becoming a member of the committee by paying from ten cents to a dollar weekly.

An enthusiastic meeting of the representatives of every Jewish organization in the city was held last night, when permanent officers were elected and a committee named to carry on the work. Already $100 was sent today to the Central Relief Committee in New York and there is about $200 to be collected through an appeal made in the Congregation Children of Israel during the holidays by Jacob Sachar.

These officers have been chosen: L. Rosenthal, chairman; Jacob Sachar, vice-chairman and solicitor; Samuel Saidel, secretary; S. Ritgun, treasurer; S. Rothstein, second vice-chairman; Henry Rosenbaum and Abraham Schwartz, publicity committee. The work seems to meet with the approval of the entire Jewish community and promises to be successful. It is probable that a large mass meeting will be held soon to discuss the Jewish Congress which is to take place this fall and delegates will be chosen to represent the local Jewish community.

PHI PI PSI ENJOY ITS ANNUAL FALL BANQUET

The annual fall banquet of the Phi Pi Psi of North Plainfield, an organization of North Plainfield High School alumni, which has been in existence for five years, was held at the Homestead on Washington avenue, last night. Duclos Van Mater, of Myrtle avenue, was the host for the occasion. Following a full course dinner served at the former place, the entire party adjourned to the home of Mr. Van Mater, where a business session was held.

The affair was in the nature of a farewell, inasmuch as three members of the club leave within a few days for college. These are Ralph Smalley and Franklin Lowe for Cornell and Duclos Van Mater goes to Rutgers. With the exception of Edmund Kenney, who has gone to the University of Pennsylvania, all the members were present. Silver pencils and red carnations were given each attendant as momentoes. The next meeting of the club will be held sometime in December when the members will return home for their holiday vacations.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Those who loved music had their fill at Proctor's Theatre last week, and attention is now turned to those who like dancing and ballets. Two big acts, both more than deserving of the adjective "big," are scheduled for this week in this direction, and are guaranteed top-notchers.

The Imperial Ballet Troupe, direct from La Scala, Milan, which is now in the midst of the European war activities, is on the boards of the local vaudeville house for the first three days of the present week. Words fail to describe this act; it must be seen to be appreciated. Five other high-class acts, as well as a feature photoplay, changed each day, will round out the program for the first three days.

The feature act for Thursday, Friday and Saturday is of no less degree a top-notcher than the one which opened for the first three days. Fatima, who a year ago played six weeks at Hammerstein's New York Theatre, and later appeared for a run at Chicago, opens at the Plainfield house on Thursday. Fatima was the favorite dancer for the recently deposed Sultan of Turkey, and was a portion of his majesty's harem up until the time of his downfall not long since. Fatima made her escape from the Turkish Empire a short time afterward, and has appeared at many of the high-priced vaudeville houses of this country since that time. See this act, and you see the biggest vaudeville act presented to Plainfield at ay price.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

James Stevens, the leading baritone with the de Koven Opera Company, which will be seen here in "Robin Hood," at the Plainfield Theatre, next Saturday, matinee and night, was surprised in Seattle last season to find a stranger waiting for him at the stage door. He was greeted with the remark, "I knew you were a hero in real life and now I find you playing one on the stage." The story follows: Stevens is the proud possessor of a ranch near Medford, Oregon, on which he spends his vacations. One day while prowling through the woods, he was attracted by a shot and the scream of a mountain lion. He hurried in the direction in time to see the wounded beast about to spring upon a hunter, who was vainly snapping his magazine rifle, evidently having neglected to load it to its capacity. As the lion sprang through the air, Stevens brought him down with a well-directed shot, thereby saving the hunter's life.

He proved to be a Mr. Ferris, of Sacramento, and left immediately for his home. Stevens had not seen him since, until he was found singing "Little John" in "Robin Hood."

RECORD ENDURANCE SWIM.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 14—Charles Toth, of the L Street Swimmers' Club, of South Boston, Saturday bettered the American endurance swimming record when he swam from Charlestown Bridge to Boston Light and return in 15 hours 48 minutes. The old mark was 14 hours 15 minutes and was created by Charles B. Durborow, of Philadelphia, in Delaware Bay in 1912. "Sam" E. Richards in 1913 created the record of 13 hours 9 minutes.

Temperance
NEWS AND VIEWS
Conducted by
THE W. C. T. U.

On the occasion of the recent visit in Evanston of Mrs. Philip Snowden, Miss Gordon entertained the distinguished suffragist and her hostesses, Mrs. Joseph Leech, and daughter, Miss Caroline Leech, of Kentucky, at a 5 o'clock tea at Rest Cottage. In relating some of her interesting experiences in the recent prohibition campaign in New Zealand, Mrs. Snowden paid high tribute to the Woman's Christian Temperance Union leaders of that country. "They have enacted splendid legislation in New Zealand," said Mrs. Snowden. "I had ample demonstration that the leading spirits among the women over there in every kind of good work are members of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. They really secured suffrage for the women and they are back of the new and commendable legislation."

Mrs. Snowden explained that of the members of parliament a sufficient number have pledged themselves to change the law requiring a three-fifths majority on all votes on the liquor question is voted on again in three years, she believes the temperance forces will undoubtedly win.

"I was greatly interested in the neat and attractive appearance of the polling booths, which are usually in school buildings," said Mrs. Snowden. "I visited a great many of them on election day and would frequently see whole school yards filled with baby carriages, while families—father, mother and often babies that had to be carried in arms—would go to the polls. I was in a house on election day at Wellington, and before the father of the family left for business, said 'Now, girls, don't you forget to go down in good time and have your vote registered.'"

Mrs. Snowden was a speaker at the recent National Education Asociation meeting at San Francisco, and also addressed the Chautauqua (N. Y.) assembly. During the month of October she is to speak on suffrage every day in the State of New York.

The Supreme Court of South Dakota has just handed down two decisions in liquor cases, which are far-reaching and sweeping. The first decision holds that the Legislature has a right to pass a law saying that no one can sell or give liquor to an intoxicated person, and that doing so is a criminal offense. The second decision holds that commissioners in a city that is governed by a commission form of government have a right to revoke a license upon complaint that a liquor dealer is selling liquor to a minor or a blacklisted person, and that it is not necessary for the commission first to have judicial determination as to whether the law was violated, as the license is a permit and not a contract.

Commissioner Stratton, of the Newark Fire Board, addressing fifty-four candidates for fire service, said: "You should refrain from dissipation of all kinds, especially drinking. Drinking is the most serious offense in the fire department. Drinking is the greatest enemy of a fireman. We deal with cases of drunkenness very harshly. If any of you have an inclination to drink you must conquer it. You need a steady nerve and a good strong heart." Pretty good from Newark's government. Evidently drinkers there make good voters but poor firemen.

The spirit of the age is progress. A general forward movement is to be anticipated, and the time has now arrived for each individual voter to make up his mind that if every woman and child is to receive equal and exact justice, we must deal with the fundamental causes of the present unsatisfactory social conditions, rather than apply a coat of whitewash, or poultice some of the especially bad-looking sores, thus serving only to intensify these conditions.

It seems to this committee to be the height of folly for any man or set of men seeking to improve social conditions to attempt any reform with the liquor traffic inside the reform.

Therefore the repeal of all liquor license laws and the suppression of the traffic is an immediate necessity, if we would deal with the cause rather than the effect.

With this measure enacted and administered other progressive legislation looking toward justice and social betterment would have a fair field for favorable trial. Without this preliminary reform it would be handicapped and practically impossible of realization.

There being no other political organization at present ready to declare even for a "square deal" for the laws we now have, much less the repeal of the infamous license laws, and the suppression of the liquor traffic, and as experience has shown that the law is of small import without its friendly and vigorous administration, we declare that the need of the hour is an efficient administration by a political party pledged to the suppression of the liquor traffic.

Samuel Ridout will preach at the Rescue Mission tonight at 8:15. Miss Florence Randolph will sing. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend.

WILL ERECT SCOUT BUILDING

bare construction would cost $260. An appeal will be made to the public to contribute an amount sufficient to bring the building fund up to $300, a start having been made last night, when contributions of $5 each were promised by President Runyon and F. M. Genung.

The building committee, consisting of Commissioners Allen E. Beals, A. V. Searing, Jr., E. A. Sprowl, F. E. Bach, Alexander Milne, Frederick A. Martin and Brockholst K. Miller, financial secretary, was empowered to proceed with the work at once so that the building will be available for winter scout meetings of the new troop now being organized by Scoutmasters Ostrom, Wesergard and Harris, in the Fanwood district. In the summer this building will be the main shelter of a tenting colony of Plainfield Boy Scouts representing all the troops in the city. The building will have active Scout use all the year around. In its construction Scouts desiring to pass merit badge examinations in carpentry, painting, handicraft, wood working and sanitation will have an opportunity to assist in its erection. Volunteers will file their names with the commissioner within the next week.

It is planned to bring the New York troop of blind Boy Scouts to this city, with their blind scoutsmasters, as guests of the Plainfield troop on Columbus Day, when the championship competition will take place. Commissioner Bach, who met this troop returning from a camping trip was appointed to arrange the details. This troop, with other out of town scout troops, will have an opportunity to compete for a prize for excellence in scout work. The commissioner would be glad to hear from anyone desiring to offer a suitable prize for this feature of the exhibition.

Announcement was made that P. I. Minturn and W. G. Richards, the later drum instructor of Troop No. 4, were willing to register as scoutmasters. Mr. Minturn will take charge of the new troop now being formed in Temple Baptist church by Eldward A. Baker.

Chairman Collier, of the exhibition day committee, reported this program of events for Columbus Day October 12: Parade and grand ensemble of Scouts; barrier climb; rope casting, rope climbing, knot tying and tug of war; water boiling contest, making fire without matches; tower building, pyramid building, signalling; troop surprises; firemen's carrying competition; first aid competition, first aid to animals (Mrs. Stephen G. Von Hoesen prize competition; treck cart drill, fire fighting drill; Scout pace, one mile in twelve minutes, walking and running—open competition for visiting troops.

The prizes to be competed for this year include the Dr. Corbusier first aid competition flag, won last year by Red Cross patrol of Troop No. 5, Thomas P. Fitch, leader; the Paul R. Collier championship pennant, the Paul R. Collier individual cup for the best individual work in the competition, one-half to count for the greatest proficiency shown by any individual Boy Scout during the last year, as shown by his promotions, and the Mrs. Stephen G. Van Hoesen prize for the best demonstration of first aid to animals.

Rules and names of officials will be announced by the committee later.

The next meeting of the Council on October 1, will be the annual one when officers will be elected. Registration of members of the Scout Council will take place at that time.

Application for promotion in Scoutcraft were made by the following Scouts last night:

Thomas P. Fitch, Troop No. 5, for merit badge examinations in camping, civics, physical development and scholarship; assigned to Deputy Commissioner E. A. Sprowl.

Harold McKay, Troop No. 5, for examination in life saving, swimming and camping; assigned to William Albe.

Caryl Dunavan, Troop No. 9, for examination in cycling; asigned to L. M. Leek.

Joseph A. Garner, Scoutmaster, Troop No. 7, for examination in pioneering; assigned to F. M. Genung.

Albert Van Denburgh, Troop No. 9, for examination for first class Scout; assigned to Deputy Commissioner F. E. Bach.

Councilman Genung reported having passed Scoutmaster Garner in pathfinding, swimming, poultry farming, cooking and first aid, and Mills Barnes, of the same troop, in public and personal health, cooking and pathfinding. Deputy Commissioner Bach reported that Scout William Bolen, of Troop No. 9, had been promoted, on examination, to first class Scoutship.

It was decided to request all Scout officials examining Scouts for promotion to report the result of their examinations to Council for purposes of record.

PREPARING FOR PEACE.

Plainfield's corps of recruits for the army of civilization mobilize today for another year of instruction. School days are here again.

On the eve of another term of training for the young, parents and teachers should soberly contemplate their responsibility for the proper guidance of these growing minds. Upon the educational system of the United States is its democracy established, and upon this system rests the hopes of the country for permanency and future greatness. Events of the past few months have taught us that there was a flaw in European civilization. Millions of men rushing blindly into the most horrible war of the world's history without stopping to soberly inquire into the justice of their cause gives adequate grounds for questioning the efficiency of a century of peace teachings.

The mind of a child must absorb knowledge. It hungers for facts as the growing body hungers for food. If not directed in the proper channels it will pick up scraps of information here and there and it is an unfortunate truth that sin is attractive to the innocent.

If the children of today are properly taught the war now raging will be the last in history. If the sickening, bestial emptiness of it all is made clear to them they will carry the lesson on to their children and their children's children and peace will prevail for all time to come. It is not a time for the study of golden conquests. Never was there such an opportunity to hold war up in its real light—to prepare an America of tomorrow with a wholesome horror of national conflict. Instead of drawing pictures of heroes in golden colors, put before growing citizens the ashen, upturned faces of countless sons of France, England, Germany and of innocent Belgium, piled in never-ending death ditches, awaiting nothing but the meal time of carrion. Show them instead of sweethearts bidding their gaily-uniformed lovers goodbye, the emaciated forms and hunger-drawn faces of mothers and children, huddled in devastated homes and living for nothing but the return of husband and father—a hope that can never be fulfilled.

Are you raising your boy to be a soldier? Now is the time to decide. It is an awful responsibility that confronts parents and the little band of hardworking, underpaid and unappreciated teachers, but if they but realize the seriousness of their task they will be equal to it.

WHICH IS YOUR FRIEND?

There is a striking similarity between the suffrage cause and the Christian religion. No matter whether or not you can conscientiously accept all of the arguments advanced by its advocates, you are forced to admire it for its enemies.

Not that there are not good men—and women too—who are opposing suffrage. Many men and women who have always stood for the best in all walks of life are honestly opposed to placing the ballot in the hands of women, but when the list of active enemies to the suffrage cause is analyzed it is found that liquor dealers, professional politicians and others of their ilk are in the majority. Theirs is a mercenary interest. They feel that gang politics and whiskey traffic must fall back as suffrage for women advances, and they are fighting desperately.

At a recent meeting of the Pennsylvania Federation of Liquor Dealers, as has been told in these columns, it was resolved to lend political and financial aid to the anti-suffrage cause. One of the influential members was quoted as saying, "With the women voting, the vote against the saloon will be so big as to sound the death knell of the business."

New Jersey liquor interests are lined up against suffrage and will make every effort to defeat the movement in the election of next month. Theirs is not an organized opposition, but it cannot be disputed that they oppose votes for women. It seems incredible that the saloonkeepers of an enlightened State should attempt to tell its men what shall be given their wives and daughters, but the fact must be faced. Who do you think is best qualified to run your city? Your wife, or the man who sells your son whiskey over the bar?

DR. DUMBA IS "PEEVED."

Old Doc Dumba, who prescribed poison for American industries, but was made to swallow a pretty bitter dose himself, is "peeved" over the publicity that he has acquired recently. He was quoted in New York the other day as saying:

"Too much has been made out of this affair altogether. In the street cars and among the crowds you hear nothing else discussed. It has become simply unbearable."

His attitude is similar to that of a sheep-killing dog that shows fight when caught with its fangs sunk into the throat of a lamb. After having abused his diplomatic privileges, betrayed the hospitality of the American people, conspired to cripple commerce, and asked an American to perform an act which involves the neutrality of his millions of countrymen, the eminent statesman would still remain a guest of honor. If Doc had been forced to pass through Ellis Island he would never have touched American soil. Immigration officials would have rejected him because of his lack of moral character.

Announcement that Dr. William L. Saunders, of the borough, has been honored by being selected as one of the Naval Advisory Board by Secretary Daniels has been received by his hundreds of friends in Plainfield with much pleasure. That Dr. Saunders is a big man in the country we have always known, but close contact with persons so democratic as he, sometimes tends to make us forget just how important a part they play in the life of the nation. We are used to seeing Dr. Saunders in the narrower sense of "one of us." It is another application of the biblical injunction, "a prophet is not without honor, save in his own country." That Dr. Saunders will add to the effectiveness of the Board in solving the great problems which will come before it goes without saying, and our residents will watch the work of this favored and loyal son of Plainfield, with a feeling of mixed pride and joy.

Patterns used for the "stylish" young women's dresses nowadays lead mere man to the belief that they would look much better hanging on the wall than they hang on some of the figures seen on the streets.

Leaving A Call

I left a call
As I sought my stall,
In the little town, at Hotel de Punque.
I said: "At seven,
For the love of Heaven,
Please wake me up, for I'd pack a trunk."

At half-past five
I came alive
When the help in the hall held a conference.
Then a cockerel knew
That my sleep was through,
And he told me so, from the barnyard fence.

I tried again,
But the hired men
Within ten feet of my window low,
Began to josh
Of a last-night's sosh,
And my faithful nanny began to go.

I was up by six
For my rest was nix.
And I've known since then 'tis just as well
To have no fear,
As you pound your ear,
That you'll oversleep, in a hick hotel!

Motor Car Convincers

The man who thought of buying a car, read the advertisements.

One car "has the right of way. No car near it. Its quality first, its price second."

Another half dozen were "the sensation of the motor world."

Another solemnly told him in large letters that there wasn't "even a comparative value," in the whole field.

Yet another had "set the standard of quality for all the others for a long number of years."

After reading all the advertisements he could find, he burst into bitter tears and went and bought a horse and buggy that he was personally acquainted with.

Removing Justifiable Confusion

My brother tells me he works on a house-organ. Yet he has had no lessons in music, whatever. How can he do it? As houses are much the same as cottages, are house organs and cottage organs anything alike?—Mildred, Aurelia, Iowa.

No, Mildred.

Trees

Trees are of nine general classes:

Fruit, shade, forest, family, hall, shoe, single, double and Beerbohm.

Fruit trees are divided into all the classes you know about, and two others, besides the ones Lute Burbank is inventing this minute and may have ready for publication before this article is finished.

Shade trees ditto.

Forest trees are divided into firewood and lumber. Hundreds of sawmills may be heard dividing them, wherever forests have been.

Family trees are not as plenty as they might be. The forestry conservationists haven't been careful in saving that sort of timber. It is not good for anything except for prigs, to get the dead wood on each other.

Hall trees are heavy bearers and bring forth a variety of fruit. No matter if you got the seed from a hall-tree that bore nothing but hats, they are just as likely to bear a bumper crop of rubber coats or sweaters or hand-satchels.

Shoe trees are grown only by the well-to-do people, and do not flourish on poor soil. Shoes kept on trees of nights think their owner has wooden legs from bedtime till morning.

Single and double trees grow around where teaming is done, though they are by no means always made of horse-chestnuts.

Beerbohm tree grew in England only, and is not elsewhere indigenous. Whenever this tree came to America it was always nearly time for leaving.

The Dog's Suit

"I notice," said the veterinarian after he had carefully examined the dog's mouth, "that he has a thick coat on his tongue."

"Ah, then, his coat and his pants come together, don't they!" exclaimed the dog's anxious mistress.

The Young Lady Across The Way

The young lady across the way says she understands that mutton is the favorite meat in England but in this country she guesses most of the sheep must be killed for their wool.

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

A Brand New "Cold" Microbe

SINCE old Ben Franklin first promulgated the thought that so-called "colds" were catching, that is, transferable from the sick to the well, considerable knowledge has accumulated supporting that idea. In this interlude of inquiry we have occasionally dwelt upon the sundry and divers microbes that are known to cause such illnesses. The pneumococcus—king of the cold bugs—nearly everybody carries always on tap. Then there is the influenza bacillus, the diphtheria bacillus—which is present in not a few apparent "colds" in children particularly, the micrococcus catarrhalis, certain streptococci and staphylococci and other cocci till you can't cock your eye any longer—have all been rather suspiciously associated with "colds."

But the worst is yet to come. And from a woman doctor this time. Dr. Ruth Tunnicliff has found a new and thoroughly competent cold microbe—the bacillus rhinitis. Rhinitis, you know, means inflammation of the proboscis, or nose, the inside of the nose particularly. Dr. Tunnicliff's new microbe does a neat and workmanlike job when planted on the field of action; there can be no doubt that it starts things about as promptly as any of the old established germs of coryza in our standard lists.

There need be no alarm, nor even surprise that a new cold germ has been discovered. Beyond question there will be others introduced from time to time as occasion warrants. We're going to keep the contagiousness of "colds" in the public nostrils at all hazards, and we shall discover as many new microbes as may be necessary for the purpose.

One "cold" is as much unlike another "cold" in its symptoms and effects as measles is unlike the whooping-cough. That is just why we have given this fine notice to Dr. Tunnicliff's new bug—to emphasize the unhappy truth that a "cold" is a "cold" only until you find out what is the matter, and then it is something definite. Measles and whooping-cough and diphtheria and pneumonia and various other diseases are "colds" at first, in the common parlance; pretty nearly every acute illness is a "bad cold" at the beginning; anyway, the average patient will stand for such a diagnosis for a day or two.

All "colds" are as independent of weather conditions and exposure and dampness and drafts as measles, whooping-cough or soft corns, but not all human beings are as yet disabused of the great delusion.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Intestinal Indigestion In Children

Will you kindly write something about intestinal indigestion in children under ten? I think you said some time ago that most cases of "worms" are in reality due to this trouble.

Answer—We have a letter all ready to send you if you will furnish the stamped, addressed envelope.

Health Talks Saved Her Beauty

Following one of your suggestions I had the emetine treatment for pyorrhœa some months ago, and it did wonders. My general health is greatly improved and my friends are remarking on my improved complexion. Thank you and long life to Health Talks.

Answer—And mind, the lady had already spent four or five cents for postage and packing on the letter of advice.

NOISE

NOISE is a disturbance in the atmosphere which concusses the ear-drum and causes the owner thereof to sigh for a pleasant home in a town which hasn't a commercial club.

Noise is produced by dogs, locomotives, machine guns, babies, college students, cheap orchestras, politicians, locomotive whistles, scarehead newspapers, volcanoes and other things.

It is usually disagreeable and inventors often work all night trying to produce noiseless institutions of one kind or another. They have made the automobile as quiet as a tombstone, but have not been able to do anything as yet for the automatic piano or the self-made man who is trying to advertise the fact.

A few noiseless politicians have been perfected in the last century, but as a rule they have been more fatal than the reverberating kind. A politician should be compelled to work with cowbells tied on him.

About five years ago the noise was strained out of the Fourth of July with great success. We now have a perfectly quiet Fourth, and celebrate our national birthday by closing the banks.

Some people are naturally quiet and can remove an entire tinware store in a one-horse wagon with loose spokes without awakening the police—while other people are so noisy that they cannot read a religious paper without keeping the neighborhood awake by yelling for more quiet.

This nation is very fond of noise and uses it at times with great success as a substitute for music, theology, statesmanship, advertising and argument. Of late years it has become impossible to feed in public without being assisted by noise. There are few stranger sights than that of a New York man yelling pleasantly at a guest across a table, while close behind him a reformed boiler-shop worker is committing personal assault on a snare drum, a triangle, a bass drum and a xylophone.

The self-made man who is trying to advertise the fact

Anti-noise societies are now being formed all over the country, and if they succeed in their crusade we may have to pay fifty cents a day to see the home team play ball instead of standing outside the fence and keeping the run of the game by the rise and fall of the mad-house chorus inside.

Views Of The Press

America's Attitude

S. S. McCLURE, editor of McClure's Magazine, has written a signed editorial for the New York Mail, concerning the attitude of the United States toward England. Mr. McClure says:

"I am departing from a good and almost universal custom by writing a signed editorial. I am doing this because I need to draw upon my own observation to a certain extent.

"In a letter to the Times, B. Horowitz, associate professor in Columbia, says:

"'If, then, one asks the question, Why is it that so many Americans are ardent supporters of the Allies?—we may answer that the primary reason is the existence of a common bond of sympathy for England and what it stands for—its people, its history, its culture.'

"Where was the common bond of this country in 1861 as between the Northern and Southern States? Such a common bond as Mr. Horowitz refers to did not prevent one of the most terrible wars in history—the American Civil War. Furthermore, every generation of American youth was brought up to regard England as the enemy. The War of the Revolution was followed by the War of 1812, and, to still further embitter our people, the acts of England during our Civil War brought feelings of hostility to a white heat. How everybody felt then many of the old-timers feel now. Ask Gen. Horace Porter! Our history text-books implanted these feelings year after year in our country schools and city schools.

"The response of the people to Cleveland's Venezuelan message was indicative of this unanimous feeling. During the Boer War the feeling of dislike to England was increased. The natural tradition of the American people for more than one hundred years was instinctive hostility to England and instinctive friendship for Germany.

"All American sympathy was with Germany in the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-71. The old emperor and the Emperor Frederick were admired and beloved generally in America, and Von Moltke and Roon took their places beside Grant and Sherman in the popular mind. The present emperor grew continually and generally in the admiring affections of the American people. Such was the condition up to the close of the nineteenth century.

"More and more American professors had studied in German universities. Few men commanded a greater affection of all our public men than Carl Schurz.

"Are the American people the idiotic victims of an insidious propaganda on the part of Great Britain, and is the talk of the American press stupid and venal?

"England and the English press were regarded by the American people with a calm and contemptuous hostility. The change came at the time of the Spanish-American War. One morning New York City was amazed to read a short editorial in the New York Sun speaking of England in an admiring and friendly manner.

"Gradually this feeling of friendliness grew, until much of the traditional hostility disappeared. Public opinion in the United States in regard to the war was created by the unfolding sequence of events."

The Auto Must Go

Q. Can a man's family auto be taken for debt in California? That is to say, if a man goes bankrupt in his business, can his creditors take his family auto or is it exempt by California law?

A. It is not exempt.

Mortgage Holds Good

Q. If I mortgage a team for a specified amount of money and am obliged to earn my living with same, has the party holding the mortgage on the team the right to foreclose on me if I fail to make good at the expired time through unavoidable circumstances on my part? Can I force him to renew the mortgage, or am I cornered?

A. He has the right to foreclose. Perhaps you could get a new loan, to take the place of the old, when the mortgage expires.

Property Held By Married Couple

Q. If a man and wife hold a piece of property jointly, a mortgage being attached to same, can either one sell without the consent of the other?

A. No. In the proper case, however, a partition proceeding could be brought.

A Question Of Ownership

Q. I had occasion recently to investigate the title to some land. There seems to be some doubt about the matter, although the person who made the deed has the same name as the person who, as I happen to know, had some time previously acquired the title. What do you think about the case?

A. Where the name of the grantor is the same as that of an individual who had previously acquired the title, the presumption will be that the conveyance was made by the rightful owner. Unless there are facts tending to throw considerable doubt on the transaction, no further evidence will be essential.

Dissolving Partnership

Q. Say three men are partners in a business. One wants to get out. The others do not want to buy. How can he get out? Can he take his one-third of the stock and pay up all debts against the firm, and what can be done with bills owing the firm? The firm is not incorporated.

A. Where a partnership is formed for a definite period of time, and one partner wishes to quit the business before the expiration of such time, the usual practice is to go into court and ask for a decree of dissolution. If there has been any fraud or deceit, or if there is any other circumstance making a continuance of the partnership relation undesirable, so that the common end in view when the partnership was formed cannot be attained, the court will decree a dissolution.

Stop

There is a wealth of Power to be gained in learning just When and How—to Stop. It seems a part of human activity to travel too Fast at times. Also, it has been a Fault of Nations. History tells all about it.

Stop. Pause and Think—then Go Ahead.

It is comparatively easy for Forceful and Energetic characters to keep going ahead, working and willing their way along. But the ability to Stop at the right time, no matter under what circumstances you may be placed, becomes a distinct mark of Decision and Control.

Stop. Pause and Think—then Go Ahead.

How many a time the busy man or woman learns the value of this little word all too late! How many a giant enterprise has been snuffed out, like as a candle is snuffed out, for no other reason than that the little lesson of knowing just When and How to Stop had never been learned.

Stop. Pause and Think—then Go Ahead.

Measure your steps as you go. View your Work calmly and with satisfaction. Stop to take invoice and to meditate on the meaning of what you propose to achieve. Stop to gather and accumulate Strength and Nerve and Heart. Stop—that you may learn to Go Ahead.

Daddy's Bedtime Story— The Little Mouse That Caught The Cat.

"YOU have heard a-plenty about cats that have caught mice," said daddy, "but you haven't heard about the mouse that caught a cat.

"A little mouse once lived in the cellar of a farmhouse, and he was one of the most mischievous little mice you ever heard of. He was a bright little mouse, too, which I will proceed to show you, and his alert brain served to keep him out of a great deal of trouble.

"In this same farmhouse with the little mouse lived a cruel and hungry cat named Malty. The children had christened her that because she was a Maltese pussy and very lovely, as those cats are. And she especially loved mice for her breakfasts or lunches or dinners or any between whiles.

"Now the little mouse of which I am telling you had no name, of course, but just for the purposes of our story we will give him one. We will call him Impy, and I think you will decide that the name fits him.

"Impy just lived to torment that pussy that was so hungry for mice, and I do think that he secured revenge for a great many of his mouse relatives that Malty caught.

"Now in that farmhouse were a number of great big rats as well as mice, and Malty was just as hard on them as on the mice. Between the rats and the mice she killed and those which were caught in traps by the farmer's people and given to her she grew fat.

"Impy had Malty almost crazy with rage sometimes. The cat would be dozing in the cellar or maybe up in the garret, and up Impy would come through a hole not an inch from her nose and squeak. She would open her yellow eyes, and he would make a face at her or wrinkle his little pointed nose in the most aggravating way. She would pounce at him like lightning, but, quick as thought, he would jump away.

"At last one day she thought she had him. She found him in the middle of the cellar, far away from a hole and ran toward him. She could run faster than he, and he squeaked with fright. But he had an idea. He ran right toward a great big rat trap, extra size, and dodged when he reached the door. Malty couldn't stop and ran head on into that trap and got wedged in it, while Impy laughed a mousey laugh.

"Malty meowed and yawled, and the family came to release her. She tried very hard after that to catch the mouse that had caught her, but she never did. Impy lived a long time and never missed an opportunity to pester big, fat Malty."

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Hush! Don't talk so loud. Remember we have only canvas walls," warned Dick.

Nell modulated her voice and continued: "How I wish we could go home. It makes me desperate when I think of that cool, quiet house only about five miles from here, while I work harder than I ever did in all my life!"

"What did you say was the reason the maid couldn't come?"

"Her mother was taken suddenly sick; it wasn't her fault," Nell admitted magnanimously; "but it does leave us in an awful hole. The cook threatened to leave if anything more than the cooking was asked of her."

"Well, that's surely enough, cooking for thirteen people, counting the children. Four of you women ought to be able to do the dishwashing and the little dab of housework that the camp requires," soothed Dick.

"Four! Say three. Mrs. Scott is as helpless as Hal, and when Olive suggested we put white oilcloth on the table, regular camp fashion, she was horrified. Things must be served in just as fine style as they are at home."

"I'd hardly say fine style."

"And with these conveniences! And the children are so irritated by the mosquitoes and flies that they cry half the time. It seems as if I'd never heard Hal yell so much in three days in his whole life."

"Well, you certainly have a list of woes. I thought things were going fairly well. It takes some time to get them into running order. But we can't go home under two weeks. Remember, Scott is my employer, and you must guage your endurance of discomfort by that fact."

"Oh, I know," sighed his wife, slapping a mosquito. "I thought you said you fixed the flaps of this tent mosquito-proof, Dick."

"I thought I had, but, gee! They certainly are persistent. Where's that mosquito medicine? Rub some of that on your hands and face; that helps. I can't find it," he continued, after overturning half the things in the tent in a vain search for it. "I'm afraid to light a candle for fear of waking Hal; it only draws more of them, anyhow."

"No, don't do that if they eat us up. We've trouble enough without his tuning up. We'll get along some way."

About one o'clock a thunderstorm came up, and a leak developed over their bed. While they were trying to move to drier quarters in gloomy silence a merry laugh floated in from the doctor's tent. Dick was so refreshed by the sound that he sang out:

"If anything funny is happening, pass it along; we're in need of cheer."

"Dick, the baby!" gasped Nell in alarm.

"Our tent's leaking, and the doctor's raised his umbrella and tied it to the top of the cot; he's pinned it to the canvas side with a safety pin. He said he'd no idea we were coming to a watering place or he would have brought the proper togs."

"Yes," chimed in the doctor, "I've hoisted the signal of distress, hoping the storm would lay by till we got on our bathing suits."

"And she's laughing about that," said Nell. "Well, if she was as nervous and tired as I am, it wouldn't be so funny, trying to sleep in a leaky tent."

"Well, the storm has apparently quieted the mosquitoes, and for my part I prefer water in quantities large or small to them. Now I wonder if we can get a wink of sleep before it's time to start for the office." Dick rolled over on his squeaky cot and silence reigned.

CHAPTER II.

The Course of True Love.

"WELL, if you're ready, my dear, here goes," Mr. Martin began briskly to his stenographer, Mary Grayson.

To John Clark, Esq., Soap Works, New York, N. Y.:

Dear Sir—Confirming our conversation of even date I send you a line to record the bet made this morning between us in re our sons, Ellery Clark and Rodney Martin respectively—namely, that if my boy, by his own unaided efforts, isn't making more money at the end of a year from Nov. 1 next than your boy makes I pay you thirty thousand dollars ($30,000) in cash; and if he is, then you pay that sum to me; the books of their several business concerns, duly audited, to be the deciding factor. Yours very truly,

"Got that?" he added, darting a keen glance at Mary beneath his thick eyebrows.

"Yes, Mr. Martin," said that young lady in a voice which she was evidently trying to make as colorless as possible.

"Well, what do you think of it?" demanded Mr. Martin, breaking a short pause.

"I think Mr. Rodney has more brains than you give him credit for," said Mary impulsively.

"Oh, you do, do you?"

"Yes, sir, I do. But isn't $30,000 a good deal of money to lose on a bet? Somebody always loses, you know. And Mr. Rodney has never had any business experience to speak of. You wouldn't have him in your own works, you know."

"Of course I wouldn't. I didn't want Rod posing there as the boss' son, interfering with the good discipline of the establishment. Besides, I didn't want them all down there to see what a nincompoop he was in business. I've got more pride than that."

"Aren't you a little hard on Rodney, Mr. Martin?" asked Mary gently.

"Are you a little sweet on Rodney, Miss Mary?" retorted the soap king gruffly.

She had her head bent over her work, and he couldn't see her features during this colloquy. He would have to carry the plummet line a little deeper.

"Because if you are," he went on, "I warn you, you'll have to marry him for love. He'll get no money from me unless he makes good. I shall make a will leaving him only an annuity, the principal to go to charity when he has idled himself into his grave, and I'll see to it that the annuity isn't quite enough for two, let me tell you, let alone a family of kids. I don't propose to have him or a lot of worthless grandbrats making ducks and drakes of my money when I'm gone."

"I see," said Miss Grayson. "Of course it's none of my business. Anything else, sir?"

A motor bus screeching along outside came to a full stop at the corner. Mr. Martin, who had begun to pace the room as he talked, forgetting his convenient or inconvenient gout, lingered at the window and saw two women alight and stand talking indefinitely on the sidewalk. In one of the window panes where the curtains darkened it and made a mirror he could see Mary's pretty head drooping a little, giving her body a suddenly pensive air as she gazed abstractedly into the dying fire. He turned and spoke again and was pleased to see that she started involuntarily.

"Would you mind ringing for Johnson, my dear?" he asked, more pleasantly.

Mary rose and pressed the button and then sat down again as before. Johnson came presently and obediently replenished the fire, while Cyrus Martin twiddled his keys and small change in his trousers pockets. When Johnson's stiff back had disappeared through the doorway he began again on another tack.

"Look here, Mary," he demanded in a franker tone, "I want your help. You can help me if you will, and if you benefit by it yourself, why so much the better. Pitch in and catch Rodney if you want him. I should be glad of it. Only there would be one condition."

Beneath this direct attack the girl did finally blush a little. She gathered herself together again, however, and folded up her book by way of recapturing her composure.

"Why, Mr. Martin," she said, "what an idea!"

"Why is it such an idea? Is there nothing to attract a young fellow and a good looking girl like you to each other? You're too modest, Miss Mary."

"I'm not a judge of that, Mr. Martin," said Mary.

"Oh, yes, you are!" retorted her employer. "And I'm not so sure you're not quite willing myself."

"But I think you're very unkind to me," protested Mary, taking another cue. "You appeal to my woman's curiosity. Supposing, for the sake of argument, that your son and I are madly in love with each other, what are your conditions?"

"Well," said her employer, "I tell you frankly I don't want to lose that $30,000 to John Clark, and I do want to stir Rodney up. He needs an incentive, and I've been ransacking my brains to find the right one. And I think I've found it. I think it's you."

"I, Mr. Martin? Do you really think so?" she expostulated demurely.

"Yes, I do really think so, Miss Grayson," he mimicked.

"Don't you think it's just perversity?" persisted Mary. "Do you think Rodney would really care about me if he could have me just for the asking? I don't see how I can help you at all."

"Oh, yes, you can! And I'll tell you just how," went on Old Martin trenchantly. "I want Rodney to work for his money and his wife together. I'm going to turn him out of here"—

"Turn him out, Mr. Martin? Whatever do you mean?"

"Just what I say—turn him out, throw him overboard. Didn't you ever hear of the old admiral who taught his children to swim by throwing them overboard? The girls as well as the boys. If they didn't drown they swam, he said. But they usually swam."

"But they might have drowned," objected Mary, with a pretty shudder.

"No," said old Cyrus, with a villain's chuckle, "I've got it all doped out. I'll turn him out, right enough. I'll find a good excuse for it. I'm mad enough with him half the time. Look here, Mary, has Rodney proposed to you yet?"

"Well, really, Mr. Martin," stammered the secretary, "do you really think"—

"Well, the next time he proposes you're to accept him. See? You're to tell him you'll have him if his father consents, and then send him to ask me. That'll be my big scene."

"You'll say yes—you'll refuse?" stuttered Mary, showing some concern in the success of the plot, despite her efforts to be detached and businesslike.

"Consent? No! That's my cue for turning him out of my house forever," roared the stage father, working himself up into quite an advanced condition of parental fury. "Let him marry a typewriter? (Don't let that hurt your feelings, my dear.) Let some designing woman get her hands on him for a rich man's son? (Business of indignation, my dear.) I'll turn him down and out in proper fashion. Upon my word I feel like doing it this minute."

"But there's one chance you've overlooked, Mr. Martin," resumed Mary, pursing her pretty mouth slightly at the corners.

"What's that?"

"That he may not propose to me again—I mean at all," she corrected.

"Well, then, I'll disinherit him for sure," roared the soap king. "Now, be off with you, too, before I lose my temper."

But as Mary turned to go he called after her again (what a flat, pretty back she had, he thought, subconsciously, as he watched her lay her hand on the doorknob):

"No, don't go yet. There's one thing more. We must make a bona fide deal

"I think you're very unkind to me."

of this thing. You want to hear my terms, of course, don't you?"

"Your terms?"

"Yes, terms, and here they are. You needn't expect anything better. I'll pay you $2,500 down if you turn the trick. Twenty-five hundred dollars! You could use it, I suppose, couldn't you?"

At these "terms" Mary turned all the way round and leaned her pretty back against the dark mahogany door, her figure in its gray dress prettily outlined against it and her hand still clinging to the cut glass knob. Twenty-five hundred dollars from Mr. Martin! Her face and eyes, if not her lips, repeated the fat and racy words. But could she? fluttered from her pretty eyes. And yet she would, said the set mouth and chin. But no, she couldn't, said her shell-like ears, blushing as pink as coral. But yes; why not, said the firm mouth at last, and Mr. Cyrus Martin, watching this delicate byplay across her lovely features, that found more favor in his sight than ever this minute, despite his gruff demeanor, knew that the fates were playing on his side.

"Very well, Mr. Martin," said Mary Grayson finally. "It's a bargain then."

"A bargain," said old Cyrus, chuckling inwardly, and rubbing his hands together like an old fashioned actor doing the part of Shylock. "Come here, and I'll give you my blessing."

He stooped and kissed her respectfully on her white forehead and could not resist the temptation to let his hand finger a moment on the firm roundness of her upper arm and shoulder before he released her. "A bargain," he resumed, with suddenly returning gruffness, "So now go to it."

Rodney Martin himself, as luck would have it, opened the front door with his pass key and came in just as Mary was descending into the lower hall from his father's library.

"Mary," he exclaimed delightedly, "you here? What in thunder's the matter with Johnson?"

"One question at a time, please," said Mary, collecting herself as rapidly as possible. "What's Johnson got to do with it?"

"Why, I left my telephone numbers with him," explained Rodney, "so he could call me up the very moment you came in."

"You sound like a doctor going to the theater," said Mary.

"Same principle," echoed Rodney; "S O S, C Q D and all the rest of it. Safety first, you know."

Mary parried and fenced as best she could. This was going to be a sore what earlier opportunity of putting through their scheme than she had bargained for with the old magnate upstairs. Rodney showed only too plainly that he had something on his mind. He drew her into a small reception room on the first floor and made her sit down. It was a little pink and gold room which was never used except for a cloakroom when dinners were given or the housekeeper engaged a new servant. Lately Mary's typewriting machine had come to figure incongruously as a part of its furnishings since the clicking keys bothered Mr. Martin in his library and Mary came down here often to write.

"Rodney, why don't you do something worth while?"

Despite her bargain with the old gentleman upstairs she made a brave attempt to ward off something that she saw was inevitable here and now. She took the lines in her own hands and tried to steer the conversational craft safely through the rapids.

"Rodney," she said, "tell me what you have been doing today."

He told her.

"Well, I call that a very unprofitable twelve hours," said Mary firmly. "Rodney, why don't you do something worth while? Why don't you go into some business? Have an office with your name on the door. Be somebody. It would please your father so."

Rodney was dressed in the correctest masculine fashion, Mary noted—gray spats, a braided English morning coat, a huge white carnation in his buttonhole, and quite heavenly trousers. He wore a tie from Dasher's. Rodney was a nice boy, and had nice manners. He was only twenty-four, and his face had a certain quaint, frank charm in spite of his funny little mustache. He was by no means brainless, Mary was sure, notwithstanding his father's theories; only undeveloped by reason of the kind of life he had led and its appallingly frictionless conditions.

At the present moment he had an unaccustomed air of resolution that pervaded all the little room and made Mary retreat behind the typewriting desk, quailing in spite of herself. As she sat down, to her astonishment, she beheld Rodney turning the key in the door that led into the hall.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

From all accounts the alleged exhibition of the pugilistic pastime at Brighton Beach Saturday night came as near to being a frost as the law allows. Interest in the outcome of the event centers not in the reported evenness of the battling, but rather in fact that some 30,000 individuals, who think they know a thing or two about the fight game, were so badly buffaloed. It seems a pity that such a fake as this event gives every evidence of being should be thrust upon the sporting public at a time when the pistic game gives promise of mounting to its zenith of popularity. That McFarland and Gibbons were good friends before the bout is admitted, and it is pretty generally believed that the few thousand shekels they each received will bind the tie even tighter. What the New York State Boxing Commission, a supposedly live issue, should do at this time is to get after all who had a finger in the pie and find out just how the Marshall brothers managed to draw $75,000 worth of sightseers to the motordrome and make them believe they were watching a pair of real scrappers battle for a decision.

Believing that baseball and kindred summer sports have monopolized the attention of the local public long enough Plainfield schoolboys and members of the Holy Cross club are now awaiting their opportunity to introduce the pigskin. Within a few days the candidates for the Plainfield High School eleven will be given their first opportunity to loosen up rusty muscles and the Holy Cross management is completing details for what gives every indication of being a banner season. This year, as has been the case for several years past, players and spectators will be obliged to acquaint themselves with certain changes in the rules. They are not radical and for the most part are designed to eliminate or minimize roughness and unsportsmanlike conduct. The king of fall sports is upon us and the sooner those City Baseball Leaguers usher out their 1915 schedules the better chance they will have of keeping their swelled treasuries intact for a flyer next spring.

That there is a demand for a city basketball league this year that will have to be fulfilled is taken from the number of questions put to us during the past few days by followers of this indoor pastime. Probably never before has such an opportunity presented itself for the organization of a circuit of this kind and in view of the fact that the City Baseball League has made such a success of its experiment it might be well to suggest that the same body father the basketball loop. There are plenty of fast teams around these parts and it would not be a difficult matter to press several good local courts into service.

Collier's name among the Netherwood Tennis Club's finalists brings back old memories of scholastic tennis when "P. R." was an invincible character with the gutted racquet. As a "come-back" he is looming up as a pretty formidable foe for the modernites.

After spending the greater portion of the season within striking distance of the top-rung the Newark Feds have fallen back into fourth place. The Peps must have suffered an awful attack of chilled hoofs when they saw that pennant staring them in the face on their first season out.

While the annual ban on football has not come from North Plainfield High School quarters to date we're of the opinion that the borough athletes will once more have to remain idle until the basketball is pushed across. With a squad of huskies such as are housed in the Somerset School it's a pity someone doesn't take the initiative on this football question and make the interscholastic league a three-sport affair once more.

Taking the stage of preparation which certain City League scores enjoyed when they were submitted for publication over the week-end as a criterion we're inclined to believe that the fall fever has hit the official scorers and that they are fast tiring of their jobs. A score by innings was the extent of the Baptist-Clinton record.

Speaking of scores we scent the real reason why the secretary of the league has never issued an official batting or fielding record of players. We agree with him that this task might better be left undone for there would certainly be some shouting if the statistics were compiled from the meager records at hand.

PRIZE BEAGLES TO ENTER FIELD TRIALS

Best of Smalley Kennels Will Be Entered in State Event Next Month.

W. L. Smalley, of this city, is preparing to enter the best of his kennels in the field trials of the New Jersey Beagle Club, which will be held at Lodi and, October 25.

Other beagle owners over the entire State are getting their dogs into condition for the trials of this year and the event promises to be the best in the history of the New Jersey club.

Charles Vogle, of Lynchburg, Va., will be judge at the trials of this year. He will be the guest of Mr. Smalley, in Plainfield, while in New Jersey.

The field trial committee is offering $100 in addition to cash prizes for winners of first, second and third places, silver cups for the winners in each race.

Mr. Smalley will enter Fantan, 2d, present champion, and a dog that has never been beaten in field trials. He will also put Prince Opal, another winner, and Sensation, who won in the New York trials last year, into the field. He will have three entries in the derbies.

Beagles for trials are bred and chosen, as are bird dogs or any dogs for bench show purposes, in other words, dependence is placed upon specialized families. Pace, nose, fingling and trailing are the essential qualities. Handling helps a great deal, but does not play the part it does in field trials of setters and pointers.

The beagle owner has one great advantage over pointer and setter men. He can compete with a pack of four, and if a club should so decree there may be stakes for eights and tens. Another advantage is that with a little experience he can train and handle his own hounds also as well as a professional.

Trainers and handlers of bird dogs chiefly are occupied with the difficult business of making them do things that they do not like to do. Managing beagles is only helping them do what they would instinctively do anyhow if there were not a human being within ten miles. Plenty of practice and reasonable attention to whistle or horn are about all that is needed to bring out what is born in them.

Separate stakes generally are provided for hounds of thirteen inches and under and for those between thirteen and fifteen inches. As the natural tendency is to breed larger all the time there is less difficulty in finding good hounds of near the fifteen inch limit.

Beagle character has its peculiarities, some of the little fellows being as friendly and jolly as spaniels. Some are suspicious and averse to human attention. Which of the two will make the best worker is impossible to tell. The jolly ones often are quitters when the real work begins. The sour ones often are the keenest, surest and best trailers.

CITY LEAGUERS MAY TAKE UP BASKETBALL

Whether or not members of the City Baseball League will organize a basketball association to play during the fall months will be discussed at a meeting to be held Friday night of this week. The meeting will be held in the office of The Daily Press. The basketball plan has been suggested, but has not yet been discussed by league members. President Dobbins will call it to their attention at the meeting of this week, so that plans for the organization can be worked out at once if the idea proves popular.

NO FOOTBALL CHANGES.

One hundred and sixty delegates, representing nearly every college and large preparatory school in the East, attended the annual meeting to consider football rules at the Hotel Biltmore, New York. No changes of moment were decided upon.

Your next new boarder is probably watching the classified ads just now—for "opportunity news."

SOUND FIRST CALL FOR FOOTBALISTS

Holy Cross Manager Preparing for a Hard Campaign During Coming Year.

Announcement was made last night that the Holy Cross football team, one of the strongest independent organizations of its kind in this part of the State, would be reorganized next week for the fall campaign. "Doc" Doyle will once more manage the team and is already formulating a schedule that has many old rivals on it and also several strong new ones.

Indications at present point to the return of almost all of the veteran players, including Bill Coyle, the quarterback who had his leg broken in a game last Thanksgiving Day. Coyle's return to the fold comes as a surprise to followers of the pastime, as it was generally believed that he would never don the moleskins again.

Jack Caulfield and "Turk" Webster will try out for the end positions; Glover and Mair will go in at guard; Bremble and Ruttledge are slated for the tackles and Stigliz will try for center. Captain Wilson will probably play fullback; Jack Ricketts will play left half; Coyle will be at quarter and Jerry Manning at left half. This is a tentative line-up made up of the most promising veterans, but a wealth of new material and last year's substitutes are available.

BIG FIELD SEEKS TITLE; THROCKMORTON FAVORED

More than 100 youthful wielders of the racquet competed yesterday in the first two rounds of the second annual metropolitan junior lawn tennis championship tournament on the clay courts of the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills, L. I., and in nearly every contest form was maintained. The principal upset of the first round was that of Goddard Saunders, who fell before the attack of Alfred Ehrman, who, by superior driving and fast court work, won a hard battle after deuce had been called several times in the first set.

C. S. Garland, who gave Harold A. Throckmorton, of Woodbridge, a good fight for the national interscholastic championship one week ago, and took a set from Clarence J. Griffin, of California, in the all-comers tournament, was one of the two players to reach the fourth round.

Throckmorton, who is well known in Plainfield, is favored for the title.

LOCAL BOY IDLE.

Play in the annual tournament for the intercollegiate lawn tennis championship, which was to have started yesterday on the courts of the Merion Cricket Club at Haverford, Pa., was postponed until today in order to give some of the contestants who had been in other tournaments last week another day's rest. Ludlow Van Deventer, of this city, is a member of the Princeton University team.

ARMY-NAVY GAME DATE.

One of the record football gatherings of the year is already assured for the Army-Navy game to be played in New York city on Saturday, November 27. Applications for seats and boxes began to accummulate as far back as May and there is every reason to believe that the Polo Grounds will hold the largest number of spectators in its history when the two United States academy elevens line up for the final game of the season.

BRUNSWICK GETS PLUM.

The national seven-mile walking and ten mile running championships which last year were contested at South Field, Columbia University, will be staged this year under the auspices of the Johnson and Johnson Athletic Association at New Brunswick, on October 23. The dates were decided yesterday by the Amateur Athletic Union.

WHAT PHILLIES MUST DO TO COP THE LEAGUE FLAG

The Phillies have 24 more games to play before the close of the season. Brooklyn has 20 and Boston 22.

If the Phillies win 19 out of 24 games they will win the pennant with 93 games won and 61 lost, a percentage of .604. The best Boston and Brooklyn could do by winning every game would be to tie for second place with an average of .579.

If the Phillies win 18 out of 24 and Boston and Brooklyn win all their games, the three teams would be tied for first place with 92 games won and 62 lost, an average of .573.

If the Phillies should win 15 out of 24 they would have a percentage of .578, and Brooklyn would have to win 17 out of 20 and Boston 19 out of 22 to tie.

If the Phillies should win only half of their remaining 24 games they would finish with a percentage of .558, and Brooklyn would have to win 14 out of 20 and Boston 16 out of 22 to tie.

The above figures are based on the completed schedules of each of the three teams, as no provision can be made for games lost through postponement.

U. S. GOLF ASSOCIATION FAVORS NEW DEPARTURE

The United States Golf Association has decided to eliminate the process of handicapping the players of the United States. Instead, the executive committee has decided to select a list of players who are considered by the officials as being of championship eligibility.

In other words, the present system is applicable more to medal than match play. It is planned to have various sectional associations first decide among themselves the merits of the golfers from the respective sections, naming those considered eligible to compete in the national amateur championship. The separate findings will be submitted to the parent organization and the collective list will designate the list of those eligible.

It is considered by officials that the present method of handicapping has failed to cover the situation, for the reason that a man may be an indifferent medal player and at the same time a very able match player. Sectional bodies will be instructed to take into due consideration the match playability of each of its players in considering its list of eligibles.

DATES ANNOUNCED FOR WOMEN'S GOLF EVENTS

Eight events for women golfers have been scheduled for the fall season of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association. Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers, Mrs. R. Story Rowland and Mrs. C. B. Lawrence, of this city, are members of the association. Seven of these are one-day medal play handicaps, which have proved so popular in the last two years.

The first will be held today at the Forest Hill Field Club, and the next competition will be a two-day invitation affair at the Nassau Country Club on September 23 and 24. The date assigned the Lakewood Country Club, October 21, is subject to change. The list of tournaments follow: September 14, Forest Hill Field Club; September 23-24, Nassau Country Club (invitation); October 5, Baltusrol Golf Club; October 8, Scarsdale Golf and Country Club, October 11, Century Country Club; October 14, Piping Rock Club; October 19, Fox Hills Golf Club; October 21, Lakewood Country Club.

BOARD YIELDS TO PARENTS REQUEST

East End Children to Have Ample School Accommodations.

OBJECTIONS OVERCOME

Delegation of Citizens Show School Authorities the Need for Continuing Last Year's Arrangement—New Building to Be Erected.

The skies have cleared in the East End in respect to the school situation, and as a result of a conference between the local Board of Education and a representative body of residents of the Netherwood section last night, arrangements satisfactory to all parties are about to be made whereby the children of that neighborhood will be accommodated with the same school privileges that they had last year. If no unlooked for objection arises, the present Netherwodo Reformed church, a portable building on Leland avenue, will be adapted for that purpose.

The arrival of a delegation of mothers and fathers of children of the Netherwood section of the city and the free discussion of school matters which took place between them and the members of the Board of Education, was the only unusual incident in an otherwise spiritless meeting. President Archibald Cox suggested that the order of business be suspended in order to hear from members of the delegation, and over a dozen of them walked in and took chairs in the Board room.

Edward W. Hughes and Samuel S. Rush were the principal spokesmen for the visitors, with able assistance from Mrs. Rush and Robert Newton Crane to clear up any obscure points. It was a free-for-all discussion, the delegates pretty generally accepting President Cox's invitation to speak.

Coming some of them, especially the mothers, in a belligerent mood, the outcome of the meeting was so entirely satisfactory that the most friendly spirit prevailed upon their departure. They found the Board willing to meet them at every point, and by Monday at the latest the Netherwood tots will be back in the portable building where they spent so many pleasant hours last year.

Mr. Hughes opened the discussion for the delegation. He outlined the situation, calling atention to the absence of school facilitis in the district and voiced the objections of

FOUR SIDEWALK RIDERS FELL INTO POLICE NET

In an effort to break up the practice certain cyclists have made of using the sidewalk on East Fourth street, between Watchung avenue and Richmond street, as a speedway, Acting Chief John J. Flynn detailed Patrolman John Neylon to that section yesterday afternoon and the result was four arrests. In the city court this morning each of the offenders was fined $10 with the option of spending twenty days in the county jail, but this was later rescinded to be enforced for a second violation.

The men arrested were Samuel Meyers, Samuel Hannigan, Edward Danbridge, Edward Shultz. All were given reprimands by the court.

MRS. PERCY H. STEWART LEAVES STATE BOARD

The resignation of Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, of West Eighth street, as a member of the Board of Managers of the New Jersey Reformatory for Women at Clinton, was received and accepted by Governor Fielder yesterday. Mrs. Stewart wanted to resign about six months ago, but was prevailed upon by the Governor to stay in the board. The appointment of James E. Broadhead, of Flemington, to succeed Knox Taylor as a member of the same board was also announced yesterday. Mr. Brodhead is well known throughout this section.

ITALIAN ARRESTED.

Patrolman Martin Welsh yesterday afternoon arrested Michael Fandor, an Italian, who is charged with a serious offense said to have been committed between Eighth and Ninth streets, on Park avenue, yesterday afternoon. He will be arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this afternoon.

MISS NICHOLS BRIDE OF HARRY H. SCHUCK

Rev. Charles S. Gillespie Officiates at Wedding of Popular Boro Couple.

Miss Florence Elizabeth Nichols, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Nichols, of 150 Grove street, the borough, and Harry H. Schuck, also of the borough, were married at 6 o'clock last night at the home of the bride, Rev. C. S. Gillespie, of Grace M. E. church, officiating. The bride was attended by Miss Ethel M. Ball, of Linden avenue, as bridesmaid, and Benjamin Schuck was his brother's best man. The ushers were brothers of the bride and groom, Charles A. Nichols, Monroe A. Nichols, Frank Schuck, Jr., and Grover Schuck.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white crepe silk crepe de chine, trimmed with duchesse lace. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid was gowned in blue similarly to the bride. She carried a bouquet of rosebuds.

The wedding march was played by Miss Alice J. Carroll, organist of Grace M. E. church, the bride having been a member of the choir for a number of years. The music for the reception which followed was furnished by William N. Runyon, piano, Kenneth Stuart, violin; Louis Clauss, flute, and Herbert B. Smith, 'cello, comprising a volunteer orchestra from the Plainfield Musicians' Union as a compliment to the bride, whose father, Charles A. Nichols, is secretary of the union.

The decorations were elaborate, the entire lower floor being decorated with palms, ferns, arches of trailing vines, plants and cut flowers. The orchestra was seated in a trellis arched alcove. The decorations were in charge of the young people of Grace M. E. church.

During the reception congratulations were offered and supper served, after which the time was occupied in merry-making, music and dancing. Later the couple left in an automobile for Bound Brook, from which place they took a train to Philadelphia. While making their departure from the house the couple was deluged with rice and confetti. Beside Monroe A. Nichols, a brother of the bride accompanied by a crowd of young people took an automobile to Bound Brook, arriving at the station in time to give the coupe another "send-off."

After a trip through Pennsylvania and a visit to Atlantic City, the couple will reside at 20 Vine street, which property was recently purchased by the groom. The bride has, for several years, been identified with social and church activities in the borough, having come here with her parents from Morrisville, Vermont. The groom has always resided in the borough, where he has been an active fireman. He is now captain of the borough fire department and is in the employ of the New York Telephone Company. The bride received a large number of gifts.

"MAXIMUS" LEASES NEW QUARTERS ON PARK AVE.

The office and gymnasium of Max Maximoff, known to his patrons and the general public as "Maximus," has been moved from his old place at 69 Grove street to 1380 Park avenue. Business men of Plainfield and others who want their tired, flabby muscles built up through his system of exercise and training will find him at the new gymnasium, with new apparatus and furnishings.

Mr. Maximoff has provided accommodations for patients in his new quarters, and will keep a limited number under his personal care, where they can get the benefit of his advice as to the proper method of living at all times. Handball, basketball and tennis courts are new features of the gymnasium. Horseback riding will also be a part of his course in man building. The quarters secured by Mr. Maximoff for his new gymnasium were formerly occupied by the Woodbrook farm offices. Men, women and children will be accepted for his course in training.

SENIOR CLASS ELECTS.

The senior class of the North Plainfield High School yesterday elected the following officers for the ensuing school year: Oscar Dilts, president; Florence Roddy, vice-president; Margaret Ewart, secretary; Marjorie Burtis, treasurer, and John Dowe and Lawrence Robinson, members of the student council.

SEEKS TO COMPEL WILL ACCOUNTING

Rose Noethiger Claims Her Full Share is Withheld From Clark Estate.

SUIT IS THREATENED

Executors, One of Whom is Walter Clark, of This City, Cited to Show Cause Why Petitioner's Application Should Not Be Granted.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 15.—Alleging that the executors of the estate of Heman Thomas Clark, a deceased brother of Walter and Charles Clark of Plainfield, are wrongfully withholding from her the full share due her from the estate, Rose No thiger of Brooklyn, has filed a petition with Surrogate Herbert T. Ketcham asking him to compel the executors to file an accounting of their trust with the court. The executors are Nettie A. Kert and Margaret C. Lavin, both of Portchester, N. Y., and Walter Clark, of Plainfield, sisters and brother of the testator.

Surrogate Ketcham has directed that a citation be served upon the executors ordering them to appear before him at half past ten next Tuesday morning to show cause why the petitioner's application should not be granted.

Should the executors fail to appear on Tuesday the Surrogate has the power to issue to them a command to file an accounting of their trust within a certain number of days. Should they then fail to obey the order, upon the application of the petitioner the Surrogate will have the power to issue warrants for the trio, have them handed to the Sheriff, commanding him and his deputies to seize them, if caught within the border-line of the county, and have them brought into court before him to show cause why they should not be jailed for contempt of court.

The fight over the distribution of the estate is the second since the testator's death and, unless quickly "hushed up" and amicably settled out of court, certain secrets may leak out.

Mr. Clark, who was 47 years old, a native of New York city, died, following an operation, at the Presbyterian Hospital, New York city, on August 30, 1914, leaving a net estate, appraised recently by one of the Transfer Tax State Appraisers, at $137,778.06, which in his will, executed on August 4, 1914, he directed to be distributed, as follows:

Mary McCarthy, aunt, of New York, $1,000; Rose Noethiger, friend, of Brooklyn, $13,544.25, to an uncle and two aunts, Milton Clark, Hannah Wadsworth and Jane Tyler, all of Garretsville, O., each, $250, two cousins, Nettie Stanley and Colleen H. Green, both also of Garretsville, O., each, $125, the Greenwood Union cemetery, of Rye, N. Y., $200 for the caring of his grave; Marguerite Clark Wessells and George Wesley Clark, daughter and son, both of Carmel, N. Y., each, $100.

The rest of the estate, $91,833.95, equally between two sisters and three brothers, Nettie A. Kert and Mar-

CUSTOMER TOLD FISHMAN WHAT TO DO WITH REFUSE

Benjamin Sebastine, of Elizabeth street, New York city, was arraigned in the city court this morning, charged with cleaning fish on the back porch of Patrolman Dunlap's home at 28 Mariners place, and throwing the refuse into the back yard. According to Dunlap, the defendant, who is a fish peddler, makes weekly trips to the city for the purpose of serving his patrons, one of whom lives in a flat above the policeman.

Dunlap claims that he caught him throwing the refuse away yesterday, and called Health Officer Randolph Chandler's attention to the fact. In the city court Sebastine admitted doing this but claimed the woman upstairs told him to do it. She appeared in court and corroborated the defendant's testimony and further stated that she personally cleaned up the refuse. On the strength of this assertion the court allowed Sebastine to go, at the same time reminding him that he must not repeat the offense.

"SHIRTWAIST DANCE."

The first social event of the fall to be given under the auspices of St. Mary's Social Club, will be in the form of a "shirtwaist reception," to be held in T. A. B. Hall, on West Fourth street, next Tuesday night. The committee in charge have arranged several attractive features for the evening, and a good time is assured all who attend. The committee is composed of the following young women: Misses Catherine Regan, Margaret Mottley, Margaret McCarthy, Catherine Neylon and Marion McDonald.

AUTOMOBILE ENGINE GIVEN SEVERE TEST

Outside of a Few Accidents to the Machine It is Still Considered "a Bargain."

Barring the breaking of a leaf in the fan, the punching of a hole in the radiator, a subsequent stop for repairs, a second one to fill the heated radiator with cool water, and a minor shortage in its pumping capacity, Plainfield's new automobile fire engine—or, at least, it will be Plainfield's if the Councilmanic committee decides to purchase it—came out of a severe test yesterday with flying colors.

The test was official and was conducted by Fire Chief T. O. Doane, who is optimistic over the result. The engine was run for more than forty miles over the roughest roads and steepest hills that could be found in this vicinity, and then hooked up to a fire hydrant and made to pump water for thre hours. It pumped to the satisfaction of the fire-fighters and did not get "unduly heated," according to the official comment on the test. After this performance the engine was made to force water through a 1½-inch nozzle for ten minutes in order to test its power. It failed to develop the guaranteed capacity of 700 gallons per minute, but failed by such a narrow margin that this will not cause its rejection. A shortage of eight gallons per minute will not mitigate against the usefulness of the engine, according to Chief Doane.

The engine on probation with the local fire department is a motor-driven apparatus, with motor-driven pump manufactured by the Nott Motor Fire Engine Company, of Minneapolis. It has been here on trial for two months, and its purchase will probably be recommended by the Councilmanic fire committee within a short time.

The engine is a "bargain." Its catalogue price is $8,000, but it has been offered to the city of Plainfield at a reduction of $1,500, and a city official said yesterday that it would not cost even $6,500.

"We can get it for less than that," he told a Press reporter, but did not explain why the Nott Company was offering its engines, or this particular engine, at reduced prices.

Chief Doane was pleased with the showing made by the engine, although he would not say that he recommended the purchase of the apparatus until an expert hired by the city has made a thorough examination of the bearings in order to see how they stood the hard run and pumping test of yesterday.

"It was a severe test," the chief told a Press reporter. "We put the required 1,000 feet of hose on the engine, filled the chemical tank and made it carry five men. The run and pump test was made under the supervision of Councilman Graves and myself and an expert on gasoline engines hired for the day. Instead of picking good roads we hunted the roughest we could find, with the steepest and longest hills. Just before we reached Madison a leaf on the fan broke, and the flying part punctured the radiator. It was necessary to take the radiator completely off and repair this hole. After it was plugged we continued the run, without using the fan, and it was necessary to stop but once coming back from Madison to put cool water in the radiator. If the bearings show up well I will be satisfied with the work of the engine, and believe it will be a bargain."

ARREST OF CARPENTER MAY PROVE AN IMPORTANT ONE

Charged by the police department and certain Netherwood residents with a serious offense, John Carpenter, colored, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning, being represented by Harry C. Runyon, as counsel. In order to afford the police a chance to conduct a further investigation into the case the court postponed the hearing until tomorrow morning and Carpenter was remanded until that time.

The arrest came as the result of a long period of surveillance on the part of the department and it is believed that the man's apprehension will break up a degrading practice that has been going on for some time past.

CASE POSTPONED.

Martin Stutsman, representing Abram Deutch, of West Third street, in the city court this morning made application for an adjournment of the case against his client to next Tuesday morning, and Judge DeMeza granted the same, holding the defendant in bonds of $50. Deutch is charged by the Board of Health with killing a calf and some chickens in his butcher shop on West Third street and allowing the refuse to accumulate.

TWO PRIZES FOR PLAINFIELD ELKS

Local Delegation Made Neat Appearance at Atlantic City Convention.

BEST FLOAT IN PARADE

Attractive Regalia and Big Representation Draws Much Praise—Made Trip in Special Train—Somerville Also Represented.

In possession of the award for turning out the most attractive float and another prize for making the neatest appearance, the delegation from Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E., returned home at an early hour this morning enthusiastic over their sucesses scored at the second annual reunion and parade of the New Jersey State Elks' Association in Atlantic City yesterday. It was without a doubt the best showing the local lodge has ever made in a demonstration of this nature, and words of praise came from every side. Plainfield's float was an elaborately decorated truck, with a lifesize elk adorning the middle, around which was a bevy of handsomely-gowned women friends of the organization. The localites had two bands in their section of the parade, and wore attractive and distinctive uniforms of Palm Beach suits, braided with purple, and white hats, edged with purple. Each member carried a bamboo cane. The special train carrying the Plainfielders to and from the shore was piloted by Engineer Dunham, and made the trip in good time, without a hitch. A large representation of lady friends of the lodge made the trip and added much to the showing.

The reunion was a dazzling success, 15,000 Elks being in attendance. The parade was witnessed by 60,000 persons, and no lodge was represented by less than 150 marchers. Elizabeth presented a brilliant appearance in long purple coats and white hats and trousers. Newark turned out the largest number of men and wore blue coats and white trousers. Somerville, New Brunswick, Red Bank, Irvington and Kearny were also represented.

At the meeting of the delegates, besides Joseph B. Payton, of Jersey City, president, these officers were elected: Harry Waddell, Paterson, vice-president, northwest district; Fred Pope, Somerville, vice-president, southwest district; H. E. Pickersgill, Perth Amboy, vice-president, south district; M. J. McKernan, Orange, secretary; Fred C. Muller, Atlantic City, treasurer, and Richard P. Rooney, Newark, sergeant at-arms.

The prize winners in the parade today were: Lodge having greatest number in line, Newark Lodge, No. 21; lodge making best appearance in line, Plainfield Lodge, No. 885; lodge having the most unique uniforms, Elizabeth Lodge, No. 289; lodge having most attractive float, Plainfield Lodge, No. 885; lodge having best band in line, Trenton Lodge, No. 105; special prizes for appearances and numbers, Trenton, Camden and Perth Amboy.

REGISTRATION WAS LIGHT IN THE CITY

About 250 Voters Appeared at the Various Polling Places Yesterday.

Registration figures totaling about 250 were reported by the local Election Board when the polls closed at 9 o'clock last night. Those who failed to register yeserday and who did not vote at the last general election will not be eligible to cast a ballot at the primaries, but will be given an opportunity at that time to qualify themselves for voting at the next general election.

Registration day in the borough yesterday brought out 318 voters for the lists, about one-quarter the full voting population. While no figures were obtainable on account of the absence from town of Borough Clerk Dolliver, it is known that the figures represent an increase over those for the first registration day last year. Last year 1,052 votes were cast in the general election in November. It is estimtaed that there are about 1,200 legal voters in the borough.

The largest number registered in any one district was in the Fourth district, 112. The Second district gav the largest increase over last year, there being nearly three times as many voters registered yesterday in that district as there were last year. The figures are as follows:

First district, 49; Second district, 72; Third district, 42; Fourth district, 112; Fifth district, 43.

SCHOOLS CLOSE ON ACCOUNT OF HEAT

No Session Held This Afternoon Owing to the Excessive Warm Weather.

Because of the excessive heat all pupils in the graded schools in the city of Plainfield were dismissed at 1 o'clock today and there was no school this afternoon. Many of the younger students suffered from the heat in the school rooms and were unable to do their best work.

Plainfielders need not complain too much about the heat, for the thermometer has not reached anywhere near the high mark for temperature in Plainfield yet. It has still about ten degrees to climb before touching the record hot day in 1905. It was on September 21 and 22, too, a week later than today, and the thermometer rose to 102. That was the highest temperature ever recorded in Plainfield.

DAILY WAR COST NOW $21,000,000

England Moves to Increase Credits of Nation to $6,310,000,000.

ASQUITH IS OPTIMISTIC

Allies Have Strengthened Positions, He Says—Victory Will Come to Side That Can Last the Longest—To Conscript British Soldiers.

London, Sept. 15.—The cost of carrying on the war has risen to $21,000,000 a day. Official announcement to this effect was made in Parliament today by Premier Asquith.

The Premier admitted that for three weeks the recruiting figures have been falling off. This statement was regarded as significant in view of the possibility of conscription. Premier Asquith moved a new vote of credit of $1,250,000,000, which, taken with credits already voted, amounts to $6,310,000,000.

The Premier declared that the Allies' positions in Belgium and France have been greatly strengthened and that reinforcements have been sent to the Dardanelles to help in another great effort to force open the way to Constantinople. High praise was given the Russians for their ability to retreat with an unbroken front. Premier Asquith did not give way to exaggerated optimism.

He said: "Victory will be very likely to incline to the side that can stay the longest and that is what we propose to do. We have vastly exceeded any standard dreamed of before the war began and as the war has gone on the standard has been raised.

"At the Dardanelles the Allies have established a front more than twelve miles long on the Gallipoli Peninsula."

The Premier announced satisfactory progress in the acceleration of production of munition. It was reported that twenty more factories for output of shells have been established since David Lloyd George was made minister of munitions and 18 others are being erected. Premier Asquith predicted that in the near future the cost of the war would rise to $25,000,000 a day. The credit now sought by the government will be sufficient to run the war until the third week of November, when more money will be necessary. It cost the British treasury $1,858,000,000 to carry on the war from April 1 to September 11, including all expenditures for army and navy. He announced that three million men had enlisted since the war began. It was also stated that the work of national registration is incomplete.

May Hold Up War Loan.

Washington, Sept. 15.—Complaints against the consummation of the loan sought by the Allied governments, now the subject of conferences in New York, began to pour into the White House today. The names of the protestants were not made public. The White House was silent on the matter, Secretary Tumulty merely acknowledging that the complaints were being received in increasing numbers. Possible official objection to the loan was hinted at by the State Department today. It is possible that a distinction may be made by the Administration between credit loans extended to belligerents under the provisions of which all of the money loaned must be expended in the United States and the actual supplying of gold to the countries at war by American bankers.

Roumania Mobilizing?

Rome, Sept. 14.—An Athens telegram to the Idea Nazionale today says Roumania has ordered mobilization against Austria. The report is not confirmed. A London Times despatch says freight traffic on the Roumanian railways has been suspended.

Germany Repudiate Acts.

Berlin, Sept. 15.—The following official item was given out by the Overseas News Bureau today:

"Recently arrived German newspapers from the United States contained the text of a pamphlet advising the destruction of American factories that are now making munitions of war. Such a practice is officially designated as stupid and dangerous. This agitation is evidently fostered by hot-headed private citizens who are misled and not by any newspaper."

Despite the violence of Russian counter attacks the Germans continue to advance in Poland. In Southern Poland the Russians that are retreating toward Pinsk are being hotly pursued by Field Marshal Von Mackensen.

Several have finished among the leaders in previous tourneys at the club, and are expected to return near the top this time. Both teams have paired together before and are sure to be among the leaders, while other local players, who are newcomers in tournaments, may prove to be of excellent merit.

A Galley o' Fun!

HIS PREFERENCE.

"A traveling company of more or less merit is going to play Sappho at the Op'ry House tonight, at ten, twenty, and thirty cents admission," remarked the Old Codger, with his usual pessimistiacridity. "But I guess I'll just stay at home and smoke in comfort and look at the corset advertisements in the fashion magazines."

THE BEAUX.

Well, my sister's got a beau,
An' he comes 'most every night,
An' he wants the gas so low
That there's hardly any light!
An' Nell likes him lots, I guess,
'Cause she watches on the sly
An' takes hours an' hours to dress
An' is allus sweet as pie.

I must call him "Mr. Fenn;"
An' Nell calls him "Mister," too,
'Cept when they're alone, an' then
She keeps gigglin' at him: "Lew!"
But one time I sneaked up near
When they thought I wasn't 'round,
An' I heard her call him "dear"
An' a funny kissin' sound!

He can throw a snake-curve ball,
An' can mew an' bark an' quack,
An' he doesn't mind at all
When I pin things on his back.
Often evenin's when he comes
I'm downstairs till after eight
While he helps me do my sums,
Tho' Nell fidgets 'cause it's late.

Onct when he was here I said:
"Say! Why don't you marry Nell?"
An' they sent me straight to bed
'Fore he had a chance to tell!
But I'll ask again, sometime,
'Cause Miss Sommers wants to know;
An' she says, she'll bet a dime
That he's only jest a beau!

THE BEST.

Willis—What is the happiest moment of married life?

Gillis—When a man throws the pictures of his wife's relatives out of the family album and fills it up with photographs of his baby instead.

HONORS.

Customer—I didn't see as your car won any prize in that race. What are you blowing about?

Auto Dealer—Sir! We had a higher percentage of drivers finish alive than any other firm!

HONESTY.

The personage toyed with her lorgnette. "Have you any children?" she asked by way of introduction.

The Housewife trembled. Dared she confess the truth, with all there was at stake? And still she could not lie. "Yes!" she faltered faintly.

The Personage started, stared, and at length burst out laughing. "Your honesty," she protested, "is in such refreshing contrast with much that I encounter that, by way of showing my appreciation, I will accept employment with you, provided, of course, that I shall have Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays free, with the use of the entire lower part of the house at any time to entertain company."

That evening the Housewife, in a hushed voice, told her Husband of her great good fortune. He was deeply affected. "Honesty is the best policy!" he exclaimed, with glistening eyes.

TRAITOR!

Hungry Artist—Ah, see what I have! I was going to buy an apple for three cents, but finally persuaded the shopkeeper to sell me two for five.

Hungrier Ditto—Base churl! I see that even you, too, have caught the sordid spirit of commercialism!

Rent one of your rooms and reduce your own rent materially. It's a simple and sensible plan—and it works.

FREDERICK JEFFERY'S FUNERAL HELD TODAY

The funeral of Frederick Jeffery, the nineteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William Jeffery, of Plainfield avenue, Berkeley Heights, who died Monday in the Overlook Hospital, Summit, following an operation for appendicitis, was held this morning at 11 o'clock in the Berkeley Lyceum. The service was conducted by Rev. N. S. Reeves, pastor of the Presbyterian church and interment was made in the New Providence Presbyterian cemetery.

Mr. Jeffery was born in Elizabeth in 1896, and was the third son of Mr. and Mrs. Jefferey. He was one of four sons who received widespread publicity several years ago, when they lived in a bungalow apart from that in which the parents lived, doing their own housework, disciplining themselves and living on a unique scheme of independence from their parents. He was one of the best of all-round athletes in the valley, being a member of the Highlander Athletic Association.

Surviving the young man are his parents, and the following brothers and sisters: William, Jr., Charles, Richard, Ernest, Thomas, Mildred and Dorothy Jefferey.

JITNEY BUS ON RAMPAGE INJURIES THREE PEOPLE

Risking his own life and that of his wife, Sol Slonim, of New Brunswick, and brother of Leo Slonim, of this city, drove his Buick touring car upon the sidewalk and crashed into the Methodist church, at George and Church streets, New Brunswick, Monday, rather than run down Jimmie Reed, son of James Reed, a grocer, of that place. Slonim was driving his car on George street, and on reaching the corner noticed a big truck coming up Liberty street and an automobile coming from an opposite direction.

Young Reed, at this juncture, ran directly across his path on a bicycle. To avoid striking the boy, Mr. Slonim drove his car up on to the sidewalk, the momentum causing it to strike the corner of the First M. E. church. Reed was struck by the left mudguard, but escaped with no injury. Mrs. Slonim, who sat in the front seat with her husband, was thrown against the windshield, which was shattered, and received several lacerations on her left arm and chin. Her wounds were treated by a nearby physician, after which she and Mr. Slonim were driven to their home, on George street, in another car.

INJUNCTION IS DENIED.

New York, Sept. 15.—Judge Rellstab, in the Federal District Court, has denied the application for a temporary injunction made by the United Profit Sharing Corporation to prevent the Southern Cotton Oil Company from selling its products without coupons. It is understood that suit is being contemplated by the United Corporation against the Cotton Oil Company for breach of contract.

Yellowstone Park Fossils.

Of the fossil forests which have so far been discovered probably the most remarkable is to be seen in Yellowstone park, where the greater part of the trees stand upright in their natural position instead of being recumbent and scattered about the ground, as in other parts of the world. In Arizona the fossilized trunks have evidently been carried a long distance from where they originally grew. In the Yellowstone the trees now stand where they grew and where they were entombed by the outpouring of various volcanic materials.

Now as the softer rocks surrounding them are gradually worn away they are left standing erect on the steep hillsides just as they stood when they were living. In fact, it is difficult at a little distance to distinguish some of these fossil trunks from the lichen covered stumps of kindred living species.

It should not be supposed, however, that these trees still retain their limbs and smaller branches, for the mass of volcanic material falling on them stripped the trunks bare.

Our First Naval Hero.

The first naval hero of the United States—now almost forgotten—was Jeremiah O'Brien, a Maine man, whose racial descent is clearly indicated by his name. He commanded an American vessel in the first naval battle of the Revolution, which was fought near Machias, Me., June 12, 1775. Some little time before an English schooner, the Margranetto, was at Machias, and a number of people of the town, led by Jeremiah O'Brien and Benjamin Foster, conspired to capture her. The attempt was successful, and, with O'Brien in command, the Margranetto made a voyage to the bay of Fundy. An English schooner and tender were sent out to look for the Margranetto, and when O'Brien returned to Machias he found them awaiting him. The first naval battle of the United States was fought then and there, and O'Brien and his men added the schooner and tender to their prizes.—New York World.

Speed of Light.

The specific speed of cosmic energy as adopted by the United States government and published in the National Almanac is 186,324 statute miles per second. It is well for the reader to pause and think of this fact and permit the mind to again revert to it during the day and during life. This number, 186,324, cost 220 years of arduous labor, beginning with Roemer, the Danish astronomer, in 1675, in his now classic and historic researches on the motions of the moons of Jupiter to determine the velocity of light. This final result is that obtained by the great masters, Newcomb and Michelson. And as this value of the speed of light has also been adopted by the Paris conference of astronomers and physicists it is final.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

Advice to Young People.

Be not a counterfeiter, my boy. Counterfeits don't make good.

Seek public office if you will, but where many things occur, few take place.

My daughter, always give the census taker your present husband's name. Why confuse him with a recital of past divorce or future alimony?

Ability, my children, is not all of one kind. One man gets what he wants because we like his amiability; another because we fear his irritability. Some professors are accounted wise because of their incomprehensibility, and I know a man who draws a pension for total disability.

My boy, I hope they'll call you "the salt of the earth;" but have some ginger and pepper on your mental premises, too.—Judge.

If your property is really "worthwhile," make that clear in your classified advertising—and you'll sell it.

George Hirtzel, Jr., president of the Elks' Senior Bowling League, has sent out notices to the various teams on the circuit for the annual meeting which will be held at the Jersey City clubhouse, Sunday, September 26, at 3 o'clock. At this time the officers for the coming year will be named and schedule of games adopted. Applications for membership will also be considered.

WAR NEWS

Marine today:

"The appearance of German submarines on the coast off the mouths of the Loire and the Gironde ought not to alarm the maritime population. The Ministry of Marine long ago took the necessary precautions against aggressions by the German submarines. The existing naval units have already been reinforced and will be further reinforced if it appears necessary, more than in the English Channel, where the defense has been so efficacious and practical. The Germans, acting in violation of the laws of nations and the most elementary principles of humanity, will be able to succeed only in a few isolated deeds."

Hand-Fighting In France.

French war statement: In Artois the sectors of Neuville and of Bretencourt there were combats with grenades, accompanied by some artillery engagements. A battle with bombs occurred in the region of Lisons, west of Chaulnes, and in the forest of St Mard, east of Tracy Le Val. There was rather a violent cannonade north of the camp of Chalons and a mine conflict in the western part of the Argonne."

Huge Crowds at Parliament.

London, Sept. 15.—Announcement that Premier Asquith and Lord Kitchener would make important statements on the financial situation and the conduct of the war brought huge crowds to today's session of Parliament.

German Airship Damaged.

A German airship, badly damaged by Russian gun fire, has descended at Koenigsburg, East Prussia, according to an Amsterdam despatch. It is believed to have been one of those which participated in the air raid on the Gulf of Riga.

No War On Roumania.

Bucharest, Sept. 15.—The measures which Austro-Hungary has taken on the Roumanian frontier are not to be considered as hostile actions but as an anti-espionage campaign to prevent agents of hostile countries learning of movements of Austro-German troops, according to a statement made by the Charge D Affaires of the Austro-Hungarian Legation here.

Holy Land An Armed Camp.

Jerusalem, Sept. 15.—Nearly the entire Holy Land has been transformed today into a military camp. Soldiers are manoeuvring every day on the Mount of Olives and at Golgotha and Jerusalem.

The English, French and Russian convents have been turned into barracks, and between Judea and Jericho, where transportation was by mule pack in the days when Christ came to bring "peace on earth," a road is being constructed for armored motor cars.

Close Belgium to Dutch.

Amsterdam, Sept. 15.—Dutch travelers arriving today from Antwerp state that the German military authorities intend closing Belgium to Dutch passenger traffic shortly. This indicates important troop movements in Belgium in the near future.

Norwegian Schooner Sunk.

Copenhagen, Sept. 15.—The Norwegian schooner Norfo, bound from Christiania with timber, has been sunk in the North Sea off the Naze, Norway, by a German submarine. Her crew was saved.

OUR CITIZEN'S DEMAND

Fully Complied With—A Plainfield Resident Furnished It.

There are few items which appear in this paper more important to Plainfield people than the statement published below. In the first place, it is from a citizen of Plainfield and can be thoroughly relied upon. In the second place, it indisputably proves that Doan's Kidney Pills do their work thoroughly and not temporarily. Read this carefully:

Mrs. S. Driscoll, 540 West Front street, Plainfield, says: "I had a dull pain across the small of my back and in my sides that clung to me constantly, and any hard work made me worse. I was subject to headaches and dizzy spells, especially when stooping or lifting, and I felt weak and run down. I tried plasters and other medicines, but nothing helped me until I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's Drug Store. They made a lasting cure."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Driscoll had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

SOMERVILLE WILL GIVE "VETS" CORDIAL RECEPTION

Somerville, N. J., Sept. 15.—Somerville will be gaily decorated tomorrow in honor of veterans of the 15th New Jersey Volunteers, survivors of the Civil War, who will hold their 36th annual reunion here. Merchants of the city are busy draping the fronts of their stores in the national colors and the entire city will practically be turned over to the veterans for the day.

James B. Duke has announced that his magnificent private park near here, which has been closed for some time, will be opened early in the morning and will be tendered the veterans and their friends for the reunion.

A business session will be held at 11:30 in the armory and dinner will be served at 1 p. m. in a local church. Joseph F. Frelinghuysen will be the principal orator.

RISKED HIS OWN LIFE TO PREVENT FATALITY

Somerville, N. J., Sept. 16.—One man slightly injured, two young women briused and badly frightened and a bicycle practicaly demolished were total results of a jitney bus rampage here this morning. The jitney went its way unhurt after the accident.

Harry Lake, chauffeur on the bus, which was owned by William Smith, a local grocer, struck a Polock on a bicycle on Main street early today. The man was knocked to the ground but was not badly hurt. His bicycle was destroyed. In attempting to keep from running over the fallen man Lake turned his machine toward the sidewalk, collided with a tree, and control of the steering apparatus again the jitney had climbed to the sidewalk, collided with tree, and caromed off to strike two young girls on their way to work. They were not badly hurt.

WESTERN WOMEN IMPROVED BY BALLOT

C. P. Connolly on Women Voters.

In the west men fall in love as foolishly, women are as charming and lovely, the percentage of politeness among the men is as great, and apple pies are just as good as they were before women secured the franchise.

This at least is the opinion of Mr. C P. Connolly of Orange, a noted investigator and writer, who is working hard to paint New Jersey in white on the suffrage map. Mr. Connolly, who is one of the most popular writers in Collier's and other magazines, speaks from experience gained in living and making investigations in the west. Writing in the Newark Call, he says:

"All the talk about woman suffrage being a failure in the west is pure moonshine. I became a convert to it because the things that I predicted and that others predicted, if it came to pass, did not come true.

"If woman suffrage did nothing else in the west it brought about the passing of the political boss and the political corners. Into politics there came a larger quota of men of independent spirit. The women rid the state of California of the Southern Pacific political machine, a task in which the men of California had signally failed for over thirty years.

"In every state where a great moral question has risen and where women have the right to vote the woman is always on the moral side, always on the side of the home."

LABOR WOMEN BATTLE FOR VOTE IN JERSEY.

The two eloquent Maggies, Maggie Hinchey and Maggie Foley, Melinda Scott, Florence Wattles, Mrs. Ella Reeves Bloor and Mrs. Antoinette Funk, all members of trade union leagues, constitute a strong body of suffrage speakers who have recently descended upon New Jersey to make an appeal to labor union men.

Melinda Scott and Margaret Hinchey, members of the Hat Trimmers and Laundry Workers' Unions respectively, have been lent to suffrage organizations in New Jersey by the Woman's Trade Union League of New York.

Miss Melinda Scott, a New Jersey citizen, beginning her campaign recently, urged the Essex Trades Council to lend their support to woman suffrage. She was greeted by the union with much applause.

"Women are going to get the vote," she asserted. "It is the next step in democracy. All women need the vote, but the working woman needs it worst of all, and for that reason you men of the labor movement should come forward and help us. We ask for the vote not as a favor but as a matter of justice.

"Women do a large share of the world's work. They have always worked, helping to clothe and feed the world, but in the past they have worked in the home. The introduction of machinery and the rise of the factory system has taken them out of the home into the workshop. You say that the place for the woman is in the home but you can't keep her there. There are 8,000,000 women working today under the same conditions as or worse than men. As Mr. Gompers says, suffrage is bound to come, and I want you, in spite of the action of the state federation, to lend us your aid."

SECRETARY WILSON TO SPEAK FOR WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Secretary of Labor William B. Wilson of President Wilson's cabinet will campaign in Pennsylvania in favor of the woman suffrage amendment to be submitted to the voters in that state Nov. 2. This distinguished labor advocate has risen to his present position through deep and intense study of conditions surrounding the toilers. Mr. Wilson will also have an opportunity to vote for the suffrage amendment because he is a resident of Pennsylvania. The other cabinet officers who will vote on the question of woman suffrage are Lindley M. Garrison of New Jersey, secretary of war; William Gibbs McAdoo, secretary of the treasury, and William C. Redfield, secretary of commerce, both of whom are residents of New York.

Do You Know—

That about a thousand times as many men as women are protected by an eight hour law?

That the federal government and about half the state governments protect their employees by an eight hour day and they employ many more men than women?

That Washington, California, Colorado and Arizona have eight hour laws for women?

That these are suffrage states?—Alice Duer Miller.

Good Templars For Suffrage.

At their recent annual state convention in the Foresters' hall, Paterson, the grand lodge of the Independent Order of Good Templars went on record as favoring woman suffrage.

Why?

Why should women be taxed to pay for the expenses of elections at which only men are allowed to vote?

Hardly had the document been filed for probate when objections were filed by decedent's son and daughter, who charged, among other things, that their father, at the time of the alleged execution of the instrument, if it was executed at all, was not in his right mind, and that its execution was obtained by fraud and undue influence practiced upon the decedent by the residuary legatees as well as by Rose Noethiger, and other persons, whose names to the contestants were unknown. Although a trial of the issues were asked to be reviewed by a jury under the new Surrogates' Court jury law, which was immediately granted to them, the case, before it came to trial, was privately settled out of court, and the objections were withdrawn.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Coach Ralph Patch issued his first call for football warriors yesterday afternoon and had the applicants out on Parker Field this afternoon. Among those who reported for the first work out were Bernard Miller, Donald Grossett, Sid Butler, Bill Daniels, Dick Pennock, Joe Mutnick, Sam Davidson and Morris Kline. Several of last year's men also reported among these being Clinton Berrien, Jim Noonan, Herb Peacock and Adam Dealaman.

Among the many "freshies" who inspected the High School walls for the first time yesterday were eighteen from St. Mary's. These children have entered the commercial, general, scientific and classical courses.

Supplementary examinations, which have been held during the past few days, terminated today. Many of the students, who either failed in a subject or desired to learn a little more of it, have been preparing for the supplementaries for some time, and many of them have, by virtue of their good work in the exams, advanced to the higher classes.

Henry R. Hubbard, assistant principal at Plainfield High School, announced this morning that the following pupils would act as ushers at all of the scholastic functions during the ensuing year: Irma Good, Marion Lockwood, Charlotte Taylor, Elizabeth Chickering, Augusta Allen, Florence Nielsen, LeRoy Apgar, Sheldon Coudray, Carlton Dunham, Herbert Peacock, William Wheelan, Richmond Ritterbusch.

The lunch counter opened for the first time today. The greater majority of the pupils took advantage of the oppertunity to obtain a light lunch without having to bring it to school with them or to go outside to purchase it.

BOARD YIELDS TO REQUEST

many against sending their little ones to the Lincoln school. He said that Father Bernard M. Bogan, of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, had stated that if there were fifty children who would attend a parochial school in the Netherwood section he would bring about the establishment of one. Mr. Hughes said that the Protestants there did not want to have to send their children to a Catholic institution.

As a solution of the school problem, Mr. Hughes suggested that the Board rent a vacant store, a dwelling house or the Fresh Air Camp; purchase a portable building or provide transportation for the children to and from the Lincoln School.

Mr. Rush and others spoke, and a lengthy discussion of the difficulties confronting both parties to the problem took place, in which the members of the board and Dr. Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of schools, explained the Board's position in the matter.

It developed that the Board has in mind a tract of land in the Netherwood section on which a school is to be located, but that the tract is tied up so that a clear title is not obtainable at the present time. This tract is in the geographical centre between the Lincoln School and city limits, Mr. Cox said, but further particulars as to location were withheld under the existing circumstancs. The Board expects to have a school building erected by next fall.

Replying to the suggestions made by Messrs. Hughes, Rush and the others, Dr. Maxson explained that the idea of renting a vacant store or house was all out of the question, and that he would oppose it. He said that the problem of light would be a formidable one to overcome while as to other necessary features he showed that no available building in the East End could be had. Dr. Maxson called attention to the fact that a classroom 20x30 feet is a small one, and that it would be impossible to find a house with rooms anywhere near that size. For temporary use, he said, it would not be practical to make extensive alterations. He doubted if the State authorities would permit Plainfield to use a building for school purposes in which adequate light was not obtainable.

The Fresh Air Camp was dismissed with a few words. The purchase of a portable building was not taken up seriously. At first all seemed to think the transportation idea was the best solution of the matter, bu the conversation turning to the church building, it developed that the church consistory would be willing to rent the building for the purpose, but as it has been sold, possession to be given when the new church building is completed, the consistory did not feel like offering the use of the building to the city for the few months which will elapse before the new structure is ready for use.

It was the opinion of those present last night that the new church building will not be finished by December the date set, and that some arrangement can be made with the church or the society that has contracted to purchase the building, whereby the school sessions may be continued until June, either in the portable building or in the new edifice, and upon the parents present expressing their satisfaction with that arrangement, the Board promised that the necessary alterations to fit it for use will be completed by Monday.

"Understand, it will be up to you when the pinch comes," declared President Cox, in concluding the conference, and with expressions of satisfaction at the outcome of the talk and prophecies that there will be a way provided by which the children can continue in school all this year either in the present church building or the new one, the visiting delegation withdrew.

It is understood that Dr. W. E. Stelle wishes to resign as school dentist. Applications from two other dentists for the position were in the hands of the board last night, but were not presented because no resignation from Dr. Stelle had been sent. The recommendation of the school committee that Clarence Beatty Shubert be engaged as mechanical drawing teacher at a salary of $1,100 a year, was adopted. Satisfactory progress on the Evergreen Avenue School was reported.

It was decided to advertise for bids for furniture for the Evergreen Avenue School, the bids to be in for the October meeting. In regard to evening schools, Dr. Maxon reported that there were ten classes last year and over 200 pupils. The evening school will meet this year in the High School building. Sessions will commence about October 1.

A report on the summer schools showed that there were 160 pupils in the school and that 105 won promotion. The expense was less than $1,000, and the saving to the Board, said Dr. Maxson's report, was at least $2,500, as it cut out a year's time for the pupils and saved the city the work of three teachers.

The financial statement showed that 5,084 persons used the High School pool last summer. The cost of operation was $704.07, and the receipts $708.89, leaving a credit balance of $4.82. There are items of coal, water, etc., to be figured in, however, which will likely place the balance on the debit side. It was stated that the recreation committee has still $1,133.50 at its disposal. An informal discussion of a name for the Evergreen Avenue School, at which nothing positive was decided, ended the meeting.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

"Robin Hood" and his merrie men will hold forth at Plainfield Theatre next Saturday matinee and night, when the De Koven Opera Company will present the all-star grand opera revival of De Koven's most famous work, "Robin Hood." The present elaborate presentation of this little masterpiece is the most ambitious effort yet made in the realm of light opera in this country, and it was the first of a series of revivals that are calculated to foster a tatste for a form of art that is in a languishing state. Originally produced twenty-three years ago, "Robin Hood" has enjoyed a career of remarkable prosperity. It has been performed more than seven thousand times, and the melody of its score and the wit of its book will live to give delight to generations yet unborn. "Robin Hood" has been given a worthy setting, and the production is an artistic as well as an elaborate one. The costumes have been designed with care and are of the period. To properly cast "Robin Hood" Reginald de Koven drew on the resources of the grand opera houses of this country and Europe. Ivy Scott, a famous prima donna, with a rare lyric voice, was secured from the Century Grand Opera, New York. In the cast are Ralph Brainard, James Stevens, Phil Branson, Cora Tracy, William Schuster, Tillie Salinger, Henry Hanlin, Marie McConnell, Sol Solomon and a superb chorus.

"The Only Girl," she of the lilting song and the graceful dance, is coming to the Plainfield Theatre, next Tuesday evening, to tell in a burst of song the tale of her trials and triumphs, her piques and relentings. It is a story of love and romance, seductively charming, embellished with coaxing melody and contagious comedy. "The Only Girl" is the collaborated work of Victor Herbert and Henry Blossom, and is presented by Joe Weber, who produced it at the Lyric Theatre, New York, where it ran for nearly one entire year. The chorus, while not large, the girls have been selected for their distinct types of beauty, and it is said to be more satisfying that a stage full of ordinary chorus girls. Another feature of the performance is an augmented orchestra.

CHRISTIAN FIELD.

The first fall meeting of the Missionary and Aid Society, of Warren chapel, will be held Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. An executive meeting will be held at 2 o'clock. A full attendance is requested. Plans for the winter work will be discussed. Refreshments will be served.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE.

Fatima, said to be an escaped dancer from the harem of the now deposed Sultan of Turkey, will appear tomorrow at Proctor's Theatre for three days. Fatima's dances are said to be phenomenal, which largely accounts for her stay of six weeks at a New York theatre, and a similar run at Chicago. These who witnessed the work of the Imperial Ballet Troupe during the past three days will appreciate this big act. The bill for the last half of the week is completed by five other acts of high calibre, including the following: Von Hampton and Schriner, comedians, who will make you laugh; a singing, talking, piano and dancing act, with Frank Tierney and Frances Hope; singing and banjo specialists, Howard and Ross, introducing grand opera selections; Milo Beldon and company, in a dramatic sketch, and Ortois Brothers, in a comedy bar act, which is sure to please. Several excellent photoplays are scheduled for the remainder of the week, and are of such a high standard that even the most critical will be pleased. The following are billed for this week: Tonight, "Eyes That See Not;" tomorrow, "The Scar," a Vitagraph production featuring Gladden James and Harry Morey; Friday, "The Tides of Time," with Mary Nash in the leading role, and another episode of "The Romance of Elaine;" Saturday, "June Friday," an Edison feature photoplay. Pathe news is shown every day because of its intense human interest.

DECLINES TO APPOINT DENTAL SOCIETY'S CHOICE

Trenton, Sept. 15. — Governor Fielder has refused to appoint to the State Board of Dental Examiners three men recommended for the appointment by the State Dental Society. The three dentists recommended were: Dr. Arthur L. Westcott, of Atlantic City; Dr. Chauncey M. F. Egel, of Westfield, and Dr. Richard S. Hopkins, of Newark.

In a letter to Secretary Forsyth, of the State Dental Society, Governor Fielder says the State Board is vested with important powers, and if the State is to be responsible for the acts of its members, it should have some voice in the selection of them. The law empowers the State society to select the appointees. On this point the Governor says:

"I am aware that I approved the law in question, but I prefer to acknowledge my mistake rather than to commit another by accepting the names you send me."

He says he does not know any of the gentlemen and does not question their qualifications. He only declines to appoint them because he is not permitted to exercise his judgment. He states that if the State society will send him three names for each appointment, with their qualifications specified, he will make the appointments.

PEACE BY ARBITRATION.

There is not the slightest sentiment for war in the United States and why certain newspapers keep harping upon it can only be explained in one way—they must be friends of the ammunition makers. So far as we can see there would be no cause for this country going to war in anything that any other nation has done to us or our citizens. It is not such a trival thing to go to war that we can do it as if we were going on a holiday excursion. To put this nation into war at this time and for any of the causes arising out of the Lusitania incident or other similar incidents, even conceding these incidents to have been a violation of international law, seems an indefensible policy.

Is this Republic to kill a million of its citizens because a few dozen of them were unpatriotic enough to do an act, by the doing of which they must have known they might involve their country in war? If one is a patriot he will not do that which may possibly make trouble for his country. But, why go to war about any matter that can be compensated for by an award of arbitrators or through diplomacy?

America has always stood for the settlement of every controversy—save a matter of pure honor—by arbitration. If Germany has violated international law, as we think she has, why not make her pay for it? It is very fine to reply to this suggestion by saying "money will not puhish," but suppose that were true (which we doubt in her present financial condition), what advantage would it be to us to kill a few more of her citizens and a vast body of our own?

War is barbarism. It should be absolutely impossible on any pretext. A tribunal that decides against a nation for its inhumanity, under international law, humiliates that nation in the eyes of the other people of the world, quite as much as to defeat it in battle. And the result thus accomplished is, without sacrificing American lives and bringing sorrow and desolation in thousands of homes. It is possible, of course, that causes might arise for going into a terrible and tragic war but such causes must be few. May God spare America from such a calamity.

Ambassador Dumba still insists that he is going home because his business there needs his presence.

Doc's departure reminds us of a story of a Tennessee negro, who was typical of his race in that he worried more about the frequency of sevens than he did over the cost of keeping his home. His wife finally tired of supporting him and awoke him one morning by affectionately caressing his head with a castiron skillett. After running him out of the house she locked both doors to prevent his return and then threw his trunk out an upstairs window.

A friend of Sam's who had watched the exit from across the street walked over to where he sat on the trunk wiping the blood from his head.

"What's the matter, Sam? Are you leaving home?" he asked.

"I sutenly is. I's quit that woman. Deh ain't no use arguin'. I done quit her!"

"The Liberty Bell will start for home November 11. Why not bring it home by way of Colorado and show it to some of the coal miners who don't believe there is such a thing." Or by the way of Georgia and let it free that State's army of child slaves employed in mills in the cotton industry—if only for a few minutes.

An aged Hoboken cobbler committed suicide the other day, leaving a note which said:

"If one is too old to feed himself, he should shoot himself."

This is respectfully called to the attention of ex-presidents who have demanded to know what the country was going to do with them.

President Wilson wants to see Archibald as soon as he can get to Washington. We would like to be there and hear Archie balled.

There is one consolation in this warm weather. It runs the straw hat season long enough to enable one to save for a soft one.

Villa denies report that he is dead, thereby showing that he has no consideration for the contentment of America.

Archibald is one prodigal whose return from foreign lands need not cause consternation in the calf yard.

CITY JUDGE DEMEZA ENDORSES JAIL PLAN

New Warden's Separation of Criminals a Long Felt Want in the County.

Work will be started in a few days, under the supervision of the building and grounds committee of the Union County Board of Freeholders, on the rearranging of a portion of the residence section of the county jail at Elizabeth as suggested by August Hughson, the new warden, to provide for a reception room for juvenile and first offenders. A large room on the second floor will be divided into five smaller rooms, several of which will be used for girls and women lodged in the jail. Another room will be used to give medical examination to prisoners as they enter the institution.

The seperation of first offenders from old and hardened criminals in the county jail has long been a hobby of City Judge William G. DeMezas' and when informed of the plans of the new warden this morning he was enthusiastic in his endorsement of it. He said: "This is a step in the right direction and the new county warden is to be congratulated on starting something that has been neglected by his predecessors. A place to which I can send first offenders without running a chance of having them mingle with criminals having long records is what I have advocated repestedly and it now seems probable that the reform is going to be made. Only recently I had a case in which I was compelled to hold a mere youth for the Grand Jury. He was unable to get bail and spent two months in the county jail awaiting trial. During that time he mingled with men of "Ice Wagon" Connors' calibre, and became intimate with a man by the name of Griffen who taught him many tricks of the burglars' trade. It happened that Griffen and he were liberated an the same day and they came immediately to Plainfield and engaged lodging together. It was not long before the two were picked up for robbery and again committed to jail."

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel P. T. Wilbur, of Westervelt avenue, have returned after spending the summer at their cottage at Lake Hopatcong.

You Pay For It!

Somebody hands you something and declares there is no price,
But you pay for it.
You're tickled at his gen'rousness and say, "Why, this is nice!"
But you pay for it.
Some day, when least expected, this "free" service that was done
Will place you in a wrongful light unless you cough, my son—
You'll pay for it in self-respect, if not in real "mon"—
Yes, you pay for it!

They send a lot of samples 'round from city door to door,
But you pay for 'em.
They say, "These are as free as air
—a present from our store."
But you pay for 'em.
For in the obligation that an honest person feels,
You'll keep on feeling sneaking as the fellow does who steals,
Unless you go and trade a bit. In half a dozen deals
Why, you've paid for 'em!

Though "free" stuff's offered smilingly to you, my festive boob,
Yet you'll pay for it.
The man who figures elsewise is a wholly hopeless rube—
Yes, you'll pay for it.
The gifts of the Creator—air and sunshine, life and hope—
Are all you'll get for nothing, though they "sample" you with soap
To make you pay big profit on ten other lines of dope—
Sure, you'll pay for it!

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Country Doctors And Hospital Doctors

JAMES MACKENZIE, the great English heart specialist, won his fame and ascribes his grasp of heart disease to experience obtained in country practice. As he observes in his work on Diseases of the Heart, "The investigators in hospital wards and laboratories have little idea of the difficulties the general practitioner has to encounter. . . . . The little I have been able to do in this respect (that is, interpreting the symptoms of heart disease) has but opened my eyes to the extraordinarily rich field for investigation that lies before the general practitioner." And Mackenzie is one of the world's authorities in his special subject.

Perhaps the country doctor and the private practitioner of a past generation lacked some of the conveniences and instruments of precision that hospitals and dispensaries supplied for the use of physicians working on their staffs. To-day, however, the doctor in the small village has everything his big hospital colleague can boast, both in paraphernalia and scientific literature. Indeed, we think the average country doctor to-day is more abreast of the times than the average city physician or hospital staff physician. And for this reason: The country practitioner is comparatively more able to devote time and money to post-graduate study and special reading, having less "front" and "appearance" to maintain in competition with his medical neighbors.

People sometimes imagine that because a city physician is connected with a hospital he is therefore an abler man than the country doctor or the private practitioner in town. We know, for we have enjoyed the emoluments accruing from such a position. Yet it is true that the majority of hospital staff appointments are filled by patronage, pull or favoritism in America, rather than by professional competition, as abroad.

The fact that a physician is or is not connected with a hospital is of little or no significance insofar as professional competence is concerned. Some signally unqualified practitioners are serving as physicians and surgeons on hospital staffs—serving without compensation, of course, but simply for what prestige they can get out of it. If the truth were known the "hospital specialist" would have a hard row to hoe. Much of the medical treatment perpetrated in hospitals and dispensaries is a sort of ready-made system of charlatanry or treatment by ear, if we may so describe it. The patient gets a little of Formula No. X so many times a day, and if Formula X doesn't quite meet the indications, why, who should worry?

AMERICAN UNIVERSITIES—WASHINGTON STATE

THE State University of Washington is so new that most of the chairs in the faculty still smell of varnish.

It was established over fifty years ago when the State of Washington was populated almost exclusively by pine trees, and up to fifteen years ago it was one of the 794 also-rans in American college life.

It ranked with Millsaps, Occidental, Muskingdum and other quiet retreats of learning, and an Eastern college man couldn't have found it in an Atlas eight feet wide.

About that time, Seattle began to leap lightly to the front in the census returns and Washington University leaped with it. Seattle held an exposition and gave it to the University when it closed. This provided a large number of buildings and twenty trainloads a day of incoming settlers provided the necessary football material.

The University of Washington now has over 3,000 students and a faculty of 200. It is growing so fast that by the time a fine new marble hall is finished to take the place of some tumble-down wooden structure the attendance has overflowed again and the old shack has to be pinned together and pasted up for another year.

The Cafateria is in an old exposition building and the students eat under umbrellas in rainy weather while the reporters in the School of Journalism work in an extinct gardener's cottage and hold up the roof with one hand while writing. But every year a fine new building goes up and if the attendance will kindly hold back a little the state will catch up with the university.

Washington's campus is a beautifully landscaped hilltop with the Olympics on one side and Mount

Reporters in the School of Journalism hold up the roof with one hand while writing

Rainier on the other. Its museum is a Greek temple, whose columns are fir trunks, four feet in diameter and its pine flagpole is as high as the Bunker Hill monument.

The University of Washington is the second largest college on the Pacific Coast and the third largest west of the Missouri River. It has more students than Yale, but has never had a chance to row its crew against Harvard, and consequently suffers from a lack of high grade advertising.

Views Of The Press

Wanted—American Willow

BEFORE the war, large quantities of willow rods were imported by firms in this country from England, Belgium, Holland, France and Germany. For several months these sources of supply have been almost completely closed. The willow-ware industry feels the shortage keenly, as there is not a sufficient supply of American willow to meet the demand. The lack has been partly filled by the importation of Japanese osiers.

The Forest Service has distributed some 2,000,000 willow cuttings to state experiment stations, forest schools and individual growers. Experiments have shown that willow can be grown in nearly all parts of the country, the exceptions being the arid and semi-arid regions, the high altitudes, and certain parts of the Southern states. Willow culture ought to be a profitable means for utilizing overflow lands not suitable for other crops. The United States Department of Agriculture, in Farmers' Bulletin No. 622, discusses in detail the varieties of basket willow and the methods of culture which have proved most satisfactory in this country. Summing up willow cultivation as a business venture, a recent departmental weekly news letter says:

"A poorly managed willow holt, even if well situated, will not pay, but a well-managed holt under less favorable conditions will return a good profit. Willow growing requires a certain amount of exact knowledge, and for this reason the cost to the beginner is generally higher than to the experienced grower. It has been calculated that from the fourth to the twentieth year of a holt the average annual net profit should be about $100 an acre. The growing of willow, however, requires much labor which must be obtained at low cost and is rather difficult to get."

Rochester, New York and Boston are the centres of the willow working industry in this country. As the eastern part of the Great Lakes region is within reasonable distance of these markets, there must be much land in this section of the country where willow could be grown at a profit. The extra demand caused by the war may be temporary, but, as willow furniture appears to be growing in popularity, there is every prospect of a strong future market for American willow, provided, the government experts give warning, willow growers give proper attention to preparing willow rods for industrial use.—Rochester Democrat.

People's Legal Friend

BY E. R. BRANSON

When The Die Is Cast

Q. Several weeks ago I mailed a letter to a man residing in another city, making a certain business proposition. A day or so later, I decided to withdraw this offer and mailed him a letter to this effect. It seems that, upon receiving my first letter, he immediately wrote an acceptance, which later came to me through the mails. Since then I have had some correspondence with him. He insists that, as he mailed his letter of acceptance at once and before receiving my second letter, withdrawing the offer, he is entitled to have the bargain carried out. Is he correct about this? A. He certainly is.

Pretty Wise "Infants"—Sometimes

Q. When does a girl become of age—is it eighteen or twenty-one?

A. Under the common law, all persons under the age of twenty-one are called infants. In some states, this is the rule at the present time. In other states, legal age is fixed at eighteen in the case of girls and twenty-one in the case of boys.

Insane—Is Contract Legal?

Q. If an insane person makes a contract, will it have any legal effect?

A. If the insanity is complete, the contract cannot be enforced. It frequently happens, however, that there is merely partial insanity. When such is the case, it is simply a question of fact as to whether the alleged insane person had sufficient understanding to comprehend, in a reasonable manner, the nature and effect of his act. An individual may be partially insane and yet be perfectly rational with respect to a particular transaction.

Appointment Of An Agent By One

Q. Suppose a man is appointed as an agent. May he appoint another man as an agent in his stead, so as to make the first employer liable for the second agent's acts?

A. Ordinarily, where authority has been once delegated to an agent, it may not be conferred by the latter upon another agent, although it sometimes happens that an agent is expressly authorized to re-delegate his authority or his right to do so is sometimes implied from the nature of the circumstances.

A Job Lot

Q. Suppose an agreement should be drawn up between two persons concerning several different things, some being legal and some illegal. Would this be a good contract?

A. Such portion or portions of the contract as were based upon a proper consideration and were of a lawful nature would stand, unless the different parts of the contract were so interwoven or so connected that one or more parts could not be enforced independently of the rest.

A Deed Of Trust

Q. Please tell me just what is a "deed of trust"?

A. A deed of trust is a written instrument which has the form of a deed of conveyance, but which has the general effect of a mortgage. It is made to secure a loan or an advancement of money. The grantee in the instrument is the trustee and he is empowered, upon the grantor's failure to pay the debt, to sell the property. After doing so, he may make such use of the proceeds as may be necessary to meet the indebtedness secured by the instrument.

The Woman With The Mirror Habit

You can see her in any restaurant. She'll be sitting near a mirror, you may be sure. "Yes? Is that so?" she'll be responding mechanically to her escort's efforts to entertain her. The person who really holds her attention is that reflection of herself opposite. Again and again, her eyes drift back to it. And the man sees this. If you watch closely, you can see him furtively studying the girl when her eyes are on the mirror. Perhaps he is picturing the sort of wife she would make—the sort that would start to perform a duty, and then, arrested by a looking glass, would stop "just a minute" to put a comb in differently—and end by spending an hour there. The mirror has a hold on her—just as the drug fiend is a slave to his drug.

Her nerve is going.

The Cause Of It

Some famous Dr. Tinker
Has evolved from out his thinker
A reason why you never take a stand.
It's not your fault at all
That you haven't any gall;
The trouble's deeply seated in some gland.

If you're wont to shake and shiver
Or you're prone to quake and quiver
While you're looking at the muzzle of a gun;
Then you've likely got a goiter
And you're not supposed to loiter
When your thyroid gland is forcing you to run!

If a siren spook you've spotted
With the aid of your parotid
Glands, remotely tucked away behind the ear,
It's permissible to speak,
When you hear the banshee shriek,
As the glands and not the ghost will cause the fear.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — How Jack Told the Bedtime Story.

They Were Learning to Ride Around.

"DADDY," said Jack, as he and Evelyn came to daddy's knee, "I'm going to tell you and Evelyn the bedtime story tonight."

"Why, certainly, Jack," cried daddy, looging both surprised and pleased. "That will be fine. I shall have a little rest after all this time."

"Well," said Jack, while Evelyn listened with all ner ears.

And then he thought of just what he wanted to say:

"Once there were all kinds of strange animals over in Africa an' Asia an' Australia an' other places, I think. There was the giraffe, with the longest neck there is, an' there was the hippo-hip-potamus, with an awful thick hide, an' there was the elephant, with a long curly trunk like a snake, an' there was the monkey that made such awful faces. An' there was ever so many more, but that's all I can think of just now, daddy.

"An' some of those animals played with each other, an' some of them were cross with each other all the time an' wouldn't play with each other at all. An' I think, that way, they was ever an' ever so much like children, 'cause some children'll play together real nice an' some just won't.

"Well, daddy an' Evelyn an' mamma, bimeby men came to the woods an' jungle an' forest an' plain an' everywhere those animals were, an' they catched 'em in pits an' lassos an' every way they could catch 'em, an' some o' the lions growled just awful an' clawed, so the men had to look out, an' they put 'em in cages an' put 'em on a ship an' sent 'em to America. I know, daddy, you told me, an', besides that, I read it on a billboard.

"An' about that time there were men an' women an' some children, too, learnin' to do the wonderfulest things over in America. They was learnin' to ride around standin' up on a bareback horse an' throw somersaults on him, an' they was learnin' to swing from trapezes an' to be shot out of cannon an' a whole lot of other useful things to do.

"An' those animals that came over from the other countries an' those people that was learnin' to do things they came together in the same town, an' they called it a circus an' menagerie. An' I know a little boy an' girl that read all about it on the bills, an' they're goin' to show here next Tuesday. An' that little boy said, 'I'll tell my daddy a story about that circus an' menagerie comin' here, an' he'll take mamma an' me an' my sister to that circus an' menagerie."

"Yes, son, to be sure I will!" cried daddy, laughing, "and that is one of the best stories I ever heard."

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. INA LEONARD

"Oh, Dick, you smell so fishy."

"Fishy!" snapped that young man. "Naturally, I just finished cleaning the fish."

"Well, couldn't you wash your hands?" suggested Nell hesitatingly.

"Well, I like that." Her husband looked reproachfully at her. I nearly broke my poor old blistered back stooping over the river to scrub up, and now you ask if I couldn't wash my hands."

"Well, what is it, then? The whole tent smells like a fish market; it makes me faint."

Dick ground his teeth. "People with such finicky noses have no business in camp. Look at Olive; she's game. She helped clean the fish; you bet she's not fussing over the smell."

Oppressive silence reigned in Nell's quarter of the tent. Dick wiggled out of his shirt, filling the air with groans meanwhile.

"Could you put something on my burned shoulders? I believe they are blistered."

"Sunburned?" asked Nell in chilly aloofness.

"I guess so; they feel as if they had been scalded. I've had sunburn before, but nothing like this."

"Perhaps cold cream would be good." Nell's air was martyred as she produced the jar. I suppose if we light up all the mosquitoes this side of Fairport will congregate, but I can't put this on in the dark."

"Here, I'll turn on the searchlight; maybe they won't see that."

"Won't they?" scoffed Nell, turning the light so it fell on the afflicted neck and shoulders. "Why, Dick Morton, what have you done to yourself? I believe you are poisoned; your shoulders are swollen up as hard and red as——" She paused for lack of comparison.

"Don't I know it?" he snapped. "Don't bear on so hard."

"How can I put on cold cream without touching you?" she asked.

"Be as easy as you can; it's like a boil," he groaned.

"I don't see how you did it," she continued tactlessly.

"Did it! Anyone would think I had tried for days to burn my neck and shoulders and had finally succeeded."

"Well, you need not bite my head off. I'm not to blame if you wet your skin and sit in the sun to scorch. Perhaps you think I enjoy putting this stuff on, with you squirming like an eel and snapping like a snapping turtle. I wish you wouldn't go fishing if you've got to come home so smelly and cranky."

"Lord!" ejaculated Dick fervently. "There, that's enough."

"Here, I'll spread a couple of soft handkerchiefs over it to keep the grease off your pajamas." Nell snapped off the flashlight.

Silence fell with the darkness. They listened to the buzzing of the mosquitoes.

"I guess you were right; they have all congregated in our tent." No answer. Presently a stifled sob was heard between the slaps aimed at the mosquitoes.

"What's up now?" he asked in an irritated tone as if the last straw had been added to his discomfort.

The sobs ceased, and only the waving and slapping of the hands to dislodge mosquitoes betrayed her presence.

"Where is that bottle?" he asked at last. "I can't stand this." He rose, turned on the flash and found the bottle. "Do you want some?" he asked, after he had liberally smeared every exposed portion of his skin. As he received no answer, he turned the flash on her; she lay in a limp heap on the bed, her whole frame shaken with sobs.

CHAPTER III.

Complications.

"I WANT to talk to you," said Rodney, coming toward Mary. "I've been wanting this opportunity for days, and now that I've got it I don't propose to be interrupted. That's why I locked the door."

Rodney had come over to her.

"I want to talk to you," he said impetuously. "Mary, will you marry me?"

"Why, really," began Mary shyly.

"I don't know what to say," hesitated the girl, feeling her ground.

"Say yes," cried Rodney, waiting feverishly to hear her answer.

It came at last shyly, "Yes," whereupon Rodney cried, "You angel!" joyfully and tried to grab her. But things must not go quite so fast, Mary thought intuitively, and drew away a little from him, though, to tell the truth, she would willingly have let him catch her as she felt now.

"No, no; wait a moment," she said.

"We'll be married right away," went on Rodney unabashed.

"But suppose your father disapproves?" said Mary.

"He won't know anything about it until we're married, and then what could he do?" objected Rodney.

"He might cut you off," suggested Mary sagely.

"Would you care?" asked Rodney.

"I? No, no, indeed," said Mary hastily. "I was thinking of you, dear."

"Don't you bother about me," cried Rodney. "We'll be married tomorrow and then come home for the parental blessing."

"No, I couldn't do that," said Mary "It wouldn't be right. I'm his private secretary. He trusts me and brings me here to his home, and then to find I'd married his son on the sly—no, Rodney, we couldn't do that."

"You do make it sound rather bad," said Rodney. "I shouldn't want to treat father badly. We've always been pretty good friends, he and I. I guess I'd better tell him—in a week or so"—

Mary's self composure had been rapidly returning during this colloquy, and she was surer of what she wanted. Indeed it piqued her a little that Rodney should have made such a proposal to her, so that now her own inclinations and the old gentleman's upstairs ran in the same channel. She spoke up quite resolutely:

"Why, Rodney, if you love me you will want to get this awful suspense over with."

"But suppose he does object?" Rodney argued, seeing his light of happiness grow dim.

"Even then I wouldn't give you up," said his sweetheart.

"Mary!"

"You could go into business," she went on, "make a big man of yourself, make me proud of you"—

"You talk just like the heroine in a play I saw last night," protested Rodney. "She wanted the hero to go to work, and he did, and then for four acts everybody suffered."

"Don't you want to work?" asked Mary anxiously.

"I should say not," Rodney answered quite seriously. "Imagine going to bed every night knowing you'd got to get up in the morning and go to business."

"You'd be happier, wouldn't you," queried Mary, "if you had a job?"

"Please don't talk like father," protested Rodney. "He's preached a job at me ever since I left college. Why should I work? Father made millions out of soap and is forever complaining that he's always had his nose to the grindstone, that he's never known what fun was, that it's all made him old before his time. I can't see the sense of following an example like that—I really can't. He's got enough for you and me and our children and their grandchildren. I've explained all this to him, but I can't seem to make him understand. But it's simple—why work when there's millions in the family? And why even talk of it when you and I are in love?"

He leaned hungrily toward her, stretching out his arms to her, and finished on a note of genuine appeal: "Come, kiss me, Mary."

But Mary drew back from him quickly. "No, you mustn't," she said firmly. "Not till you've spoken to your father."

"You won't even kiss me till I tell him?"

"No."

"And you will when I do?"

"Yes."

"Then I'll tell him right away!" cried the valiant lover, striding to the door.

"Oh, Rodney, you're splendid!" applauded Mary, "and don't be afraid."

"Afraid!" echoed Rodney scornfully. But he paused a moment at the door and said:

"You don't think I'd better wait till the morning?"

"No, I don't," said Mary. "And don't be silly about his gout. He really is a very patient invalid."

Rodney stood a moment with his hand on the knob, plucking up resolution. As he lingered there a violent knocking sounded on the other side, and his father's voice could be distinctly heard crying "Ouch!" in an extra loud tone in the hall.

"You angel!"

"Speaking of the patient invalid," whispered Rodney, looking back at the girl for whom he was so greatly darling.

"If you don't ask him now I'll never marry you," whispered Mary, forming her words as distinctly as was possible under the circumstances.

"Open the door!" cried the elder Martin angrily in the hall.

"I'm coming, father. Coming," quaked Rodney as he turned the key.

The door was no sooner opened than his father strode into the room sternly, uttering the ejaculation "Ouch!" twice and the polite phrase "the devil!" at least once as he crossed the threshold.

"Why was that door locked?" he demanded, scowling.

"Was it locked?" asked Rodney innocently.

"You young fool, didn't you just unlock it?" roared his father.

"So I did," said Rodney nervously.

Mary in the meanwhile had retreated to her typewriter, and now began typifying violently.

"Stop that noise," shouted Mr. Martin.

The noise ceased immediately, and Rodney looked at her discouraged. She motioned to him to go on. Meanwhile Martin painfully limped to a chair by a small table and sank into it, his foot giving him another twinge.

"Ouch! Oh, my poor foot!" he moaned.

Rodney hastily picked up a footstool and came with it to his father.

"I'm afraid your foot hurts," he ventured propitiatingly.

"Not at all—I just pretend that it does," growled his father.

"I hoped you were better," said the son sincerely.

"Well, I'm not. What's that you got there?"

"A footstool—I thought it might make you more comfortable."

"Comfortable? How much do you want out of me now?" his father asked shrewdly.

"Why nothing, father," Rodney answered.

"Well, anyhow the answer is, not a nickel"—

"Why do you say that?" Rodney quavered.

"I know you, and whatever it is you can't have it."

Rodney turned appealingly to Mary, who ignored him. He turned back to his father again, and tried to muster up his courage to the sticking point.

"I'm coming, father. Coming," quaked Rodney.

"Well, as a matter of fact, I did want"— he began, clearing his throat.

"Oh, now we're getting to it," Martin retorted. "Well, what is it?"

"I wanted to have a talk with you—an important talk"—

"Curious! That's just what I wanted to have with you. I've wanted it all day, and now we'll have it. Miss Grayson!" he called to Mary.

"Yes, sir," said Mary meekly.

"Get out!"

She went without a glance at Rodney, who stood looking after her dejectedly, not knowing that his love's intention was to give him moral support by listening in the hall.

"Now, what do you mean by overdrawing your allowance again?" she heard Mr. Martin say when the door was closed.

"Why," innocently answered Rodney, "it simply proves that I was right when I told you my allowance was too small."

"What!" ejaculated his father, quite evidently aghast.

"And if my allowance is too small for one it's much too small for two," the boy continued ingeniously.

"For two?"

"Father, has it ever occurred to you that I might marry?" inquired Rodney.

"Of course it has. You're fool enough for anything," growled his father.

"I don't consider a man a fool because he's married," said Rodney.

"That's because you've never tried it."

"I intend to try it, just the same," said Rodney.

"Oh, you do, do you? Who is the girl?"

"The girl?" repeated his son nervously.

"Yes, girl. You're not going to marry an automobile, or a polo pony, or an aeroplane, or any other of your idiotic amusements, are you? You're going to marry a girl, aren't you? Some blue eyed, doll faced, gurgling, fluttering little fool. Oh, why doesn't God give young men some sense about women?"

"I object very strongly to your speaking in that way of Miss Grayson," spoke up Rodney angrily.

"Miss Grayson? Miss Grayson—you're not going to marry a typewriter!"

"Yes, sir."

"Does she know it?"

"Yes, sir."

"Oh, of course she knows a good thing like you when she sees it"—

"I won't listen to you talk of Miss Grayson in that way"—

"You've got to listen. I won't permit any such absurd, ridiculous marriage. Thank heaven you had sense enough not to elope!"

"I wanted to, but she wouldn't. She insisted on your being told. So you see what an injustice"—

"Injustice! Can't you see she wanted me to know so that if I disapproved and cut you off she'd not be stuck with you on her hands?"

"Please, father"— pleaded Rodney and then dropped his hands at his sides and turned to go, adding, "It's quite useless."

"No, my boy; wait a minute," said Mr. Martin. "Remember I'm you friend, even if I am your father. Don't you believe it? It's only your money she wants."

"I know it isn't," replied Rodney proudly.

"I'll prove it is," said his father, pushing an enameled electric bell that stood near him on the table.

"What are you going to do?" cried Rodney nervously.

"Send for Miss Grayson," said his father grimly. "I'll tell that scheming secretary that if you persist in this marriage I'll disinherit you, and then you watch her throw you over," he amplified for Rodney's benefit.

"Even if you are my father you shan't insult the girl I love," protested Rodney hotly.

"Poppycock! You're afraid to put her to the test. You're afraid she will chuck you," retorted his father.

But Rodney answered quietly: "I'm not afraid, father. You're mistaken."

Johnson appeared meanwhile in answer to the bell and in a surprisingly short time and with a queer look on his usually imperturbable face, if they had only noticed it, returned with Mary Grayson under his escort. Mary looked from father to son with an elaborately assumed air of innocence and inquired:

"You wanted me, Mr. Martin?"

She saw Rodney out of the tail of her eye make a movement toward her and say "Mary" in a pleading tone; then heard his father interrupting him curtly. "My precious son," he told her, "has just informed me that you and he intend to get married. Is that right?"

YOUNG GIRLS WILL FIND CIR-

No. 9061.

CULAR RUFFLES ATRACTIVE.

Circular ruffles, whether made of the skirt material, as above, or of some lighter goods, always add a charm to a dress quite in keeping with the young girl's modest years. The dress above, Ladies' Home Journal Pattern, No. 9061, should prove a very attractive and serviceable mdoel for school work this fall. The waist has set-in sleeves and is gathered under a trimming band in front, while the three-piece skirt is trimmed with four circular ruffles. The pattern cuts in sizes 14, 16, 18 and 20 years, size 18 requiring, if made of one material, 7⅛ yards 36-inch material.

Patterns can be obtained at the store of A. E. Force & Co.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

To remove grease spots, saturate with ammonia and press with a hot iron over brown paper.

When long gloves slip down the arm, rip a short place in the hem and run in narrow elastic.

To save pieces of bread that would be wasted, put into a pan and set in oven while you get breakfast, and you have something good for soups of any kind.

When pans boil dry, burning their contents, and you think the pan is ruined, try putting washing powder in the pan, filling it with cold water and placing it over the fire; let it come slowly to a boil. You will be surprsed at the result.

Good furniture polish, for hardwood floors, leather covered furniture; also for fine polished woodwork. Take equal parts linseed oil and vinegar and to each pint of the mixture add one tablespoon of turpentine. Apply with flannel cloth and wipe with clean flannel.

To Set Color From Coffee—When washng ecru curtains, take a tablespoonful each of salt and vinegar to each quart of coffee liquid to be used; the color will be permanently set. Your curtains can be washed and recolored in this way and made to look like new.

Bedbug Exterminator—Take one gallon gasoline, five cents' worth corrosive sublimate and one pint turpentine; put in jug and shake well. Get an oil can with a long, narrow spout—one that flows well with pressure upon bottom of can. Keep mixture from fire or lights. (Add 50 per cent application.) In the morning take bedding from bed, a piece at a time, and wherever it seems necessary (generally along folds or seams) direct a fine stream of the above mixture. Put it in seams and crevices or springs and mattresses and cracks in the bedstead. Spread bedding over chairs, etc., to air during day. The corrosive sublimate will kill the bugs as will the gasoline, and as the gasoline quickly evaporates it does not make room or bedding damp. The turpentine will kill the eggs or nits whenever it comes in contact with them. If the bugs are in the walls, apply the mixture along seams of paper, around door and window casings, etc. Do this every day for a week. Then if you find no more bugs do it twice a week for a while, and for about three months once a week. At spring housecleaning time just saturate beds good, as the nits first hatch out then (about March).

THE TABLE

Chicken Croquettes—One tablespoon butter, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon dry ground mustard, one large spoonful dry flour. Melt butter and mix all ingredients in frying pan. Pour on one cup boiling milk. Have chicken all cut up in small pieces and stir in. Set away to get cold. Shape into croquettes and roll in dry flour. Beat up a whole egg with a tablespoon of milk. Dip croquettes in and roll in cracker crumbs. Fry in deep boiling lard to a light brown and set in warming oven until ready to serve.

Escaloped Tomatoes—Take one quart raw tomatoes, cut in small pieces, drain off liquid, season with salt, pepper, a very small amount of sugar and a few pieces of onion. Cover bottom of a greased baking dish or pan with a thick layer of crumbs. Add tomatoes, cover top with another layer of crumbs and brown in oven. Bake from three-fourths to one hour. Bits of butter dropped over last layer of crumbs makes them much better.

Escaloped Tomatoes With Nuts—Have ready a quart can of stewed tomatoes, one cup chopped pecan nuts and one cup stale bread crumbs. Mix bread crumbs with one-fourth cup melted butter. Put a layer of tomatoes in a baking dish or in ramekins, sprinkle with salt and pepper, then with the buttered crumbs and the chopped nuts. Continue until all are used, having nuts and crumbs on top. Bake about twenty minutes.

Apple Fritters—Make a batter with one cup swet milk, one tablespoon sugar, two eggs, two cups flour, one teaspoon baking powder sifted with the flour. Slice four good tart apples, mix in the batter and fry in hot lard. Nice served with maple sugar or syrup.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Conducted by the Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield.

Keeping Pace With the Anti-Suffragists.

It has been said that it is hard to keep up with the suffragists.

It is certainly hard for the suffragists to keep back with the anti-suffragists.

In the New York Times of Monday we find the following pitiful appeal:

"Where is a paleologist? The question is being asked by Fillmore Condit, secretary of the Union Oil Company, of California, with offices in New York city.

"Mr. Condit, whose home is in Essex Fells, is going wholeheartedly into the Jersey campaign, and as he says that New Jersey is having more than her share of troubles because of antiquaries who seem to have been storing up ancient notions of anti-suffrage origin, which now are being dispensed by stump speakers.

"Convinced that only an expert can get to the heart of these secrets, Mr. Condit has set out to look for a paleologist to take the matter in hand. He has inserted the following advertisement in today's New York Times:

"'WANTED—A paleologist or archeologist to investigate alleged anti-suffrage interviews issued by the New Jersey anti-suffragists; must be rapid reader of old newspaper files from the Civil War and quick to detect original date when interview first appeared; should be able to detect changes in text, if any. Address Fillmore Condit, Essex Fells, N. J.'

"James Nugent has been the principal offender against Mr. Condit's peace of minds and the cause of suffrage in this way. This is what Mr. Condit says of the whole thing:

"'Since the campaign began I have made it my business to check up the 'open letters' and alleged interviews against woman suffrage which have been showered upon me, as a citizen of New Jersey, by Mr. Nugent and his press agent, Mr. Hanley. The task has proved increasingly difficult, owing to the fact that the antis are burrowing deeper and deeper into the past and hauling out as fresh and up-to-date the utterances of men and women who have passed clean out of recollection—the utterances, I mean, not necessarily the men and women.

"'For example, last week I found the New Jersey papers printing the statement of Justice E. S. Snell to the effect that woman suffrage in the State of Washington had been a failure. This would have been impressive testimony, if true. However, I was unable to locate Justice Snell, though I did find, on investigation, curiously enough, that precisely the same statement, word for word, appeared in the Massachusetts papers last March! This struck me as an imposition upon our New Jersey papers, which, as I know, make the greatest efforts to keep their columns fresh and 'newsy.'

"'I was interested, too, to discover that the Snell statement was not only old, but dead—literally buried under the replies made to it in the Boston papers by many leading officials of Washington, including the Governor, the Mayor of Tacoma, and Senator Piper. Mrs. M. E. Chase, president of the Council of Women Voters, wrote pointing out that Judge Snell, who had been, she said, very little in Washington in recent years, had once been a candidate in the primaries for United States Senator and had been defeated. She felt that this had something to do with his animosity toward suffrage.

"'But that's only a sample. A few days before that there appeared in the papers an alleged statement by Stanley S. Bowdle, of Ohio. This I found was taken bodily from the speech made by Bowdle in Congress on January 12, 1915—that speech which had to be deleted before it went on the records. Again, just before that statement, I was grieved to note an interview with Miss Jeannette Gilder, the literary critic, denouncing suffrage. My grief, however, was only matched by Miss Gilder's astonishment when she discovered that she had been interviewed. Miss Gilder stated that she was not at all in accord with some of the views attributed to her, though she thought she remembered something like it last winter.

"'These are only incidents. Everybody remembers the interview attributed to Henry Lewis Stimson, which was made up from old press clippings, and, most notable of all, the statement said to have been issued by Mr. Root, which turned out to be his speech at the New York State Constitutional Convention of 1884. Both Mr. Root and Mr. Stimson denied having any connection with Mr. Nugent's campaign.

"'Well, as I have said, I have been trying to keep track of these antiquities, and it has proved to be hard work, and I want expert assistance. That is why I have inserted the advertisement in The Times.'

Scattered Sport Gleanings

Warm weather has put a crimp in the Elks' usual bowling activities at this time of the year and present atmospheric conditions point to a holding off of the schedule until October 1 at the earliest. The State leagues for junior and senior alley men are likely to be convened sometime during the coming fortnight and the schedules adopted for the winter months. Just how Plainfield will fair in the organizations this year is a matter of keen speculation but it is high time some of the talent in the local club got sufficient seasoning to bring home a pennant. This hovering about the middle section of the team standing is getting to be monotonous and we anticipate a little boost this winter.

In other cities besides Plainfield independent baseball has become well nigh extinct during the past season. The City League is all that has kept this city from falling into a rut with Bound Brook, Dunellen, Westfield, Scotch Plains, Elizabeth, and other nearby cities. The independent pastime is now at is lowest ebb in these places and something radical will have to be done to bring it back to its proper level next season.

News item in Brunswick paper:—Dave Driscoll kicks himself out of ball game at Hackettstown. Someone evidently has a poor idea of news. Dave has been doing this for the past twenty-four years and if he should happen to abandon the tactic there'd surely be some cause to crow.

Why not a ball game between the suffragettes and the antis? The male sport world fell for the McFarland-Gibbons affair Saturday night in a way that indicates that it is about ready to stand for anything that is pushed over.

We hate to rattle the skeleton in sore spots, but we certainly would like to know who chased those soccerites away from Plainfield. The Scotch pastime used to be a weekly Saturday afternoon diversion in the west end but soccer players are as scarce as cool weather these days.

Warren Townley's election to the presidency of the North Plainfield High School's Athletic Association is a well deserved honor. Little Wren has been one of the most active figures in borough athletics and considering the fact that he is only a sophomore he should be a world beater by the time he is handed his sheepskin.

Three weeks to the world's series. We're still hoping that Robbie and his Brooklyns will cop the pennant for it's a long way to Quakertown.

Pretty nearly time we heard something from Y. M. C. A. quarters relative to basketball. Unless the association corrals some of the talent very soon the other organizations will have all the choice stuff lined up.

ALLENTOWN FAIR PROMISES TO BE THE BIGGEST EVER

September 21, 22, 23 and 24. The great Allentown Fair is the one big event of the year that is looked forward to by the public at large. All preparations have been arranged so that the Allentown Fair this year will not only surpass its previous records, but will be the largest, finest and most interesting fair of its kind ever held in the United States.

There will be four days' trotting, pacing and running. Over $35,000 in purses and premiums; a $20,000 cooling out shed. A grandstand that seats over 10,000 people is built for the public's convenience. The best vaudeville and circus acts that money can obtain are free to all visitors to the fair. Many of these acts have never been seen in America.

The Cattle Show will be one worth seeing and very interesting. The Poultry and Pigeon Show will be the largest ever held in the world. Chickens from almost every State in the Union, some worth as high as $500 apiece.

The Midway, which is one of the most interesting parts of the great Allentown Fair, will be lined on both sides with the most interesting booths, containing all kinds of novelties, and the large buildings which are on the fair grounds will be handsomely decorated, and will display $20,000 worth of various articles, novelties, etc., that the Untied States use, wear and manufacture.

For the benefit of those who are going to visit the great Allentown Fair on September 21, 22, 23 and 24, all roads will lead to Allentown, and no fair can offer better travel accommodations to its patrons than this. The great Allentown Fair has made arrangements for special trains and reduced rates on all railroads—Reading, Lehigh Valley, Jersey Central and Perkiomen Railroads. The Lehigh Valley Transit Company will run limited trains direct to the grounds from Sixty-ninth street and Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia. Come and enjoy yourself with the crowd.

COLUMBUS CLUB ATHLETES PLAN A BASKETBALL TEAM

Following the annual meeting held in the Columbus Club last night the members of the organization who participate in athletics held an informal session for the purpose of discussing plans for a fall basketball outfit. The players of last year's squad are all available, and with a wealth of incoming material, the club expects to place a formidable aggregation on the courts.

Billy Coyle, "Al" Bryniarski, Jack Caulfield, Jack Coffey, George Linke, George Taylor and Danny McAfee are some of those mentioned as team possibilities, and many others have signified their intention of working out when the call for practice is sounded.

Because it has had some use, and is, therefore, "second-hand," may not greatly impair its usefulness to you. So watch the "For Sale" ads.

BOXING COMMISSION NOW AFTER BILLY JOH'S SCALP

Billy Joh, referee of the Packey MacFarland-Mike Gibbons ten-round bout at the Brighton Beach Motordrome on last Saturday night, will be summoned to appear before the Boxing Commission at its regular meeting to be held next Tuesday, and he will be asked to explain why he gave an opinion on the bout. In the crisp, official report of the Commission's doings at yesterday's meeting, which was handed out to the newspaper men by Secretary Charles J. Harvey, there was absolutely no mention of any discussion of Billy Joh, nor was there any mention of the fact that he was to be summoned to appear before the Commission.

The Commission takes the attitude that no referee has a right to express even a private opinion on any bout.'

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL PREPARES FOR FOOTBALL

Captain "Dick" Pennock and Coach Ralph Patch, of the Plainfield High School football forces, are planning to issue the first call for practice the fore part of next week, and all candidates have been warned to be in readiness for the initial drill. Moleskins are already beginning to take their places in the school lockers, and many of the prospective players have taken it upon themselves to hold individual workouts in order to be in trim for the active training.

Although the absence of some of last year's veterans will be keenly felt, a big squad of new material is available, and some promising candidates are expected to try for the vacancies caused by June graduations.

FRITTS TO TAKE ANOTHER AT CHAMPIONSHIP HONORS

For the third time in as many years Jack Fritts, the local copper, who has scored many successes in athletics, will take a crack at the Amateur Athletic Union's competition for the all-around title at Celtic Park Saturday afternoon. Fritts will have to do better than Platt Adams, the former Plainfielder, and Pat O'Connor to land the winner's medal, but is confident of coming through on top.

Last year and the year previous the local athlete finished second in the trials. It has been his one ambition to land this event since he broke into athletics, and he appears to have the opportunity of his career on this occasion.

GIBBONS BOOKED AGAIN.

New Orleans, Sept. 15.—Announcement was made here yesterday that Mike Gibbons, of St. Paul, Minn., and Young Ahearn, of New York, welterweights, have signed a contract in New York for a fifteen-round bout in New Orleans the second week in January.

MAJOR MARTIN CAPTURES TWO SHOOTING AWARDS

Sea Girt, Sept. 15.—Sergeant Henry Austin, of the United States Marine Corps, shot the high score of 139 in the big Nevada trophy match here yesterday.

Major William B. Martin, of New Jersey, captured the officers' and inspectors' match at 600 and 1,000 yards, with a total score of 95. Captain Charles Silvester, also of New Jersey, was second with 94, and Lieutenant-Colonel William A. Tewes, of New Jersey, finished third with 92.

The New Jersey two-man team match went to the Marines. Lieutenant H. L. Smith and Captain H. F. Wirgman tallied 184. Sergeant Joseph Jackson and Private Roscoe Arnett, also marines, finished in the second berth with 181, and the third place went to a District of Columbia team composed of Lieutenant A. G. ANXIOUS TO FORM BASKETBALL LEAGUE

Local Enthusiasts Discuss Possible Organization Head and Teams.

Several informal meetings of athletes interested in different local athletic organizations last night brought out considerable discussion relative to the formation of a local basketball league this fall as a successor to the City Baseball League, and indications point to the holding of an organization meeting within the next few days. Members of the T. A. B. S., Hope Chapel, the Columbus Club, the Y. M. C. A., St. Joseph's Club, the Plainfield A. C. and a North Plainfield club have signified their intention of taking out franchises on the circuit and in the event of such a league being formed, it would in all probability have to be of the eight-team variety.

Discussion last night was confined largely toward the consideration of a president for the league, and several likely candidates were singled out and will be approached within the next few days. The courts of the Columbus Club, Y. M. C. A., Hope chapel and T. A. B. S. would be available for such competition, and it is likely that a schedule calling for at least three sets of games a week would be considered.

NEW YORK SPEEDWAY TO OPEN THIS WEEK

The first high-speed test of the new Sheepshead Bay Speedway, in preparation for the inaugural race for the Astor Cup on October 2, will be made on Saturday by Dario Resta, the famous Italian driver, who has triumphed this year in the Vanderbilt Cup and the Grand Prize races, the biggest automobile events of the season. In his trial on Saturday, Resta will drive the same Peugeot car which he piloted to victory in the West.

Resta will try for a record at ten miles in his practice spin. In the elimination trials for the Chicago Motor Derby, which also was won by the Italian, he averaged 97.58 miles an hour and made a two-mile lap in world's record time, averaging 111.1 miles an hour. Subsequently, in winning the 100-mile match with Oldfield, Burman, and Earl Cooper at Chicago, Resta averaged 101.8 miles an hour for the entire distance, handicap another world's mark.

The record Resta will endeavor to beat Saturday is his own world's ten mile mark of 5:15, an average of 104.35 miles an hour.

"HUB" STINE REPORTS TO COLLEGE FOOTBALL SQUAD

Word received today from Herbert Stine, of Mountain avenue, who is attending the International Y. M. C. A. Training School, at Springfield, Mass., indicates that the North Plainfield boy has reported to the coach of the college football team and has been assigned to a place at the training table. For two years Stine has played left guard on the Springfield team, and is practically assured of a place again this year.

A formidable group of veterans have turned out for the preliminary drills, and despite the hot weather the squad is already down to hard training. There has been some talk of shifting Stine from guard to the backfield, and it would not be a great surprise to find him in this position when the schedule gets under way. He played football in North Plainfield when the borough High School athletes indulged in this line of sport.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature report from The State Trust Company for today is as follows: 9 a. m., 79 degrees; 11 a. m., 86 degrees; 1 p. m., 90 degrees.

The want ad way of tenant-finding is the accepted way—and means small expense and delay.

WALLACE DAY PACKAGE PAYS BACK SOME "CHAWS."

When Jack Powell and Bobby Wallace were teammates on the Browns they were very clubby, so clubby that Powell always borrowed his "chaws" from Wallace. In ten years he borrowed a lot of tobacco that he hadn't returned.

But among the donations on "Wallace day" recently was an untidy package which Red McAuliffe carried to the scene of action. It contained ninety-eight packages of five cent scrap tobacco, the kind Wallace once used; also this laconic message:

"I still owe you two, Bob.
"JACK POWELL."

JACK MILLER SOME PLAYER.

St. Louis Cardinals' Infielder Has Starred In Many Positions.

Miller Huggins has on the Cardinal team a ball player who is really one of the stars of the National league, but whose ability is not appreciated by the fans. The player referred to is John Miller, who is now playing second base, but who has also been at first and short, at which positions he delivered as brilliant a brand of ball as he is now giving his club at second base. Miller is so great an infielder that Manager Bresnahan of the Cubs would rather obtain him than any other athlete in the league unless it be Art Fletcher of the Giants or Buck Herzog of Cincinnati.

Miller first gained prominence when he joined the Pittsburgh team and played second base alongside of Hans

Wagner. On enrolling with the Pirates he was crude in his actions and had only a fair knowledge of the game, but close association with the game's greatest shortstop improved him immensely, made him a star at the keystone sack and an asset to the club. For a long time he was one of Fred Clarke's most timely hitters and was invaluable because of his aggressiveness and hustling qualities.

When Clarke needed a first baseman he took Miller off second and placed him there. He did as well at one position as at the other. There was trouble in the ranks, and Miller was one of the men who resented their treatment by the officials of the club. What was more, he thought his services were worth more to the team, but Barney Dreyfuss did not agree with him. As a result a trade was made with the Cardinals.

Since joining that team Miller has played as great a game as any infielder in the National league. Huggins declares he would not part with him for any trade or sum of money that a club might offer.

BORO OFFICIALS BOMBARD BIRDS

Armed With Shotguns and State Authority They Kill Thirty-five Starlings.

NUISANCE IS ABATED

Arthur Fritz With One Shot Bags Seven Birds—Shooting "Bee" Will Be Continued Until Pests Are All Gone.

Sounds of gun shots in the borough last evening drew quite a crowd of the curious to the vicinity of Watchung and Jackson avenues, the starling infested neighborhood, where three men, each armed with a shotgun, were slaughtering the pests. They were not firing blank shells last evening, but armed with authority from an official of the State Fish and Game Commission, were shooting to kill, in the hope of ridding the neighborhood of the flock of birds that has made the vicinity of Mayor Clark's home their headquarters since early summer. It is not known whether the result of the campaign with gun and shot will prove successful until two or three more forays against the starlings have been conducted, but Mayor Clark is hopeful.

Although Mayor Clark was inclined to put up with the starling nuisance rather than incur the risk of having to pay a heavy penalty because he or his agents might "accidentally or otherwise" shoot a bird of another species nesting or roosting with the starlings, in the hope that they would soon migrate to another climate, his forbearance was stretched to the utmost during these last few days, and the result was that he applied for the permission to shoot the birds, which was offered him in a letter from the commission some time ago. The permit was readily granted, but instead of stipulating that the shooting must be done under the supervision of a fish and game warden, as was generally expected, Chief Warden and Protector J. M. Stratton appointed Chief Weiss, of the borough police force, to have supervision over the matter, and arrangements were made at once to have a shoooting bee last night.

Selecting Marshals Pope and Sheats, of the police force, and Arthur Fritz, Chief Weiss requested their presence in the bird infested neighborhood at 6:15 last evening. They were on hand, each armed with a shotgun and a plentiful supply of shells loaded with No. 6 shot, and finding the birds already back from their days' expeditions for food, the bombardment began.

The first shot was like a call to arms, and from every house in the neighborhood an array of young and old rushed to the scene of the shooting. By the time half a dozen shots had been fired, the street and sidewalks were crowded with interested spectators, some of whom voiced various sentiments on the propriety of shooting the innocent birds. It was noticed, however, that the criticisms heard were from residents of sections of the borough far removed from the starling community.

Arthur Fritz carried off honors in the matter of marksmanship. With one shot he brought down seven birds. The shot used was too large, it is said, and did not scatter well. The next time a smaller shot, No. 9, probably will be tried.

Altogether, thirty-five birds were picked up and placed in a pile, but more than this number were killed, for several were carried away for cooking purposes by people watching the shooting. While the shots and the slaughter of their comrades drove the birds away for a time, they soon came back and showed a disposition to stay.

Most of the starlings killed were the stubby tailed, speckled breasted variety, but two were red winged blackbirds. It is said that the majority of the starling shot, the speckled ones, are fit for food, and many of them were carried away and no doubt graced several tables in the borough today.

The campaign, if it is waged tonight, will open at 5:30. That will give the men more time before it gets too dark to distinguish starlings from other birds that roost in the same trees.

To a Daily Press reporter Mayor Clark said this morning that there was less noise in the trees this morning and fewer evidences of the birds' presence there. They are so strongly attached to the place they have selected for a home, however, that it may be impossible to drive them away even by the drastic measures being tried.

MISS DUNHAM BRIDE OF WM. N. TIER, JR.

Home Ceremony is Performed by Rev. Ernest R. Brown, of Dunellen.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Dunham, at 407 West Second street, was the scene of a pretty wedding last night at 7 o'clock, when their daughter, Miss Geraldine L. Dunham, became the bride of William N. Tier, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William N. Tier, of Westervelt avenue. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Ernest R. Brown, pastor of the Dunellen Presbyterian church.

The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a becoming gown of crepe de meteor, with court train, trimmed with princess lace. She wore a tulle veil and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Walter Monroe Vail, of Netherwood, as matron of honor. The latter wore a charming creation of pink chiffon over white satin, trimmed with panne velvet and lace and carried an armful of pink roses. Walter Monroe Vail acted as best man.

The entire lower floor of the home was attractively decorated for the affair, the florist being most artistic in his flower arrangement. The ceremony took place under an arch of flowers arranged in the bay window of the living room. Miss Irene Day played the wedding march as the bridal party entered the parlor.

Following a reception the newlyweds left for a short wedding trip, after which they will live in Netherwood. Mr. Tier is a salesman for a hardware company in New York city.

TROOP D PLANNING FOR A "GYMKHANA"

Affair May Be Given in October for the Benefit of Some Charity.

Members of Plainfield Platoon, Troop D, First Squadron Cavalry, N. G. N. J., met last night to receive the report of the treasurer, William B. Tyler, and to discuss plans for the coming year. It was found that financially the troop is in excellent condition and the work of the past season has been encouraging. The members have been to two encampments and also visited Sea Girt, having received considerable training at National Guard work. The regular drills will be resumed next Thursday at Joseph Grandi's riding academy on Kensington avenue.

It is quite possible that some time in October, Troop D will give a gymkhana for the benefit of some charity or charities in Plainfield. The matter was informally discussed last night and most of the members seemed to favor the plan. The troop now numbers thirty members and it is hoped to increase this by ten at least in the near future.

ELABORATE SERVICES TO MARK OBSERVANCE

Orthodox Hebrews of this city and vicinity will observe the Day of Atonement Saturday with elaborate ceremonies. The services tomorrow evening, Atonement Eve, in the Temple Sholom, will begin at 7 o'clock. The subject of the Rev. Rabbi H. L. Martin's address will be "Children of the Living God."

On Saturday, the Day of Atonement (Yom Kippur), the services will begin at 9:30 o'clock, and will continue until sunset. There will be a special memorial service at 2 o'clock.

Services at the Rahway Reformatory will be held at the same hours as the services in the Temple Sholom, in charge of I. Kaplan, whom Rabbi Martin will send over from this city. On Thursday last Rabbi Martin and Judge and Mrs. William Newcorn visited the reformatory and addressed the Hebrew inmates in connection with special services which were held there for them. Included in the party were Mr. and Mrs. Max Tepper and Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Tepper.

JAIL ASSAILANT AFTER LONG HUNT

Acting-Chief Flynn Nabs Clarence Thornton Who Assaulted Caulfield.

CONFESSES TO CRIME

Negro Says He's Ready to Take His Medicine—Arrested at Cranbury on a Capias—Act Committed in May, 1911.

Following a search that dates back to May, 1911, Acting Chief John J. Flynn, of the local police department, yesterday afternoon arrested Clarence Thornton, colored, who is wanted by the Union county authorities as the assailant of Cormack Caulfield, a local contractor, who was murderously assaulted on West Third street five years ago. The negro was apprehended while picking potatoes on the farm of Ernest Stults at Cranbury, and was taken completely unawares by Flynn. On the trip back to Plainfield the prisoner admitted assaulting Caulfield and said that he was "prepared to take his medicine and get it over with." The arrest was accomplished after an afternoon's work in scouring the country in the vicinity of Cranbury, where the negro appeared to be well known and information secured by Flynn from several different sources led the local officer to swoop down upon the fugitive in the Stults potato field.

The victim of the assault was at first thought to be mortally wounded and for nearly a week lingered between life and death. Thornton admits using as his weapon a brick which he threw from his yard on West Third street at Caulfield's head.

CITY'S NET RATABLES SET AT $31,116,652

Increase Over Last Year Noted in Returns for Union County.

Plainfield's net taxable valuations for the fiscal year just closed, as announced by the County Board for the Equalization of Taxes, is $31,116,652. The entire gain for net ratables in the county for the year falls behind that of last year, if comparison is made with the advance in 1914 over 1913. The total net ratables this year amount to $170,285,444.26, while in 1914 the net ratables were $166,631,178, as compared with $158,761,263 for 1913.

The figures for 1915 in nearby municipalities follow: Fanwood (township), real estate, $1,426,917; railroad property, $305; personal, $271,887.70; net valuation, $1,699,109.70; Fanwood (borough), real estate, $564,590; railroad property, $19,377; personal, $75,800; net valuation, $659,767; Westfield, real estate, $9,066,815; railroad property, $72159; persoal $1,058,691.52; net valuation, $10,197,665.52.

John K. Roundey, until recently president of the Endress Company in this city, was adjudged in contempt by Vice-Chancellor Stevens in Newark this morning, the court thereby granting the rule of Richard Stockton, of Newark, applying for such an order. According to a statement made by Mr. Stockton today Mr. Roundey is eleven weeks in arrears in meting the temporary alimony order to pay his wife $15 a week made by the court about a year ago. To satisfy the payment of $165, accumulated alimony, Mr. Stockton was given authority to take out a writ of attachment on Mr. Roundey's belongings, the same to be returned October 10.

Mr. Roundey was not in court this morning and in view of the fact that his present whereabouts are not known it was claimed by Mr. Stockton that he could not be served with papers, as was ordered by the vice-chancellor last week. It is believed that he is somewhere in New York, Mr. Stockton claiming that he met him on a trolley car in that city some time ago.

In view of the fact that the defendant in the action could not be reached the court agreed to accept service on his attorneys, Martin B. Stutsman or Reed and Hetfield, of this city. Mr. Stutsman was accordingly apprised of the action and was on hand when the court's decision was announced.

Yesterday afternoon Mr. Stockton, was was recently appointed receiver for the Endress Company, conducted a quiz into the financial affairs of the company, Martin Stutsman being the principle witness. In the course of his direct questioning Mr. Stockton asked Mr. Stutsman to explain many points and also attempted to make certain revelations, but it was stated after the hearing that he had acquired no information of the character he was seeking.

Mr. Stockton brought out the fact that Mr. Roundey had paid the firm of Reed and Hetfield a check amounting to $197.38 and another one to Robert Newton Crane, also of this city, for $100, a short time after the Roundey-Poinier case ended. He inferred that Mr. Roundey was financing the Poinier case but his flimsy proof failed to establish any such condition. Edward Vanderhoef, one of the witnesses, said that the check of $197.38 had been paid to Reed and Hetfield to satisfy a bill which the Endress Company owed to a Trenton meat concern for which Reed and Hetfield were attorneys. Vanderhoef was interested in the Endress Company at that time and he claimed to have been instrumental in getting Mr. Roundey to draw the check.

Mr. Stockton asked Allen Snyder, a bookkeeper, living at 500 Lee place, this city, if he had not drawn up a set of "fake" books for Roundey, but this query met with an indignant denial from Snyder. The local young man admitted that he had been employed to keep books for the Endress Company during evenings, he having been employed in another line of work during the day, but declared that he was not a party to any such wrong doing as Mr. Stockton alluded to.

HOW TWO ITALIAN BOYS 'MADE GOOD'

Interesting Story of Their Rise From Obscurity to Positions of Prominence.

FORMERLY LIVED HERE

Dr. W. H. Morse, of Hartford, Tells How the Lads Were Started on the Right Road After Arrest for "Malicious Mischief."

The following interesting story telling how two Italian boys, who lived here during their boyhood days, "made good," is related by Dr. W. H. Morse, of Hartford, Conn. The latter was at the time superintendent of a Sunday-school at New Orange, and since then has kept in touch with the boys. His story follows:

"It was before Judge Runyon, in the police court at Plainfield. The prisoners were two little bright-eyed, black-haired Italian boys. The charge against them was "malicious mischief," and the complainant was an angry Irishwoman. The boys had lassoed her cow.

"'Yes, sir,' they answered to the magistrate's question, 'we caught her easy's could be. She wouldn't run so's we could chase her!'

"'Why did you do it?' the judge asked.

"'To catch her, sure! When we get big we going to be cowboys!'

"The judge administered a reproof, and learning that, although they had done the lassoing in a Scotch Plains pasture, they belonged in Elizabeth, he put them under the care of Miss Keron, the court probation officer.

"To her they were very communicative, telling thatthey would go to

INJURED IN AUTO CRASH AT WESTFIELD

A. W. Andrews, of This City, Taken to Elizabeth Hospital Following Collision.

As the result of a collision with a heavy motor truck on North avenue, at Euclid avenue, Westfield, a little before 9 o'clock last night, Austin W. Andrews, of 900 Hillside avenue, this city, suffered injuries that necessitated his removal to the Elizabeth General Hospital, where he is a private patient of Dr. Edgar B. Grier, of that city.

Mr. Andrews was driving his car towards Plainfield, and witnesses state that he was on the left side of the road. At Euclid avenue he met a motor truck owned by Isaac Kaesel, of 531 Clinton avenue, Newark, loaded with peaches for the Newark market, and the two vehicles came together head-on. In the general mix-up the automobile was badly damaged about the hood and fenders. The motor truck got off with slight damage. Mr. Andrews gave no reason for his being on the wrong side of the road.

Dr. F. B. Gilpin, of Cranford, and Dr. R. G. Savoye, of Westfield, were summoned and they ordered the patient's removal to the Elizabeth General Hospital. The ambulance came to Westfield for that purpose. Mr. Andrews had two cuts on his head and another on his chin, the latter requiring several stitches to draw it together. Dr. Grier said that Mr. Andrews was so far improved that he will be able to leave the hospital tonight.

Mr. Andrews is connected with the Intercontinental Construction Corporation, of New York, which concern is now building the new Brooklyn subway. He is making his home at present with J. H. Mellick, of Park avenue, as Mrs. Andrews has been in Cleveland, Ohio, during the past summer.

MEETS HIS DEATH WHILE PICKING COAL

Antony Szwedo, Aged 27 Years, Struck by Train This Morning.

Stepping from in front of a west-bound Central Railroad train, near the Madison avenue bridge, directly in the path of a fast travelling east-bound train, caused the instant death of Antony Szwedo, aged 27, of 205 Liberty street, at 6 o'clock this morning. The victim's body was hurled high in the air by the tender of the engine and returned to the tracks to be terribly mangled. He is survived by a wife and three children and the body is at present lying in Higgins' morgue on West Fourth street.

Szwedo, who was employed at the South Plainfield plant of the Spicer Manufacturing Company, left home shortly before 6 o'clock for the purpose of purchasing a piece of ice at the Independent Ice Company's station. He walked along the tracks on the west-bound side and as he stepped out to avoid an oncoming train his body was snatched from the ground by the engine on the east-bound track.

News of the fatility was conveyed to the wife by fellow-countrymen of Szwedo and the woman is in a distracted state. The victim was highly respected by his employers and friends and his death has caused a gloom to overcast the section of Liberty street in which he lived. No arrangements for the funeral have as yet been made.

TESTING BIPLANES AT BOUND BROOK

Reported That Aircraft Company Will Furnish Twelve Machines to Allies.

Representatives of the British Government and a staff officer of the aviation corps of the United States Army witnessed successful flights of the tractor military biplanes at Bound Brook this week. These machines are being made by the Aircraft Company, of which John E Sloane, of this city, is the head. The latter is a son-in-law of Thomas A. Edison, who also visited the Bound Brook plant this week.

There was a report that the company had received an order to furnish twelve machines for the Allies, but when questioned on the subject last night, Mr. Sloane declined to admit the truth of the rumor. He said that the people could imagine what they pleased, but he would admit nothing. Furthermore he refused to reveal the identity of the visitors to the plant this week.

The tractor biplane is the invention of Mr. Sloane and Charles A. Bay, of New York. Mr. Sloane claims that it is superior to the Curtis machine. It has 125 horse power and is capable of developing great speed as well as carrying heavy loads.

COMPLAINANT REPRIMANDED IN THE CITY POLICE COURT

Dominic Popiola, of West Third street, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza, in the city court, this morning, charged by David Steinman with assault. Steinman claimed that Popiola attacked him and severely beat him.

After hearing considerable testimony on both sides, Judge DeMeza declared that he was inclined to believe the defendant in preference to Steinman, who has a police record, and who, according to the court, is not to be depended upon. The complaint was dismissed. Martin Stutzman represented Steinman.

EVIDENCE INSUFFICIENT.

After hearing testimony in the case of Barney Butansky against Joseph Miller, in the city court, this morning, Judge DeMeza suspended sentence on the defendant, stating that Butansky had failed to produce witnesses to corroborate his testimony that Miller had attacked him with a knife. The disput occurred on West Third street, and according to Butansky it was caused by Miller's failure to pay $30. Harry C. Runyon represented the complainant.

HOW TWO BOYS MADE GOOD

the distant West as soon as they were old enough, and enjoy ranch life. Their home life was not pleasant. Their mother had married again after their father's death, and had died a few months after this marriage. The stepfather married again, and the boys were in the way. After their escapade, Miss Keron saw the man and had them sent to school. Further misdemeanors did not develop, although they got into the habit of roaming the country Saturdays and Sundays.

"One Sunday they came out to New Orange, and to the mission Sunday-school, of which I was superintendent. I asked their names—Joe and Tony Mercoledi. Supposing that they lived in the village, I invited them to come again, and they did so, and kept coming.

"We fellows want to make good!" they said.

"My roll-book shows a record of eleven weeks' consecutive attendance. Then they came to say good-by. Their stepfather was to send them to Italy. They promised their teacher that they would read their Testaments.

"We'll read it to my uncle in Italy," Joe said. "We'll make it into Italian as we read. He never see a Testament, and it will be great fun.

"That the 'fun' might be pronounced, I gave them each a Testament in Italian, and they were delighted.

"It was three or four years later before I heard of them again. Then it was through a Neapolitan immigrant who knew Joe. The boys had been instrumental in the uncle's conversion by reading the Testament him, and the three had united with the Baptist church. Joe was with his uncle in the Val di Chiana, on a farm. My informant knew nothing of Tony. Not long after I called on the stepfather in Elizabeth and learned that Tony had gone out to the Argentine Republic.

"'He better be dead!' the man said fiercely. 'He good as dead. Your own fault, making him a Protestant!'

"Some time in the summer of 1913, nearly fourteen years from the time when he lassoed Mrs. Kelly's cow, I had a letter from Joe—Giuseppe Mercoledi. He asked if I would refer his letter to some dairyman, that he might advise him as to the advisability of exporting the white cattle of Italy to the United States. He described the breeds—the Chianina, averaging a weight of 2,500 pounds for the cow, and 3,500 for the oxen; the Piedmontese, weighing 1,500 for the cows and 2,200 for the bulls, and the Romagnola, of about the same weight. 'All these,' he wrote, 'are a pure white, good for milk, slaughter or work.' Heifers could be bought at a fair figure, and he could export 'as many as were wanted.' I referred the letter, and, writing him of its disposal, remarking that 'I saw that he was a cowboy!'

"He answered me. Incidentally he wrote of his stock farm, but at more length of his religious work in Umbria.

"'I do all I can,' he wrote. 'My brother is doing a great deal more. He is among thousands who are not Catholics or Protestants, and he can never be tired, for he does great. * * Tony is in the cattle business. If the new tariff is passed, he will probably send beef to New York.'

"Since the holidays Argentine beef has come into the markets in this country in large quantities. The American Consul, giving the names of the shippers from Buenos Aires, includes that of Antonio Mercoledi. The boys have "made good," and both are in the cattle business, too!'"

JAIL ASSAILANT AFTER HUNT

while the latter was sitting in his wagon at the curb. Early that morning Caulfield, who owned the house in which the negro lived, called to collect three months' arrears in rent and was told by Thornton's wife that she had given the money to her husband to pay Caulfield.

The owner of the house then set out to search for Thornton and met him coming from a Liberty street saloon. The negro said that he had lost the money in gambling and drinking and this information Caulfield communicated to the wife. As he was leaving the house after speaking with Mrs. Thornton, Caulfield was attacked by the husband. When the brick reached the spot for which it was aimed, Caulfield's head, the latter toppled over backwards in his wagon and was lying in a pool of blood when Flynn and Patrolman Arthur McGinley reached the man. During the time Flynn was taking Caulfield, who was thought to be dying, to the office of Dr. C. B. Lufburrow, Thornton made his escape and successfully eluded the authorities until yesterday.

He was indicted by the Union County Grand Jury on evidence obtained by Flynn and a capias was subsequently issued for his arrest. Several times Flynn has succeeded in locating him at various points, but the fugitive each time slipped away before he could be reached. On one occasion he was known to be in West Virginia and again he was located in Newark. He admitted last night that Flynn "had him right" in both instances.

Thornton says that he was getting tired of being "hounded" by the police and is "glad that it is all over." He says he has been living in the vicinity of Cranbury for three years and appears to be well thought of in that section. It is known that the negro visited Plainfield frequently but always managed to get in and out without being detected.

He will be committed to the Union county jail at Elizabeth this afternoon.

PRINCE OF WALES RELIEF.

Fourth Gallery, New Building.

Another Great Purchase of Women's Silk Stockings, 95c Pr.

And, best of all, it is just as good as the last purchase.

Mill run of $1.50 and $2 grades from perhaps the best-known maker of silk stockings in America.

This maker is so very particular that his "mill run" stockings are practically perfect; the almost unnoticeable faults are in the knitting and do not affect the long life of the stocking.

Black White Colors Novelties

Street and evening shades, black or white, and even the pretty cobweb stockings and the vertical striped hose.
All sizes to start with, so be sure to choose early Friday morning.

The Amazon from Paris Visits New York

Amazon hats are le dernier cri.

Amazon fashions rule Paris.

The Amazon herself is making name and fame for herself in the French woman who is notably taking up the work of her father, or brother, sweetheart or husband in these days of the great war.

The Wanamaker French Millinery Salons are introducing this radically different note—Amazon fashions—in the Autumn Millinery Opening continuing today and tomorrow.

Who is the Amazon?

In Greek legend Amazons are a race of women who were supposed to have lived on the Coast of the Black Sea and in the Caucasus Mountains.

It was a manless land in which women did all the work and had all the fun. Women built the cities. Women warred. Women were the only gods.

The French have always called athletic women Amazons. If a woman rode well, skated well, drove her own automobile, played polo or golf, she was apt to be called Le Amazone.

This Fall Caroline Reboux started the fashion.

The French Millinery Premiere of Wanamaker's, recently visiting Paris, her own city, went into the salons of Caroline Reboux.

When she came out she knew the fashion of the Winter.

Later visits to Suzanne Talbot, Evelyne Varon, Maria Guy, Louison, Lewis, Georgette, Valentine About, Jane and Geo. Adrienne, Odette, Camille, and other noted Paris modistes convinced her that she had read the Paris fashion secret aright.

Examples of the Amazon fashion were secured by all these great originators, brought back home with her on the same, and a later steamer, and the mode is now launched in New York.

Many Wanamaker copies and original adaptations of the mode will also be found in the French Salons of the Wanamaker Store on the Second Floor of the Old Building.

American women will find it a fascinating fashion.

The hats are of many moods inspired by many so called periods and are artistic and becoming on the head.

Visitors are very welcome and nothing but trying on these hats will satisfy our readers, we are sure.

PAID $100 FINE.

Michael Fandor, of Netherwood, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court yesterday afternoon, on a serius charge, and sentenced to pay a fine of $100, with the option of spending three months in the county jail. The fine was paid by fellow-countrymen last night.

N. P. H. S. NOTES.

At a meeting of the Boys' Athletic Association of the North Plainfield High School, this noon, preparations were made for the annual play, which will be given the latter part of October. A play committee was appointed by the president, which comprises Sherman Chandler, chairman; Oscar Dilts, Alfred Willett, Clarence Roddy, John Dawe and Martin McDonough. The committee will select a play and coach at the earliest convenience, after which the characters for the different parts will be chosen. Action was also taken in regard to the payment of dues entitling membership to the association. Students will be given the opportunity of paying their 50 cents before November 1, after which time they will be barred from all participation in athletics under the colors of their alma mater.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Film features of extraordinary quality will be exhibited at the U. S. Astor Theatre today, tomorrow and Saturday. "Her Great Match" will be the dramatic feature of a splendid bill this afternoon and tonight. This picture marks the debut in photo-drama of Miss Gail Kane, who was in the cast of "Seven Keys to Baldpate," "Betty in Search of a Thrill," with Elsie Janis, the musical comedy madcap, in the leading role, will be shown tomorrow afternoon and evening. Saturday, "When a Woman Loves," with Miss Emmy Wehlan, another musical comedy star, in the pricipal role, will be shown. The Astor Theatre is equipped with the last refinement in devices to keep the auditorium cool, and patrons will find the atmosphere there twice as cool as out of doors.

A Galley o' Fun!

ANTIQUITY.

A chair encumbers our dim hall.
Moth-eaten is its faded seat;
Its legs are short, its back is tall;
'T is but a trap for passing feet.
You cannot sit upon the Chair,
Its framework is so very weak;
But Wife insists its place is there
Because it's real antique.

A Table came from our home town.
'T was shaky, scratched, and full of nicks;
One leaf folds up and one folds down;
It holds a brace of candlesticks.
It wobbles if you go too near;
The knobs are chipped, the drawers all leak;
Yet it has come to stay, I fear,
Because it's real antique.

A Bed has shown up to replace
The staunch couch where I sought repose;
Bold Cupids stare me in the face;
The hanging draperies brush my nose;
And each one of the post quartette
Has a distinctly different squeak;
Yet Wife is singing paeans yet,
Because it's real antique.

All through our house it's just the same;
I'll grin and bear it, I suppose.
Perhaps, when I get worn and lame,
And dull and careless of my clothes:
Perhaps, I say, they'll prize me then,
And in endearing terms they'll speak,
And praise me to my fellow-men,
Because I'm real antique!

CRAFTY.

A laggard in love and a dastard in war was [illegible] seen, to wed the fair Ellen of Young Lochinvar.

But the latter was not to be caught asleep.

"I'll just keep out of it till the stiff has waited at the chancel, with his best man, while the bridal party marches down the aisle to that slow thing of Wagner's!" quoth he, and suiting the action to the word he carried off the girl at last without having had to undergo the worst of the inconvenience.

ON THE SEVENTEENTH.

"An' how did Murphy get the black eye?"

"Faith, he got it givin' another man two!"

A FEW OPEN DATES.

Sophomore—What are you going to do when you leave college, old chap?

Senior—Well, I haven't decided on anything definite for the first year, except to come back for the class reunion.

SECRETS.

First Financier—I made my success by putting my money where I could get my hands on it easily.

Second Ditto—And I got mine by putting other people's where I could get my hands on it easily.

THE RIGHT TEXT.

Rural Bystander—That's a golrammed fine machine, ain't it, t' play such a trick on a feller!

The Gentleman Beneath —Don't knock, please. Boost!

AT REGULAR RATES.

Poet—"Yes, I write poetry and you raise hay; we are both producers.

Farmer—And I reckon we both get about fifteen dollars a ton.

FALSE.

Clerk—This is an eight-day clock.

Murphy—G'wan! It's a lot; there's only sivin days in the wake!

A REQUEST.

Mining Co. President—Have you seen our annual statement?

Friend—Yes. Now, just between ourselves, I'd like to ask you one question.

M. C. P.—Certainly.

Friend—Just what is your exact financial condition?

ANNUAL SESSION OF THE JR. O. U. A. M.

State Council Will Meet in Newark on October 13 and 14.

The forty-seventh annual session of the State Council of New Jersey, Jr. O. U. A. M., will be held in the Junior Mechanics building, Newark, on Wednesday and Thursday, October 13 and 14.

The two days' session promises to be the greatest in the history of the order. The feature of the first day's session is to be a monstrous parade, in which it is estimated that fully 25,000 members of the order will participate. The parade is to be held at night.

The first day's session will convene at 10 o'clock, and will be presided over by Rene F. P. von Minden, State councilor, of New Market.

The report of Secretary William H. Miers, of Trenton, will show that during the year the order has made a net gain of 1,307 members, with a total membership in the State of 62,215. During the year the order has gained in finances $41,732.17 and the total worth of all councils foots up $1,513,677.01. There have been [illegible] new councils instituted.

The death a few months ago of Rev. J. Morgan Read, twenty-five years the treasurer of the order, is recorded on the pages of the order as one of the saddest events in its history and his presence at the coming session will be greatly missed.

As a tribute to his untiring efforts in the interest of the Junior Order, there is to be erected in Evergreen cemetery, Trenton, a monument, the gift of the councils of the State of New Jersey.

As usual, interest centers in the election of officers. Rene F. P. von Minden will retire from the State councilor's chair and will become the junior past State councilor. His successor will be Theodore Bustenbaum, of Garfield Council, No. 56, of Town of Union.

Rev. Samuel Harker, of Philadelphia, a member of Jersey Blue Council, No. 22, of Clayton, who served several terms as the State council chaplain, is the most prominently mentioned candidate for State vice councilor.

There will be no change in the State secretary, William H. Miers, of Trenton, having been elected for a term of three years at the last session in Atlantic City.

From all indications there will be several candidates for the State treasurership. The position was filled following Dr. Read's death by the board of managers, who selected Past State Councilor William B. LaRue, of Dunellen. Mr. LaRue will be a candidate for the position.

Officers who are likely to make the race for the office of State treasurer are Past State Councilor Frank K. Muta, of Bridgeton, Past State Councilor William J. Wakefield, Jr., of Newark, and Past State Councilor Everett Gray, of Jersey City.

Edward C. Johnson, of Goodwill Council, New Brunswick, will be a candidate for State council warden. Mr. Johnson is now the State council outside sentinel.

PASTOR RUSSELL WILL SPEAK IN THIS CITY

Pastor Russell, well-known author and lecturer, pastor of London and Brooklyn Tabernacle, and head of the International Bible Students' Association, has been secured for his famous lecture, "The Battle of Armageddon," in this city, at 7:30 p. m., next Sunday, in the Plainfield Theatre. He comes at the invitation of the local body of the International Bible Students' Association.

Since the outbreak of hostilities in Europe, Pastor Russell has been delivering a series of lectures on the great conflict and its place in Bible prophecy. Special attention has been called to these because the Brooklyn pastor has for many years, in public lectures and in his books on Bible study, which have attained an enormous circulation, expressed his conviction, based upon the interpretation of Bible prophecies, that a time of intense trouble upon the world would be due in the autumn of 1914. He sees in this present struggle the prelude to the "Battle of Armageddon," and believes the establishment of Christ's Kingdom will quickly follow.

THE ANTIS IN MOTHER GOOSE.

Taffy was an Anti, Taffy was a "peeve,"
Taffy came to my house and told me not to leave;
I went to Taffy's house; Taffy was not at home;
I laughed at Taffy's arguments and left for her this "pome."

Sit by the table and pout.

To sample the dish
You keep all your neighbors out.

SCHOOLS FOR WATCHERS.

Mrs. Colvin Instructs Suffragists In Election Laws.

Exactly what the New Jersey election law means, what it allows and does not allow has puzzled many an experienced attorney and election officer. That fact has not daunted the spirit of Mrs. F. H. Colvin of East Orange, who has studied the law from beginning to end and has boiled down its meaning as it affects the special election of Oct. 19 to instructions which are printed on a sheet of legal paper.

"The suffragists know," says Mrs Colvin, "that the result of the election depends entirely on whether we are able to get out the voters or not, and it is absolutely essential that we should have a large army of women who know exactly how to get the best results on election day. For that reason I have made a close study of the election law and am going into the different counties of the state to hold conferences with the suffragists."

Since the watchers bill in New Jersey makes it possible for women or men to serve at the polls the women are going to help on election day. There will be hundreds of well informed women on duty as watchers.

This school is a phase of the intensive work that is being done by suffragists in New Jersey. Watchers schools are being held in Boonton, Toms River, Mount Holly, Paterson, Madison, Passaic, Newton, Camden, Salem, Atlantic City, Wildwood, Vineland, Woodbury, Hoboken, Jersey City, Bayonne, Elizabeth, Plainfield, New Brunswick, Bound Brook, Flemington, Lambertville, Trenton, the Oranges and Hackensack.

Where it is impossible for watchers to attend the school they will be given printed sheets of instructions. Some of the watchers will be men who have volunteered to assist the women suffragists in this important work.

VOTES FOR WOMEN AND MORMONISM.

"When the fastastic statements are made that the Mormons hold the balance of power in eight of the equal suffrage states in the west and that there is a 'relation between giving the ballot to women and giving plural wives to men' suffragists are led to wonder with amazement whether panic has arisen in the anti-suffrage quarters," remarks ex-Senator Everett Colby.

"Can any one picture," he asks, "the women of New Jersey rushing to the polls to vote in favor of sharing their husbands with others? Such statements bring ridicule upon the people who make them.

"There is no evidence to support the assertion that the Mormons hold the balance of power. The World's Almanac of 1912 gives the number of communicants in the Mormon church as 356,000. The United States census of 1910 gives the combined population of those states as 5,920,815. It is foolish to suppose that 356,000 persons can hold the balance of power in a population of nearly 6,000,000, especially when every one knows that the great bulk of the Mormon population live in the single state of Utah."

Up to the Men.

It is the men of New Jersey who must decide whether the women shall have the ballot in this state or not. Possibly this is the wrong way to decide such a question, but under our laws there is no other way. Very soon it will be time to ask seriously what the men intend to do about this matter. The special election will be held in about three months. Machine politicians and the saloon interests are opposed to woman suffrage, but the great body of voters in this state are not beholden to the political machines or to the saloons in casting their ballots.—Jersey Journal.

CARPENTER WILL HAVE TO PAY $100 AND QUIT STATE

Good sleuthing on the part of Patrolman James Saunders resulted in the arraignment of John Carpenter, colored, before Judge DeMeza, in the city police court, this morning on a serious charge. After hearing the case Judge DeMeza sentenced Carpenter to pay a fine of $100 and quit the State immediately. This he agreed to do, and friends say they will furnish the $100 this afternoon.

Carpenter's arrest followed numerous complaints coming from the East End section of the city, and Patrolman Saunders gathered his evidence from youths living in the neighborhood where the offenses were said to have been committed.

MIDDLESEX SUFFRAGISTS PLAN EXTENSIVE TOUR

The Middlesex County Suffrage Squadron has planned quite an extensive tour for Saturday, on which it will be accompanied by several prominent speakers. The trip will be made in automobiles, starting from Dunellen at 9 o'clock in the morning. A stop will be made at New Market fifteen minutes later, and at South Plainfield at 9:30, Oak Tree at 10 o'clock and Metuchen at 10:30 o'clock. More than a dozen other places in the county will be visited.

Those who will comprise the squadron will be Mrs. E. F. Feickert, State president; Mrs. Theodore Sullivan, county chairman; Mrs. Arthur Clark, New Brunswick; Mrs. Thomas Barr, Metuchen; Mrs. George Clark, South Amboy; Mrs. Marcus Wright and Dr. Sarah E. Selover, South River, and Dr. Harriette M. Dilla, county organizer.

HE KEPT HER LOVE LETTERS AND THEY GOT HIM LIBERTY

Love letters she wrote to Angelo Parenti, while the latter was residing in Long Island, got Maria Dimaria, of Netherwood, into a peck of trouble this morning, when she attempted to show that her gallant suitor was pressing his claims for her hand with the aid of death threats. Pretty Maria had Angelo arrested on a charge of drawing a razor on her and declaring that he would kill her unless she married him.

Angelo denied the charge, but stated that the girl, who is but sixteen years of age and beautiful, sent him love letters and asked him to move to Plainfield and marry her. This the complainant denied, but Angelo produced the letters, and they were read by an interpreter to the court. In them the writer lovingly manifested her love for Angelo, and pleaded with him to move to Plainfield, ending up by saying that she could neither work, play nor live without him. She at first claimed that Angelo had written the letters, but the court took a sample of her writing, and a hurriedly empaneled jury, with William L. Smalley as foreman, decided otherwise. The gril then admitted writing them, and the case was dismissed.

SURPRISE VARIETY SHOWER.

A surprise variety shower was given to Miss Abbie Dorgan at her home on Arlington avenue last night. The affair was in honor of her approaching marriage to James C. Hurley, of this city, and was arranged as a complete surprise. The bride-to-be was the recipient of many useful gifts and also received the best wishes of the guests present.

Germans Report Air Raid.

The following statement was issued by the Admiralty today:

"German naval airships successfully attacked the western part of the city of London on the nights of September 8 and 9. Large factories near Norwich and ironworkers in Middlesboro were bombarded. Strong explosions were heard and numerous fires broke out. The airships were violently shelled by enemy batteries but all returned safely."

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

To the Plainfield Board of Health: It was about five weeks ago one of my sons was taken ill with a sore throat, and after gargling it with a preparation, he was all right in a day or two, and then another child had the same trouble. I took the child to a doctor and was informed that he had been suffering diphtheria in a light form. Antitoxin was used, and soon the patient was all right. Then the New Market Board of Health was notified. My child was fretting a little, and the doctor was called again and antitoxin was again used, when all signs of illness disappeared. The Health Board then quarantined the premises after the danger was over and in about ten days the Plainfield Board of Health stopped me from selling vegetables from my farm. The New Market Health Board fumigated two rooms in my house overlooking fourteen others. They think it is sufficient, but I don't. Since this scare I imagine I see germs walking around my house as big as cats. I would like to have the city of Plainfield send up its apparatus, loaded with carbolic acid and spray the other twelve rooms of the house and everything on the place so that I can sell my vegetables before they all rot.

New York, Sept. 16.—Fire broke out in the new Fourth avenue subway, at Sackett street, Brooklyn. Clouds of smoke poured out of the sidewalk ventilators, and passers-by could see the flames below. Defective insulation was thought to be the cause. All employes and passengers near the scene of the fire were gotten out safely. The fire department was called out at once. Shortly before noon service on the Sea Beach subway, Brooklyn, was resumed. The tie-up was due to a freight car used for carrying supplies for contractors causing a short circuit at Union street.

RECALLS VALOR OF CIVIL WAR "VETS"

Joseph F. Frelinghusyen Addresses 15th Regiment, N. J. Vols. at Reunion.

In his address to the members of the Fifteenth Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, at their reunion in Somerville, today, Joseph S. Flelinghuysen said in part:

"By reason of your valor we are the greatest nation on the face of the globe today. I note with sadness the departure since last we met of some of the old friends. I am glad they lived to be given recognition by the State and to witness the erection of a fitting monument on the historic battlefield where the regiment made its greatest sacrifice—the Bloody Angle at Salem Church.

"I count myself fortunate to have been permitted to call the attention of the State Legislature to the obligation it owed to the heroes of the Fifteenth Regiment, and to have been present with you when the beautiful monument at Salem Church and the marker at Bloody Angle were unveiled.

"In your lifetime you have seen the Franco-Prussian conflict; England and the Boer Republic of South Africa locked in a death struggle; Russia and Japan in the great conflict; Italy and Tripoli at odds; the Balkan War with Greece and Turkey, Bulgaria, Rumania, Servia and Montenegro involved; and yet all of these conflicts pale in significance when we realize that today we are witnessing the greatest war of the world.

"Where is the influence of the church? What of Christianity? Where is our civilization? Never before in the history of the world has human life been held so cheaply. We have heretofore believed that scientific warfare would be so horrible and shocking that humanity would cringe and human endurance would be exhausted, yet the slaughter goes merrily on.

"With all the evolution and progress in scientific warfare, there are certain elements that have not changed. One is the bravery of the American patriot; and with all of the machines of destruction there is not one bit more of suffering; no finer quality of courage. It takes no more nerve to face a machine gun than it did to face an old-fashioned Enfield rifle. The pangs of parting from the loved ones are just as paignant, and the widow's tears and the mother's anguish are not one wit less today than they were fifty-three years ago.

"That you fought for liberty and justice and Christianity is the reason why this nation cries for peace with national honor; not that patriotism is dead, but that patriotism which would support an unnecessary war is false patriotism.

"This nation has had many lessons, and each time a conflict has been forced upon us. In 1776 the patriots fought the trained legions of Europe unprepared. In 1812 England again found us not ready. In 1861 the South was better equipped than we. In 1898 we sacrificed many valuable lives owing to our unpreparedness, and that is why today all over this great nation there is a cry that we must find means for national defense.

"American patriotism is not dead, but let us not therefore, heedlessly sacrifice brave lives by making them a hopeless prey to implements of destruction, without providing them with like equipment for their own defense."

PIONEER MISSIONARY CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

Rev. Ira Joy Stoddard, who makes his home with his daughter, Mrs. Arthur S. Whitney, of 825 West Fourth street, celebrated his ninety-fifth birthday anniversary yesterday. Dr. Stodard is a retired Baptist preacher and missionary. He was one of the pioneers to carry the gospel into India in 1847 after being graduated from Colgate College. On his first visit to India he remained until 1856. He returned to that country again in 1866, remaining until 1870, when he came to his native country to stay.

Dr. Stoddard was born at Eden, N. Y., September 15, 1820, and he has had a very active life. Beside his daughter here, he has another one living in California and a son in Iowa. Although well advanced in years, Dr. Stodard enjoys excellent health.

The Christian Endeavor Society, of Bethel chapel, will give a song recital on Thursday evening, September 23, at which Sidney Woodward, tenor, will be heard.

FITZ, FLOORED FINANCIALLY, HAS NOTHING LEFT BUT HIS TEMO'S LOVE

"It isn't what you used to be; it's what you are today," said Bob Fitzsimmons yesterday after going to the mat financially from a swift jab to the pocketbook. The ex-champion of the world has fought a bitter bout with fate and found no purse at the end of it. His fourth wife has gone to the Coast and now his farm has slipped away.

The estate of forty-nine acres at Dunellen once belonged to Senator Dryden. Of late years its entrance has been graced by a huge sign: "Bob Fitzsimmons, Boxing Academy and Training School." It has been the joint property of the fighter and his third wife, Julia May Gifford, who divorced him last January.

Sheriff Edward F. Houghton, of Middlesex county, sold the farm on Thursday under foreclosure proceedings to Joseph Hendricks, of Atlantic City, one of Fitz's creditors. The price was $4[illegible]00. The new owner is subject to all claims, which may amount to $6,000. The place is worth at least $12,000, according to Fitzsimmons, who did not go near the sale.

Rosalie, his seventeen-year-old daughter, has been taking care of the house. With her live the two boys, Bob, Jr., aged twenty, and Bartin, eighteen. Now they will have to seek new lodgings. Lanky Bob has not been seen around the place very often. It has been in the hands of young Bob, who has taught prospective pugs the jabs he inherited from his mighty father.

The "training school" is a well-built concrete structure, with plenty of light and a punching bag platform. The ceiling is hung with countless Union Jacks, for Bob, Sr., is a Cornishman by birth and a New Zealander by bringing up.

Almost any afternoon he can be found in Dan McGinity's cafe, 64 Market street, Newark, his headquarters. Last night he was bending over a frying pan in a back room making his own supper—the ex-champion of the world! Bob was feeling pretty blue, and pork chops first appealed to him then, he said.

Carrying his meal to a table with a fist still as hard as a sledge hammer, he sat down and finished his supper. "Yes, Temo's gone," he said, when questioned about his wife. Only this spring Bob made his fourth matrimonial venture, this time with Mrs. Temo Simonin, of Portland, Ore., who had divorced her husband.

"I'm through with her," he added. "I used to love her; now I only like her. She took away with her to Los Angeles my first wife's $80,000 worth of jewels that I have been holding for the children. I told her when we were married, 'Temo, you can wear these jewels, but if anything ever comes between us you must give them back. They aren't mine. They belong to the children.'

"She's been wiring me to come on and go to South America. See these telegrams? Two from her and one from her manager. Will I go with her? Not much! If I go to South America it will be with young Bob. We could clean up lots of money; he's the greatest fighter in the world. He could stop me, even."

Bob walks with a quick, short step that reminds his admirers of his marvellous footwork in the ring. His head and neck are those of a fighter. He would be bald if he did not comb five yellow strands of hair straight across with the utmost care. He swears he is still fit, the New York State Boxing Commission to the contrary notwithstanding.

Mention boxing to Bob Fitzsimmons and there isn't any "used to be" about the conversation. The old fighter is only down and out financially. "I'm better than any of the big fellows today," he asserted, as he left his headquarters and started for his room on Washington street, Newark, where he has lived since the fourth Mrs. Fitzsimmons went West.

"It's because I never dissipated," he continued. "Of course, when I was champion I had to treat, and used to have a ginger ale highball at times, but I stayed in condition. Did you ever hear my lecture on physcial culture? Well, you ought to. I've heard a great many lectures in my life, but that is the best of all."

Feeling in his pocket for some papers, Fitz pulled out a photograph of a woman wearing a gorgeous array of jewelry. "That's Temo, and the bracelet, the diamond sunburst—and the great turquoise!"

"May I borrow this for the paper?" he was asked.

"Oh, are you from a newspaper" he said. "I forgot. I was thinking you were a friend with money that might have saved the farm!"

And Lanky Bob looked disconsolate once more.

THROCKMORTON BEATEN.

Forest Hills, L. I., Sept. 16.—Louis M. Banks, the Adelphi Academy student, completely outgeneraled George P. Throckmorton, the New Jersey player, in the most important of the tennis battles for a place in the round before the semi-final of the Metropolitan Junior Championship tournament here yesterday. The fast drives which Banks shot across the net found the openings. He was vergatile and steady, eliminating one of the favorites for the honors with a run of six straight games. The score of the match was 6-4, 6-1.

FISTIC FINALE.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 16.—A fist fight between Umpire Byron and "Red" Smith, third baseman of the Boston Braves, marked the final game of the year between the Chicago Cubs and the Boston Braves, yesterday. Chicago won the contest, 1 to 0, sending the Braves back to third place in the National League.

2 MILES A MINUTE, PROMISES OLDFIELD

Veteran Race-driver Enthused Over New York's New Automobile Track.

New York, Sept. 16.—"Stupendous! It has speed possibilities that no motor car in existence today can begin to realize," were the words used by Barney Oldfield yesterday in describing his impression of the Sheepshead Bay Speedway after his first visit to the course. Of all the famous racing pilots who have seen the track none has been more amazed at the magnitude of the racing plant, or more confident of the world's records in store for it than Barney Oldfield, a few weeks ago, at Chicago, put up an average of 111.5 miles per hour in his big Christie racer.

"I was simply amazed," said he, "at the wonderful layout. Just as sure as shooting, the winner of the Astor Cup, on October 2, will average over 100 miles an hour. I do not believe, though, that in the elimination trials next week the 300 cubic inch cars eligible for the race will show much faster that the 110.1 miles per hour put up by Resta at Chicago. The truth is that cars of that limited displacement have gone already pretty close to their sprinting limit. In a long run, however, they will make a much better average showing on the new course, for the Sheepshead Bay Speedway is miles faster than any track in the country, and near the seashore the carburetion will be much faster than inland.

"Do I believe that a big-powered car can show down there an average for a lap of 120 miles an hour I surely do. I'll guarantee to drive my big speed car two miles a minute at Sheepshead or take no money for the trial.

GOLFERS MEET SATURDAY ON PLAINFIELD LINKS

Golfers of the Cranford Country Club will meet those of the Plainfield Country Club, Saturday afternoon, on the links of the Plainfield club. The tournament will be team match play and as the course will be congested Saturday, the Cranford club has courteously extended an invitation to all Plainfield golfers not in the tournament to use its links.

CLARKE TO BE GIVEN HONORABLE RELEASE

Pittsburgh, Sept. 16.—Fred Clarke, who recently resigned as manager of the Pittsburgh National League baseball club after a continuous service of sixteen years, has asked Barney Dreyfuss, president of the club, for his unconditional release. Clarke explained that in his twenty-four years as a baseball player he had never received a release and he would like to have the document to show that he had been honorably discharged from the service and to add to his other souvenirs of the game.

Dreyfuss readily consented, and word was flashed to the other clubs asking that they relinquish their claims. Ten days must elapse before the release can be issued.

SHARPSHOOTER BROKE 175 TARGETS STRAIGHT

Atlantic City, Sept. 16.—Lester S. German, the Aberdeen (Md.) professional, broke 175 targets straight and led the field at the end of the second day's shoot of the Westy Hogans here yesterday. Woolfolk Henderson, of Lexington, Ky., with 174 breaks, was second and high gun of the amateurs.

J. M. Hawkins and German led the field in the Westy Hogan introductory at seventy-five targets, each breaking straight. Of the amateurs George N. Fish, of Lyndenville, N. Y., had a score of 73.

The New York State team won the interstate team race by the narrow margin of one target, L. C. Canfield, of Utica, with a 97, clinching the match. The Empire State quintet scored a total of 483 breaks, Pennsylvanian 482.

SAME FOOTBALL FIELDS.

Parker Field will again be used as a gridiron by the Plainfield High School warriors this year and the Holy Cross eleven is planning to use Cricket Field for its scheduled games and Hyde Oval for practicing. These are considered two of the best football fields in this section and considerable rivalry exists among local team as to which will annually get the use of them.

RECORD BASS HOOKED ALONG JERSEY COAST

Favorite Lure and the Places Where Fish Have Been Caught.

Few fishermen appreciate the remarkable weight attained by striped bass in Jersey waters. Every year a few large striped bass running from 10 to 40 pounds are taken along the Jersey coast in the vicinity of Asbury Park. Two years ago the Jersey record was made by a Montclair angler, Eddie Davis, who landed a monster that tipped the beam at 58½ pounds. It was caught at Elberon on July 25. Surf casters on the beach, from the Highlands to Seaside Park, produce some very large fish, but Davis's catch is the largest to date.

June and September are usually the best months, and the fishing generally lasts till October. Montauk Point, Long Island, is also an excellent place for large bass, where fish weighing from 35 to 50 pounds have been taken in recent years. Twenty years ago several fish of more than 70 pounds were hooked there. Early fall is the best time. The favorite lure Down East is a small eel, and this is trolled along the edges of the rocks that project out into the sound. The eel is sometimes used on the Jersey coast, but the favorite with the surf casters in the Asbury Park section is the head of a squid or in fish. This bait is kept by most of the large dealers along shore, and is largely used.

Bloodworms, sometimes a bunch composed of a dozen strung on to a hook with ends left dangling are largely used by surf fishermen. Shedder crabs and mullet, when it can be had, are favorites with others.

The striped bass is rated as one of the gamest of sat water fish, and puts up a battle almost equal to that of the channel bass. Its first rush is perhaps more ferocious and swifter than that of the channel bass, but it is not as prolonged a fighter as its more sturdy brother, and seldom takes more than fifteen to twenty-five minutes to land an ordinary surf tackle.

P. H. S. TRACKMEN PLAN FOR AN ACTIVE SEASON

Coach Jack Fritts, of the Plainfield High School track team, is contemplating an early start for the 1915-16 season and will shortly issue a call to practice with a view to getting his men into condition for the winter board track and indoor campaign. Parker Field will again be used for training purposes and efforts will be made to stage several fall and spring meets at this place.

Despite the fact that graduation took a number of prominent athletes away from other branches of athletics the most promising trackmen are still attending school and will be available for competition again this year. During the winter it is proposed to enter representatives in all of the New Jersey High Schools' indoor meets and possibly several in New York.

rounds at Denver, September 20.

On next Thursday night, September 23, Johnny Dundee will meet Joe Mandot and Joe Azevado and Frankie Callahan will be seen in action at Ebbetts' Field.

Frank Cavanagh, of Newark, defeated Caesar Moretti, the cycle champion, in both heats of their match at the Newark Velodrome, last night.

Directium I, driven by Tom Murphy, yesterday established a new world's pacing record, when he traveled the fastest mile ever negotiated by a pacer without a windshield. His time for the mile was 1.56¾.

FRANK KRAMER STILL THE BIKE SPEED KING

World's Champion Frank Kramer demonstrated that he possesses as much speed as any other professional bike rider in America, when he equaled the world's record of 0:15 2-5 for one-sixth of a mile at the Newark Velodrome last night. Twenty-two riders, including several foreign champions, competed in this trial against the watch. Alf Goullet, the Australian champion; Francesco Verri, Italian champion, and Alf Grenda, of Australia, each covered the distance in 0:16 flat, dividing second, third and fourth money.

Kramer was defeated in the mile open, which was won by Jackie Clark, with Grenda second and Menus Bedell third. Eight riders started in the final, and Kramer was caught in a bad position when Grenda "jumped."

PHILLIES' ROAD NOT CONSIDERED ROCKY

Brooklyns or Boston Will Have to "Go Some" to Win Pennant.

As the National League season draws to a close the chances of Pat Moran's flying Phillies for the pennant appear unusually bright. Philadelphia has 21 games to play, Brooklyn, 18, and Boston, 19.

If the Phillies should win 16 out of their 21 games they would finish with 92 games won and 62 lost and a percentage of .597. If Brooklyn and Boston should win all their remaining games Boston would have 91 games won and 63 lost, with a percentage of .591, while Brooklyn would have 91 games won and 64 lost, with a percentage of .587.

Assuming that the Brooklyns and Bostons win all their games, it would be necessary for the Phillis to win 15 out of their 21 remaining games to finish in front with a percentage of .591. Not even the most rabid Brooklyn or Boston fan, however, would even dream that these clubs will win all of their remaining games. If the three teams as they now stand win half of their games, Philadelphia would finish with 86 won and 68 lost, a percentage of .558. If Brooklyn wins half of their remaining games their final percenage would be .528, with 82 won and 73 lost, while Boston would tie Brooklyn by winning 10 of their remaining games and losing 9.

KIND OF BASEBALL THEY TELL US ABOUT

Lee Magee Boots the Ball Into Baseman's Hands for a Putout.

In an exhibition game at Buffalo recently, George Boehler was credited with what was probably the freakiest and luckiest hit that baseball has known. He won it on a decision that the umpire made with nothing in the book to guide him, common sense alone being employed.

With Burns on third base and two out in the seventh, Boehler swung on a ball and hit it on the top. It set out to bounce down the first base line, but did not get more than three feet from the plate. Boehler dropped his bat as he started to run for the first bag, and the ball, which was less than six inches inside the line, bounced against the stick and was knocked off the diamond, into foul ground.

The umpire ruled that the ball was fair, holding that the bat hitting the ball on fair ground and driving it foul, did not differ from the situation that would obtain if a defensive player's foot or glove touched it. It was an entirely new one on all the scorers.

As Boehler kept on hustling, he got a single. Burns stuck on third, assuming that the ball would be called foul.

A play somewhat similar to this in point of being out of the ordinary was accomplished by Lee Magee in the fifth inning of a game between Newark and Brooklyn Federal League clubs recently. Newark was plugging along two runs in the rear and Schaefer walked. Esmond shot a skipping bounder over second base which looked like a sure hit. Magee dashed over and tried to stop the ball, but he was in no position to get his hands on it. Instead, it struck his shoe and bounced squarely into the hands of Smith just as the shortstop stumbled over second base. The play astounded the Brooklyn players and they did not realize that Shaefer had been forced by the freak play until the Newark team trotted out to the field, following the umpire's decision.

Lee Magee said that it was an accident, pure and simple, and he had only seen its equivalent once. As a member of the Seattle team in 1909 his club won the pennant when the shortstop in his natural position kicked a ball directly into the hands of the second baseman for a forceout at second. It occurred in the deciding game of the series and Spokane was beaten on the freak play.

MANAGER ROBINSON SAYS HIS CHARGES WILL CARRY OFF NATIONAL LEAGUE FLAG

Manager Robinson of the Brooklyn Robins is confident that his team is due to win the National league pennant this year. Anyway, the Robins are going to give the Phillies a great race. This picture of the twenty-three wide-awake youngsters who are making baseball history for Brooklyn was taken last week.

DINING CAR EMPLOYES FOUND 100 P. C. PERFECT

In accordance with the law recently promulgated by New York's Commissioner of Public Health for the restaurants of the metropolis, surgeons of the Lehigh Valley Railroad at its principal division points have just completed a thorough physical examination of all dining car employes. One hundred per cent. perfect was the result.

The examination not only included the waiters and chefs in the dining cars, but even the workers in the headquarters of the dining car department at Easton, Pa.

The company insisted on its own surgeons to be sure no mistake would be made, and a strict standard, including personal cleanliness, was adhered to. These examinations will be made periodically to insure the maintenance of the standard.

Broadway's Favorite Dancing Dolly Captured for Photoplay Fans

YANCSI DOLLY

SCENES FROM "THE CALL OF THE DANCE"

Count that day lost
Whose low descending sun
Sees no new screen star made
Or no new picture vict'ry won.

THE aggressiveness with which the producers of the photo play have been prosecuting their search for novelties for the entertainment of the millions of people the world over who have sworn allegiance to the projector and the picture screen has already been the subject of much comment throughout the amusement world. Expense in the matter of production has long been of minor importance, and the consequent lure of the dollar has become so strong that established stage stars of all magnitudes have tried in vain to resist it. Each day there is on some new deal of greater consequence to photo play plans than have been those deals which have preceded it until scarcely any announcement occasions any great surprise. That Broadway's favorite Dancing Dolly has joined the ranks of the film celebrities—and joined them with an enthusiasm which augurs well for her success upon the screen—will be of interest everywhere, however.

Yancsi Dolly, of the famous Dolly Sisters, is the newcomer, and her introduction to photo play fans is being made by the Kalem Company, one of the oldest and most substantial of the producing companies in the motion picture field.

Miss Dolly—of pure Hungarian lineage and only a few years removed from her native city of Buda-Pest—was sought as the most popularly known exponent of a style of dancing which has always had a tremendous appeal in this country and for other qualifications which have always made for success on the picture screen. She has been sought for years, indeed, and it is a tribute to the enterprise of the Kalem Company that she has just finished her first photo play under their direction.

Yancsi Dolly—and, by the way, the young lady's surname is pronounced as if it were spelled "Yon-she"—has drunk as deeply of the cup of stage success as has any other individual of her years before the public today, and it is her free and whole hearted confession that she enjoyed her work before the motion picture camera more than she has enjoyed any other professional work in her career and will be more pleased with the knowledge that photo play fans in general like her on the screen—if this knowledge comes—than she has been pleased by the noisy and "close-up" plaudits of Broadway audiences who have been admiring her in the sure enough flesh and blood for the past five or six years.

The Dolly Sisters are twins, Yancsi being just fifteen minutes older than her sister Rozsika, who is the other member of the combination. The family name is Delly, and Julius Delly, the father, was a well known artist in Buda-Pest, where his studios were the resort of men and women of the most highly cultivated tastes for art in all its branches. Born with the souls of dancers—for neither Yancsi nor Rozsika has been aided to their present success by a single lesson in dancing—the youngsters before they were five years of age had excited the wonder of the Bohemian set in Buda-Pest by their work at little informal affairs in the various studios.

Not so many years ago Mr. Delly came to America and found things so much to his liking that he had his little family follow him, and father, mother and the rest of them now call New York city home, for Mr. Delly, with his name legally changed to Dolly because of his dancing daughters' success under that name, has a splendid business in restoring the many works of the old masters which are owned in the American metropolis.

The Dolly Sisters made their first professional appearance with the big Gertrude Hoffman revue, which was sent on tour some years ago. Small in stature, with raven's wing hair closely bobbed and with complexions clear and dark, the youngsters were given small parts in a Japanese play which was offered as a part of the revue and also presented a dancing specialty. Miss Hoffman, who was then just coming into prominence, took quite a fancy to the girls and took pleasure in introducing them as "a pair of little Japs," explaining that she considered herself fortunate in having been able to secure them for her revue. The little "Delly" girls looked like little "dollies," and the "Dolly Sisters," a title given first as a descriptive pun, became theirs upon which to build a remarkable stage success.

An extended engagement in vaudeville, during which time the little girls played a solid year in the city of Havana, Cuba, followed the tour with the Hoffman show. Then came "The Midnight Sons," a big musical comedy produced by the Shuberts, and with it Yancsi's first big opportunity. Lotta Faust, it will be remembered, had been cast for the leading feminine role, but died before the show opened. Yancsi Dolly had been chosen as her understudy and was called upon to play the star's part at the opening performance. The success she achieved in "The Midnight Sons" did much to establish the Dolly Sisters as Broadway favorites. Subsequent engagements were with Charles Dillingham's "The Echo," Florenz Ziegfeld's "Follies" and Ziegfeld's "Moulin Rouge" and "The Merry Countess." It is told that it was because of little Yancsi Dolly that Cornelius Vanderbilt bought "The Merry Countess" show outright for a night while it was playing on Broadway and transported all of the company, with costumes and scenery, to his country home, where the performance was given for the entertainment of his friends. He admired Miss Dolly's art and was anxious to have her appear for his guests, but permission for her appearance without the other members of the company was denied by the Shuberts, to whom she was under contract.

Soon after the Dolly Sisters were separated by Dan Cupid, who stole Rozsika away to be the bride of a well known New York music publisher. Yansci appeared at the Winter Garden, New York city, playing opposite Gaby Deslys. It was there she met Harry Fox, her present partner in vaudeville—and in domesticity, for in private life Miss Dolly is now Mrs. Harry Fox. Last season both Miss Dolly and Mr. Fox were members of the "Maid In America" company at the Winter Garden, and it was upon the conclusion of this engagement that Miss Dolly set back a series of vaudeville engagements in order to appear in the Kalem picture entitled "The Call of the Dance." Her present plans call for her appearance in a George M. Cohan musical revue, which will jointly feature Raymond Hitchcock and the Dolly Sisters and will mark the reunion of the two clever dancing girls after a couple of years of work apart.

As has been said, Yancsi Dolly likes the pictures, and the pictures will like Yancsi Dolly. The little dancing girl—for she is still young enough to make youthful enthusiasm a very noticeable asset in everything that she attempts—has established the reputation of being one of the best dressed artistes on the stage. The clothes she wears are designed in perfect taste, and she wears them in a manner which is a delight to the eye. Her dancing, of course, is in a class by itself and of the kind that has an appeal for people of every taste. Lithe, strong and wholesome too, Miss Dolly is the feminine type which mothers like to have their daughters emulate. In a hushed aside it may be said that the splendid healthy physique, with lines as graceful as those of the tiger, has been achieved not only without the aid of restricting corsets or girdles, but rather because of a strong determination to let the body develop in its own way and without the aid of any such artificial means. Shoes, wide and roomy enough to belong to the common sense type, although especially designed to lend beauty to any dress, have also been one of the little dancer's chief cares and have had their part in the building of a perfect form.

While in the vicinity of New York Miss Dolly spends much of her time with her parents at their pretty home at Bensonhurst. She drives her own motorcar, swims with a stroke as strong as that of the average man, plays tennis in nearly championship form and crosses her Hungarian lineage with a splendid brand of Scotch golf.

WASHINGTON PLANS TO ENTERTAIN G. A. R.

Gen. Miles Will Lead Procession in the Grand Review September 29.

Washington, Sept. 16—With Nelson Miles, former commanding general of the United States army at their head, a grand parade of the Grand Army of the Republic will traverse the course of that previous Grand Parade which marked the end of the Civil War. The coming duplicate of the memorable parade of 1865, will take place on Wednesday, September 29, and it will mark the great day of the national encampment of the veterans.

For once Washingtonians are genuinely interested in something that is coming to Washington. The 49th Annual Encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, which will take place here from September 27 to October 3, inclusive, is awaited with the most pleasant anticipation, and the old soldiers and their friends will be given a welcome that will melt their hearts. From the start the affair will be dramatic and picturesque. An attendance to equal the Gettysburg gathering of two years ago is looked for. From all of the 46 different departments, delegations of various sizes are expected to attend, for the half century anniversary of the closing of the great struggle draws the veterans' attention as never before. There are now approximately 6,000 posts in the United States. There will be between 1,500 and 1,600 accredited delegates. The remaining thousands will be the guests of the encampment.

According to present information, the Grand Army will not attempt a discussion of national defense, but will be content to adopt a resolution endorsing the policies of the administration. However, on October 4, the day after the reunion ends, a great conference on national defense will begin a three-day session in Washington, and many of the veterans will remain over.

It is expected that the question of still further extending the pension roll will be discussed thoroughly at the encampment. It is believed that the government will be asked to amend the act of June 27, 1890, so as to create a new class of eligibles. Under the present law, widows who married soldiers after the date of the act are ineligible for pensions. The amendment favored by the G. A. R. provides that such widows who married subsequently to June 27, 1890, and lived with their husbands several years, shall be entitled to pension. Some veterans favor a three-year period, others five, to meet the criticism that designing women have married decrepit soldiers for the purpose of securing government money after the death of their husbands.

The reproduction of the Grand Review which passed before President Lincoln in 1865, is the center of interest here. President Wilson will review the veterans, and as nearly as possible, the veterans will be given the same positions in the line that they occupied a half century ago. For instance, Commander-in-Chief David J. Palmer, of the G. A. R., who rode at the head of the first regiment to pass Lincoln, will again be first in line. Col Palmer led the march of Sherman's army up Pennsylvania avenue fifty years ago; today as commander-in-chief he is slated to again lead the way. Assisting General Miles as Marshals will be Lieut. Generals S. B. M. Young and John C. Bates. The route of the parade this year will be only about a mile and a quarter long, so that the strength of the veterans will not be taxed.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Fatima, the Oriental dancer, is here today. This announcement is sufficient to attract many to Proctor's Theatre, as Fatima's reputation for her clever interpretation of the dances of the East is nation-wide. This dancer was at one time, it is said, an inhabitant of the harem of the recently deposed Sultan of Turkey, making her escape from the Turkish Empire only after thrilling experiences.

Another act which will attract considerable attention at the local vaudeville house during the next three days is the dramatic sketch, "Poorhouse Rats," presented by Milo Beldon and company. It is full of humor, thrills, human interest and comedy. Milo Beldon, who wrote the sketch, and appears in the leading role, will be remembered for the splendid work he did in "Paid in Full" and "Seven Days," in both of which he played. Lovers of the silent drama will be entertained during the last three days of the week, as excellent photoplays have been hooked. "The Scar," a Vitagraph feature film, is to be shown today, while "The Tides of Time" will be thrown upon the screen tomorrow. "June Friday," an Edison feature, is to be shown Saturday. Howard and Ross, banjo specialists, are also booked to appear here during this week in grand opera selections.

The want ad way of tenant-finding is the accepted way—and means small expense and delay.

REAL PICTURES OF WAR.

That truth has not wholly been crushed by the iron hand of Prussian militarism even in lands where the power of the Kaiser is strong, is shown in the work of Louis Raemaekers, an artist and cartoonist, who is vividly portraying the sufferings of the innocent victims of Mars in De Telegraaf, Holland's leading newspaper.

Raemaekers has not glorified war by holding up wonderful pictures of its heroes, but has dipped his pen in the heart blood of widows and orphans and gives to the world a fleeting glimpse of the horrors of the conflict in which all of Europe is now engulfed.

In describing his work in a current issue of Cartoons, a writer says:

You feel that his heart, like that of the master caricaturist of France (Daumier), breaks under the sufferings of war's innocent victims. Almost uncanny are the impressions he leaves us—impressions of pallid faces, eyes dilated with horror, ashes and white walls, the silence and coldness of death. Throughout all these phantasmagoric pictures there is no ray of hope, no hint of a partly obscured sun. Death itself stalks through the pages of his album, drinking from a cup of blood. Raemaekers is the portrayer of insanity, of famine, of despair. There is almost the touch of the madman in his work. It is like laughter in hell. The ghosts themselves might have stepped from the grave and swept the crayon in cold lines across his drawing-board.

Civilization as a wan, emaciated woman—she is almost Daumier's Spirit of Liberty—is bound and gagged. No touch of color lightens up her face. It is ashen. It is gray and dead. German militarism, a coarse, half-drunken brute, holds an automatic revolver to her head. "Am I not a fine fellow?" he demands.

To the outskirts of the Belgian village comes a workingman, a tiny, home-made coffin in his arms. They are digging trenches for the dead. Within the coffin lies the still form of his "little Tineke," who has been shot as a franc-tireur.

Another nightmare glimpse into the heart of devastated Belgium. The picture is revealed to us as if it were cut out by a lightning-flash at night. Amid the ghostly ruins is a family group. Two old people, wasted by hunger and fatigue, lie half dead on the ground. A mother with the devil in her eyes—she is raving, insane—chafes the skeleton-like limbs of a little boy. Ah, but it is a jolly sort of war!

But if you would know the real meaning of war, study his series of three—the mothers, the widows, and the children. Here are faces that will haunt one in his dreams. The mothers, in deep mourning, kneel before the altar in the flickering candle-light. They can bear the burden no longer. They have laid it at the Master's feet. The widows, pallid against the dark background, advance holding each other's hands. Here are the young wives, still in the May of love. Here, too, are the older wives, whose love has ripened with the mellowing years. Then come the children down a line of wooden crosses. "Father, where is your grave?" they ask. It is no more than a fleeting vision, this procession, the dim forms merging into the blur of crosses. But from the silence comes the voice of the artist: "Kruezland, Kreuzland, uber Alles!"

The mere fact that the "Netherwood Flivver," as the Nott engine now being tried out by the city has been termed, worked fairly well for one trip on Tuesday afternoon, does not warrant the authorities in giving vent to any great amount of glee over its success. The only thing that happened was to have the fan break and puncture a hole in the radiator, and at that the engine was apart and thoroughly gone over the afternoon before, to make sure that it would be ready for the test. It is significant that the sole representative on the Council from Netherwood, where the engine is very much wanted, is far from satisfied with the apparatus, and voted against having anything more to do with the Nott company, when it was requested that the test period be extended another month. The engine was ordered July 22, 1914, nearly fourteen months ago, and is still undelivered to the city. The people of the Netherwood section might have a new engine for the same money, built by a concern that has been successful enough at the business to at least be able to continue making the machines, which we understand is no longer the case with the Nott company.

Why the Board of Education, in purchasing a site for a schoolhouse, feels justified in making the action secret is puzzling a lot of Plainfielders. There is no more reason for such action than for the purchase of any other public property, for the Board is protected from a possible exorbitant price by condemnation, in case the owners set a high valuation on the property desired. Apparently in seeking a lot for a school in the East End of the city, the Board thinks that the location desired is a secret, when everyone knows that the property wanted is in the Highland Park tract. We do not believe that public monies should be spent secretly. It is true that actual transactions are given publicity, but all the preliminary details are clouded in mystery, and the people have to get their information from the newspapers, instead of from the officials who are chosen to represent them.

Plainfield should be proud of the first day's enrollment at the High School. Almost eight hundred young people in training for the life work that they will assume within a few years is the best recommendation for the city that could be made public. It guarantees a progressive, alert citizenship to take the places of those who are now guilding up the commu- who are now building up the community.

Apparently the only thing that has caused the slightest ripple on the political sea is the fact that a candidate has come forward who thinks he can beat Chairman William Newcorn as a member of the Union County Republican Committee.

A well advertised "Christian" lecturer is circulating pictures of the lineup at Armageddon with the Kaiser on the side of the Lord. May be! May be! But we'll have to have better authority.

The Allies want to borrow a billion dollars so that they can buy more goods of American manufacturers. War is hel-ping a little.

The glee chorus heard early in the spring is now busily chanting, "How long, O Lord, how long?"

A Could-er

I know a chap who, "if he only would,"
Could turn out verse to shame old Tommy Hood.
And music—Victor Herbert would retire
"If" this, my friend, "would" fan his muse's fire!

At the piano he can play like fun—
There's nothing Paderewski's ever done
Would hold a candle to the stuff that he "Could" beat from that there bunch of ivo-ree!

But as it is, he writes some dirty rhymes
To tickle village rough-necks, oftentimes
He strums some rag—this chap who could be good
At many things if (which he won't) he would!

The Inter-Reuben

Nearly all the inter-reuben traction companies publish schedules.

They get out one of these every few years, and change time four or five times between the issue of the cards.

The only way to find out about a working schedule is to disguise yourself as a milkweed, hide in a fence-corner somewhere near the runway of these elusive animals, and study closely their habits, as one Seton-Thompson does the festive skunk.

The inter-reuben limiteds poke along through a town, stopping extensively at each street or railroad crossing, while the entire rolling-stock of all the freight lines in the United States click over the frogs. The passengers never seem to appreciate this parade review.

After the limited has spent half an hour going a mile in the city, the motorman "puts her on the button" and runs eight miles in three minutes getting to the next town, so he can poke again.

The thrills are widely variegated.

Nobody who lives anywhere near an inter-reuben line knows anything about the schedules of the trains.

Ask 'em once.

When they want to go somewhere they just go squat at the nearest station and wait till one comes, headed in the right direction.

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Duodenal Ulcer

RELUCTANTLY as we present such a subject for reading at the breakfast or supper table, nevertheless we must protect ourselves against that innumerable class of correspondents who want to know what to do for "stomach trouble." By emphasizing the meaninglessness of "stomach trouble" in the average case it may be that our stenographer can keep union hours.

One very, very frequent condition mistaken for stomach trouble is duodenal ulcer—ulcer in the duodenum or upper part of the small bowel.

This occurs most commonly in young and middle-aged adults. It is a condition which shows typical periods of illness or suffering followed by more or less lengthy periods of comparative relief.

The pain is felt in the pit of the stomach. It is a gnawing, burning, hunger pain, coming on an hour or more after the meal, often in the night. It is relieved more or less by taking food or by vomiting. There is an excess of acid—not the kind of acid formed in simple digestive troubles where food ferments, but an excess of the natural hydrochloric acid secreted by the stomach during digestion. This excessive acid is what causes the distress and pain; food, especially such foods as milk and meat, take up the acid and so relieve the pain for the time being.

Duodenal ulcer is complicated by chronic trouble in the gall-sac or chronic appendicitis in some fifteen per cent. of the cases. Blood is vomited in about one-fourth of the cases. "Occult blood" can be demonstrated by chemical tests in almost all cases. The X-ray photograph of a meal of bismuth-pudding undergoing digestion clinches the diagnosis, if a clincher is needed.

Treatment?

Some cases are cured by rest in bed, together with hourly feeding, large doses of suitable alkalies and repeated stomach washing every day. Such treatment any doctor delights to give. Other cases must be operated on. Cases of long standing are prone to develop malignant disease — cancer — if not surgically cured.

Unfortunately the symptoms are not always so clear as it sounds to tell them over. Unfortunately, we say, because that means more futile experimenting with diet and medicines and adjustments and so on, whichever the patient imagines he needs. Duodenal ulcer (or gastric ulcer) is a condition which casual treatment and cure-alls will not benefit.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Luetin Test Better Than Wassermann

Kindly state your opinion of the luetin test and inform me whether it can be substituted for the Wassermann test in physical examination.

Answer—It is still under trial, but it seems to be on the whole a little better than the Wassermann reaction as a specific test. For a case under treatment it would be a more reliable test. For an untreated case the Wassermann would be more reliable. Any doctor can apply it, whereas only a laboratory expert can complete the Wassermann. A Wassermann may be positive in the absence of lues.

The Dose of Calomel

Please state what dose of calomel is best for a child and for an adult.

Answer—We don't think calomel is ever necessary as a cathartic.

DICTIONARIES

THE dictionary is the official warehouse for words which aren't being used.

The English language contains about 200,000 words, some of which are not used once a year, even by lecturers who are trying to explain sociology to a women's club. If any one man had to remember all of these words he would become demented under the strain and would be taken tenderly away while trying to buy rutabagas from the vegetable man in words of seven syllables. For this reason the dictionary was invented by Samuel Johnson and several annexes were added by Noah Webster. It is a neat, strong volume weighing about ten pounds and non-explosive.

The dictionary contains all the words which have gotten into respectable company in the English language. These same words when recklessly arranged have caused wars, murders and lectures on free love. But the dictionary is strictly neutral. It arranges its words alphabetically so that the entire collection can be read, even by a hot-tempered man, without causing the slightest ill-feeling.

The dictionary has about 2,000 pages and on each page there are many words which would cause a successful business man to blink violently and change the subject. If a common citizen were to learn any one page of the dictionary thoroughly he could introduce words into his conversation which would cause college professors to view him with sudden respect and invite him to tea. But no one does this. We prowl the fields hunting for four-leafed clovers and are joyful and gay when we find an edible toadstool after half a day's search; but no one thinks of breaking into the dictionary and hunting out a few dozen swivel-jointed, double-action, submersible words with which to soak a proud stranger in a moment of need.

Trying to buy rutabagas from the vegetable man in words of seven syllables

With the aid of a dictionary, a man might compose an eloquent letter, not a word of which could be read by a college graduate. On the other hand, a baseball reporter can compose a thrilling story, scarcely any word of which can be found in the dictionary. In spite of its capacity, the man who puts all his faith in this fat and dignified volume finds himself full of wonderment and ignorance whenever he attempts to fathom a few swift remarks between boarding school girls or college gentlemen pursuing knowledge with megaphones and football pennants.

The Care Of Old Animals

AN INTERESTING news dispatch the past week reports the death of Nancy Hanks, champion trotter from 1892 to 1894. She breathed her last at the estate of J. E. Madden of Lexington, Ky., who bought the horse several years ago to pension her.

There is so much thoughtlessness in the care of aged animals, that it is pleasant to see this notice of consideration. Too many faithful beasts of every-day life are pushed ahead until they drop. No halo of the race track follows their heads.

There are all the extremes of sentiment in this matter. Some people are so sensitive that they will not take the life of an aged horse or dog, even where the animal has passed any enjoyment of existence. They feel keenly the individuality of animals, and putting them out of the way with chloroform seems almost like taking the life of a child. This oversensitiveness to animal life is rare.

The faithful horse which has drawn a family's burdens for a lifetime should be something more than a mere drudge. If he has been treated with kindness, he makes known his affection for his masters, and welcomes their approach with the cheerful neigh.

He has contributed his share to the household labors, in return for a mere wage of hay and grain. He has toiled through heat and cold and storm, and has got no satisfaction out of life beyond the bare pleasure of good digestion. It seems one of the anomalies of existence that so much can be given so willingly and faithfully for so small a return.

He ought to have something coming to him in his twilight, by way of rest, some free seasons in a good, grassy pasture where he can kick up his heels and enjoy sleep and food, untroubled by heavy loads, chafing harnesses and the toil of the road. The pensioned horses should not include merely famous racers and family pets.—Oswego Daily Times.

People's Legal Friend

BY E. R. BRANSON

His X Mark

Q. If a man is unable to read or write and signs a contract by making his mark, will the contract be good?

A. Yes, if he understands the nature and scope of the contract and there is no fraud, deceit or imposition.

The Right To Sell On Credit

Q. Please inform me whether an agent has the right to sell goods on credit.

A. He has such right if authorized by his principal to do so. Further, unless forbidden by his employer, he may sometimes have such right as an incident to the business or in accordance with custom and the established usages of the business world in matters concerning the subject matter of the agency.

New Lease When Old Expires

Q. I am the owner of several buildings in the city where I live. A man came to me the other day and wanted to rent a certain dwelling-house. The house is occupied at the present time and the occupant has a written lease. The man first mentioned then told me he would like to make a contract with me, by which he would be entitled to a lease for this house, after the expiration of the present lease. May this be legally done? A. Yes.

Keep Your Eye On The Old Man

Q. After a boy becomes of age, may he deed his property to his father and will such deed be good?

A. Contracts and conveyances of this sort are closely scrutinized by the courts. The position of authority which the father has held during the child's minority and which often continues, as a matter of fact, after the child has reached legal age, will have a tendency to throw suspicion on the transaction. The conveyance will be good, however, if it be shown that the deed was made freely and voluntarily and without any compulsion, duress or fraud.

This Policy Is Legal

Q. I am carrying a fire insurance policy on a store building which I own. There is a provision in the policy that if the building should become vacant without the consent of the insurance company, such consent to be indorsed on the policy, the policy shall become void. Can such a provision be upheld in law? A. Yes.

An Agent's Authority

Q. Is it true, as a matter of law, that where one deals with an agent he is required to know the extent of the agent's authority?

A. No. The general rule is that a principal is bound by the acts of his agent, while the agent is acting within the real or apparent scope of his authority. If one who deals with an agent may reasonably believe, or be induced to believe, under the circumstances, that the agent had authority, such agent's acts will be legally binding upon his principal. If, however, the person dealing with the agent has actual knowledge, or what the law considers "constructive" knowledge, of any limitations of the agent's authority, he must see that the agent keeps within such limitations.

Fore And Aft

There is wonderful interest in all that noiselessly slips into history. He is a pretty poor dreamer, however, who dreams solely about things that happened before he came around. For there isn't half the interest in past history that there is in present history.

There isn't a man living who could not increase his capacity for doing things and being something, maybe as high or more than a hundred-fold greater, if he would but have the courage to read the Past only as a story, instead of a horde of facts with a lot of limitations around them.

Even though everybody seems to have already done everything, there still remain many things for you to do that nobody else could ever do in the way that you are able to do it. For, as Emerson says—"Every man is an unique."

So that the strength of the past lies within this fact—that it is a wonderful help toward giving a man a way for interpreting what is liable to be a part of the Future. So that you are able to make your acts to-day of service to you in the acts you perform to-morrow.

Look behind occasionally if you want to, but be sure that there is nothing coming Towards you from the front when you look behind. Progress, you know, doesn't always blow its alarm horn.

The Girl With The Hose

Poised with the pride of centuries she stands,
Determined in the world to do her part;
A length of rubber hose in both her hands—
Who knows what faint misgivings in her heart?

The wriggly thing drops dribbles on her wrist,
It may, alas! drop dribbles on her skirt.
But still to take the chance she will insist
And gayly cries aloud, "Now watch me squirt!"

The water sprays across the dusty street,
It hits the milk cart Dobbin on the legs
And makes him exercise his ancient feet
Like long forgotten wash-day dolly pegs.

The harmless passerby receives a shower.
She looks regrets. What more can maiden do?
He smiles as if she'd handed him a flower,
Perhaps she did—and never, never knew!

Then artlessly she lets the damp thing sag;
And just what happens you may well suppose.
Her dress becomes as limp as any rag.
She clutches it, all careless of her hose.

Eh? Nonsense! Dreams! You've got the wrong "idee"!
She didn't seek her room her gown to fix.
She ran straight to her mamma—for, you see,
This little girl is only half past six!

The Squirrel Waltzed With the Rabbit.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Waltz That Was Enjoyed In the Woods.

"DANCING is a very popular amusement," said daddy, "and so I think that I must tell you about the waltz which was enjoyed by the animals in the woods."

"Oh, daddy, do animals waltz, just like grownup people?"

"Well," answered daddy, "we will pretend that they do. For, you see, my dears, this is another madeup story, which I think you enjoy just as much as you do the real thing. At least, you appear to do so.

"Well, the animals in the woods had never heard of waltzing, nor, in fact, any kind of dancing. So when the bluejay, which is quite an inquisitive bird, they say, arrived with news of the waltz the animals were quite interested, you may be sure.

"The bluejay is a very busy bird, kiddies, and he makes it his business to gather all the gossip he can and then fly back into the woods and tell it.

"'I peeked through the window,' said the bluejay, 'and I heard beautiful music and some ladies and gentlemen circling around in time to it.'

"Then up spoke the squirrel, with his chittery-chattery little voice, and said he, 'Why can't we have a dance, too, right in these woods and have the bestest kind of a time?'

"Then the rabbit clapped his little paws and said: 'Why, that's the very thing! Let us have a dance, by all means!'

"So the word went around among the other animals, and they all agreed that this would be a very fine plan.

"The dancing floor was to be a lovely, smooth piece of greensward in a lovely dell that was in the midst of some great tall trees. And the animals arranged for the finest orchestra that was ever had for an animals' ball.

"Well, they had a katydid for the fifer and a great big bullfrog for either the bass drum or the bass horn, as you were minded to call it, and a whippoorwill for the funny little trembly places in the music.

"The squirrel waltzed with the rabbit, and the raccoon took for partner the fox, and the other little animals in the woods paired off as they pleased, and what do you think spoiled it?

"The naughty little prickly porcupine came and insisted on dancing. The other animals were afraid of his quills, and they all scurried away and left him. The orchestra was still playing, and the prickly porcupine started for them. They stopped playing and ran away. And there was the prickly porcupine, who had broken up the party, standing alone in the middle of the dell."

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"What in time is the matter, Nell?" asked Dick, putting out the flashlight and getting into bed. More audible sobs were his only answer.

"You'd better chuck that crying and go to sleep," he added gruffly.

"Sleep!" She removed her wet handkerchief from her eyes to answer. "You are so heartless and unfeeling that perhaps you can sleep, after all the hateful things you've said. I, for one, cannot." The sobs recommenced in a businesslike manner, warranted to last for hours.

"Great Scott, Nell! Do use your headpiece and cut that out. Don't you see we're both worn to a frazzle and just screaming for sleep? Let's not add a family row to the general discomfort."

"Oh, go on; do! Spend the day fishing and come home all blistered by your own carelessness, as cross as a crab. Say all sorts of disagreeable things, and then because I am hurt, say I add to the general discomfort." The sobbing was resumed where it had been left off to enable her to talk. As Dick made no answer, she resumed:

"As if I had not had enough to stand today. I've walked miles after Hal; he is determined to be down by the river with the Parsons children, and when I get him up here to play in the sand, Dorothy hits him over the head with a shovel, or she——"

"Sh! The Scotts' tent is next to ours," interrupted Dick.

"I don't care if they do hear," she resumed in a much lower voice. "I never saw such a spoiled child."

"Where's her nurse?" asked Dick.

"It's her day off, and it's certainly been an off day for me." Nell wiped her eyes despairingly.

"You take things too hard," said Dick in unsympathetic weariness.

"You take things easy by dumping all your impatience and ill-temper on me," she retorted hotly. "Take things hard, indeed!" Nell showed signs of hysterics.

"Come, Nell." Dick put his arms around his wife. "Do try to be quiet and let's go to sleep; we'll be nervous wrecks before our vacation is over."

"Vacation, indeed!" she sobbed. "And I thought we should have such a fine time. I suppose everything went to pieces because I'm not game," she ended spitefully.

"Not game?" he repeated, bewildered.

"Like Olive," she explained, and light dawned. He drew her to him and tried to take the handkerchief from her eyes.

"Nell, dear, I'm sorry I was so cross. It's disgraceful for me to lose my temper as I did just because my shoulders feel like pale red stone bruises."

"I wouldn't irritate you as I do if you loved me. You weren't cross with me like this when—when——" The tears were coming too fast to be wiped away with the cobweb of a handkerchief in use and Dick hauled out one of the masculine gender and tried to stem the flood. He drew her head down on his shoulder, though every motion made him set his teeth with pain, and patted her wet cheek, trying to think of the right thing to say. Nell had not had hysterics for so long he felt out of practice.

"You never tell me you love me any more"—the sobbing was resumed—"and you surely tell me by your actions that you do not."

"Why, little wife," he began.

"And you don't think I'm game," she wailed.

It was so funny, the slump into despondency because of utter lack of game qualities, and hurt because he had said she was not game, that Dick did a very foolish thing. He shouted, he roared with laughter.

"I'm very glad to be a source of amusement to you," she blazed, pushing him away from her. "I still am of some use in the world."

Dick caught her, kissing her wet eyes and cheeks and lips.

"You dear, tired, nervous little heart's ease, I love you better than anything on earth and in your heart of hearts you never have doubted it for one instant, have you, dear?"

"No," she sighed contentedly.

"And if we ever live to get back to civilized life I'll try to show you that I'm not a brute," he added.

"Try now," she suggested.

CHAPTER IV.

The Bargain.

"OH, sir," Mary began timidly, almost losing her composure a moment, to think of the pass that things had come to with her connivance. She was not sure, moreover, if the soap king had not really been in earnest in his fulminations as they floated out to her in the hall. Either his acting or his gout must be genuine today, she began to fear.

"Because I wish to tell you," he began again, "that if he marries you he'll not get one penny of my money. And that means he'll starve. I suppose you realize that?"

Mary turned to Rodney, who was standing up very straight near the window looking on Fifth avenue, one hand catching the braided lapel of his coat as his eyes devoured her with such real love and confidence showing on his face that she could not resist his love's appeal to her. She turned to his father and answered him courageously:

"Then at least we'll starve together."

She was rewarded by the exultation in Rodney's voice as he exclaimed, "Mary!"

"You see, father," he added for the old gentleman's benefit.

"Making a grand stand play, eh," went on the soap magnate remorselessly to Mary, "before my idiot of a son. You think I'm so fond of him that I'll relent. Well, you're wrong. Neither of you will ever get a nickel out of me."

"We shan't starve," declared Rodney.

"Well, what can you do to keep from starving?" demanded his father. "You're not a producer. You never will be. You're just an idler. You couldn't earn $5 a week. But you'll have a chance to try. You'll get out of my house tonight, or I'll have you thrown out."

"Now, father"—

"Not another word, sir, not another word!" cried his father and stamped out angrily into the hall.

Mary gave an involuntary sigh of relief.

"It's getting more like that play every minute," Rodney chuckled.

"Oh, Rodney, I'm so, so sorry," snivveled Mary.

"You were bully the way you stuck up for me," said her lover. "When

"Then at least we'll starve together."

you said we'd starve together I just choked all up."

"Please don't, Rodney," protested Mary, quite genuinely touched, and Rodney went on:

"Just because he's got a lot of money he seems to think there isn't any left for other people, but I'll show him. I may not have much at the start, but watch my finish"—

"What are you going to do?" she asked him excitedly.

"I'm going to work."

"You are really?"

"Yes, indeed. Father couldn't make me do it, but you can. I'll work for you."

"Oh, you are splendid!" Mary cried. "Shall you get a position?"

"I should say not! Work for some one else? No! I'm going in business for myself—for you. I'm going to show the stuff that's in me. Of course we can't get married till I've made good. Will you wait?"

"Yes, dear," said Mary shyly.

"You're a dandy!" cried Rodney, moving nearer to her.

"What business are you going into?" she asked.

"I don't know yet," said Rodney. "I'm going upstairs to pack a suit case and think. Wait here for me. I'll be back in fifteen minutes," he sang out, grabbing her and kissing her hastily, but heartily.

"Oh, oh—please"—protested Mary.

"Don't mind, Mary. I'll get you used to 'em," he called from the doorway.

She threw herself back on the Louis XV. sofa next the yellow typist's desk and waited, in a sudden reverie. The carved wooden rim of the sofa back just fitted a chink in her coiffure comfortably, and she lapsed into that curious state of introspection that comes sometimes with bodily and mental relaxation. What did she think of herself for what she'd done this evening? Was she any better than an adventuress? Was she not cajoling a young man into proposing to her for the love of money? Would Rodney's father really reward her as he had promised to do? Strangely enough it would not have seemed so bad, she felt, if she didn't like Rodney. Well, if the old man didn't pay, let him keep his money. She shouldn't care. It was something to have won a love like Rodney's love for her. There was something very lovable about Rodney Martin—

He Hugged Her Greedily to Him.

In a moment Rodney himself bounded in again on her day dreams. There was the thud of a heavy kit bag dropped on the marble floor of the hall by the front door, and then he ran in to her impetuously, with his arms open.

"Mary, sweetheart!" he cried.

He held her away from him a moment to regard her face.

"The pater's upstairs dressing for dinner," he rattled on. "I shan't even say goodby to him. Serve him right. I'm going to take a stage down to the Collegiate club this very night. Can't afford cabs now."

"Rodney," whispered Mary conservatively, "you must work hard and be brave."

"And can't I do that for the sweetest sweetheart in the whole world?" he demanded rapturously, folding her again in his arms. He hugged her greedily to him, and she yielded to him a little despite herself. There was something fresh and clean about the boy, and certainly his kisses were not distasteful. The arms she felt around her were a man's arms and very strong.

In the end Rodney decided he would have a cab anyway, and so he and Mary left the house of the soap king in each other's company without farewells. It was their last ride together, so to speak, and a very blissful one for the young lover. Rodney was going to take a room at the Collegiate club, but first they spun across the somber park to Mary's apartment, somewhere in the West Seventies, and Rodney bade her a rapturous good night while the motor throbbed and the taximeter spun.

The gout had been so benefited by the explosion of yesterday that Cyrus Martin had gone down to his office next morning, as Mary guessed he would, and the two met there on somewhat more impersonal terms than in the Fifth avenue library. Very impersonal indeed Mary tried to make it seem to the wily magnate and threw something unwonted and chilly into the manner with which she greeted him.

"Well," he began, "do you think our scheme is going to work?"

"Yes," said Mary quietly. "I do."

"You really think you have got him to go to work?" he demanded eagerly.

"I have," said Mary.

"By George, that's great!" said Mr. Martin gleefully.

"Isn't it," said Mary.

"You're sure he wasn't just talking?"

"No, he went upstairs to pack and go out and make a name for himself."

"You're a wise girl, Mary. Isn't it wonderful?"

"And you said I couldn't do it," said Mary coldly.

"I said I didn't think you could, but you have, and I owe you $2,500."

"Oh, there's no hurry!" said Mary, still quite coolly.

"Never put off till tomorrow the money you can get today," said the millionaire.

"Aren't you proud I've been so successful?" said Mary presently.

"Proud! I'm so darned happy I'm making this check out for $5,000."

"Oh, Mr. Martin!" Mary cried, quite taken aback.

"It's worth $50,000 to me to have my boy really want to work, not just to do it to please me," said the old man, really moved beneath his gruff exterior. "What a difference an incentive makes!"

"Doesn't it?" said Mary, smiling at her check.

"But what about your marriage?"

"He said he wouldn't marry me till he'd made good—if I'd just wait."

Her employer looked at her a little anxiously.

"Do you think perhaps he may really love you?" he asked.

"Of course not," said Mary.

"It's the first time he's actually wanted to marry anybody," said his father.

"Oh, it's just that I've been very blue eyed and baby faced!" said the secretary modestly.

"I guess you're right," agreed Martin.

"Of course I am. Why, dear Mr. Martin, even for this," she said, pointing to her check, "I wouldn't give your son one real pang. He's too nice a boy. When I break our engagement he may feel a bit lonely and be very sorry for himself for a few days and give up women forever, but pretty soon some charming girl of his own position—of his own world, who needs to be petted and spoiled and protected, some limousine lady—will come along, and they'll live happily ever after."

"Nonsense!" said Mr. Martin. "I don't agree with you at all. I begin to wish this marriage were going to be on the level."

"It wouldn't work out," Mary interrupted. "I'm a business woman. Marriage and the fireside and leaning on some man are not for me. I've been independent too long. I couldn't stop my work for a man, and there can't be two heads in a family—two happy heads. Even if your son did love me—really love—I wouldn't marry him. Just now he's twenty-four, with an india rubber heart that is easy to stretch and easier to snap back. All men at twenty-four are like that."

"I suppose so," Mr. Martin commented reminiscently. "I remember when I was a young man there was a girl—my heart was broken for a week—perhaps ten days however, however"—Then, abruptly changing the subject, he inquired, "What's my son going to work at?"

"I don't know yet," Mary said truthfully.

"Do you think he'll make good?"

"He will if he keeps at it."

"Well, you'll keep him at it, won't you?"

"That wasn't our agreement," said Mary. "I only undertook to get him to start to work."

"Hm!" went Mr. Martin, tapping the arm of his chair.

"Isn't that true?" demanded Mary quietly.

"Quite, quite," said Martin cannily. "I was just thinking we might make some agreement to have you keep him on the job."

"To keep him on the job?" echoed Mary faintly heartedly. Here was a new complication if the soap king was proposing a second chapter in the deception. She had honestly meant to give the whole thing up. She truly did not want Rodney to get permanently interested in her. She had let him kiss her the memory of his kisses still trembled on her lips—but she had done that for the boy's own good. Poor little secretary, pretty little Mary Grayson, what was she to think of things, how cleave her way through this tangle of motives that bound her heart and hands? She had let him kiss her, yes, but had it really been wrong in her? Was it bad? No, she found her whole soul protesting, it was not wrong or bad. It had been for the boy's own good, she told herself again. She hugged the thought greedily, tasting a portion of that joy of women in giving herself up to some man for his good. But she would not spoil his life. She had been firm as to that. And now here was old Mr. Martin coming back at her with this hateful power of money and trying to bribe her to go on. What should she do?

Suddenly, by a complete change of venue, her thoughts attacked the case from a different angle. She had been enough in the business world to know the power and use of money, and from a French grandfather she had inherited a streak of the keen and honest thrift. Let the rich people look out for themselves; the poor had to. Curiosity, too, set in, and helped dictate her answer when she finally made it.

"Well," she said at last enigmatically, "I'm a business woman."

Mr. Martin looked at her delightedly.

"What strikes you as fair?" he asked her.

"I'd rather the proposition came from you," rejoined Mary.

"What do you say to your present salary, and at the end of the year I will personally give you a check for 25 per cent of what he has made?"

"That wouldn't interest me," said Mary.

"What's your proposition then?" asked Martin. "State your terms."

"My present salary doubled," said the business woman promptly.

"Um—that's pretty steep."

"You told me what I'd done already was worth $50,000 to you," retorted Mary.

"Merely a figure of speech, my dear," said Martin. "Let's see, you're getting $40 a week, and"—

"Fifty dollars, and I want $100."

"Sounds like a hold up."

"Then let's drop it. This new contract was your idea, not mine. Good evening"—

She moved to the door.

"Hold on, hold on," Martin cried after her. "I was simply figuring," he explained; "tell you what I'll do. Seventy-five dollars a week and 10 per cent of what he makes."

"All right, I'll go you," said Mary.

"Good," said Mr. Martin.

"Will you just write me a note stating the facts and consideration?" Mary pursued.

"Then let's drop it."

"Certainly."

He began to write, and as his pen moved across the paper Mary went on:

"As soon as you see Rodney you'll have to discharge me."

"I will, violently. I'm a pretty good actor under your direction."

9 to 9:30—Playtime with baby.
9:30 to 10—Bathe and put baby to sleep.
10 to 12:30—Iron, wash, clean, etc.; make beds and clean bathroom.
12:30 to 1—Lunch.
1 to 2:30—Play time, sewing, etc.
2:30 to 3:30—Baby's nap; mother's rest.
3:30 to 5—Miscellaneous.
5 to 5:30—Baby's supper.
5:30 to 6—Prepare dinner; put baby to bed.
6 to 7—Dinner.
7 to 7:30—Wash dishes and lay table for breakfast.

Every other day between 10 and 12:30 do baby's wash. On Tuesday iron, and from 3:30 to 5 do mending.

One day arrange to clean silver when washing dishes. Another day scrub kitchen floor. Plan the biggest task for between 10 and 12:30.

Every mother needs an hour of complete rest each day and that may be taken while baby sleeps from 2:30 to 3:30, leaving the remainder of the day for an outing or call. Of course, when the whole afternoon is spent away from home, it is best to plan the arrival before 2:30, thus baby can take his nap at usual hour.

From 3:30 to 5 a mother can do an endless number of things. Try to prepare all vegetables and fruits in the morning and put in ice chest until needed, then you will not be hurried at dinner time. And when washing dishes, after dinner, it is only a minute's work to lay table for breakfast and perhaps prepare the fruit.

When cereal is to be used, prepare at night in double boiler and it only need be reheated in the morning. This gives you ample time in the morning to appear fresh and clean for breakfast, and thus sav[illegible] and "[illegible] better day's work.

Don't be a slave to a schedule, but [illegible]e tried you will wonder how you [illegible]t along before.

THE TABLE

Roast Beef With Yorkshire Pudding—After preparing your roast by rubbing it with cheesecloth, then thoroughly rubbing in plenty of salt, sprinkle with pepper, put a piece of suet on top, sear the edges by cutting in with a sharp knife little gashes (this is done so as to prevent the roast from drawing together). A half hour before serving mix together 1½ pints milk, three eggs well beaten, seven tablespoons flour, liberal pinch of salt; pour around roast, cut in squares and serve hot with roast. Allow about twenty minutes to each pound of meat, unless liked very rare, then from ten to fifteen minutes. Baste often before pouring in the pudding.

Escaloped Macaroni—Break macaroni into boiling water with half teaspoon salt. Boil till tender, which will be in about half an hour. Drain off water and have ready a gravy made as follows: Place three cups milk on stove to boil; take one tablespoon flour and half cup water and stir together; when milk boils, add this and let cook till a little thick. Grate cheese to cover bottom of a pudding dish which has been buttered; then put in a layer of macaroni, a little salt, pepper and butter. Moisten with the milk gravy, add more cheese and macaroni, the top being covered with bread crumbs. Place in not oven to brown. Spaghetti, noodles, soda or oyster crackers may be prepared in the same way.

Mock Angel Cake—One cup sugar (scant), one generous cup flour, two heaping teaspoons baking powder, one teaspoon cornstarch, pinch of salt. Sift together four times, then stir in one cup scalding milk; flavor. Add well beaten whites of two eggs last, folded in lightly. Bake in slow oven forty minutes. Use a tube cake tin and do not grease it. Cool by turning upside down in tin.

White part: One cup granulated sugar and one-half cup butter (creamed together), one-half cup sweet milk, one and one-half cups flour, one-half cup cornstarch, two teaspoons baking powder, flavor vanilla, whites of three eggs well beaten and folded in last.

Bake in four layers (two of each) and put together alternately, with white icing.

MOTHERS' WORK

Conducted by the Plainfield Mothers' Association. Every Thursday

Contributing Staff.
Mrs. Joseph Smith and Mrs. J. L. Evans.

The Daily Press for Thursdays containing the column on Mother's Work will be sent by mail for one dollar a year, in advance.

Give the Best.

There are loyal hearts, there are spirits brave,
There are souls that are pure and true;
Then give to the world the best you have,
And the best will come back to you.

Give love, and love to your life will flow,
A strength in your utmost need;
Have faith, and a score of hearts will show
Their faith in your word and deed.

Give truth, and your gift will be paid in kind,
And honor will honor meet;
And a smile that is sweet will surely find
A smile that is just as sweet.

For life is the mirror of king and slave,
'Tis just what we are and do;
Then give to the world the best you have,
And the best will come back to you.

Parent-Teachers' Association.

The Ladies' World says: "Two ideas have gained wide acceptance in our modern life. People everywhere are agreed that organization and co-operation make for conservation of effort; also, that upon the proper home, school and community training and influence depend the citizenship and national integrity of tomorrow. The linking of these two ideas has called into existence a large number of mothers' clubs and similar organizations, because it became apparent that home and school must work hand in hand for the finest development of our youth."

What Our Children Lack.

"What our boys and girls lack is intensity of purpose. They do not find it in schools. In the majority of cases the school seems only to distort the relative value of things, and there is no clear vision. Power of concentration, without which there can be no success, is lost. The bright boy must wait for the slow, so that their powers are diffused rather than stimulated. Days are spent in half mastering what might be wholly mastered in a few hours. That school makes stupidity from good material is now well known."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Parental Discipline.

The ideas of a "Plain Country Woman" in the September number of Ladies' Home Journal contains this bit of wisdom. "But if there is any one thing above another which I believe the American nation stands in need of today I think it is parental discipline and example. We need the regularity and the habit of discipline. We need Sabbath keeping and churchgoing habits—we need the discipline of staying at home and of finding home the best place.

"Do you know that homekeeping is instinctive in children, and that parents foster the 'go microbe' either by teaching the go habit or by allowing home to lack the charm that should hold them."

Value of Freedom.

"Don't you understand that children ought to be restless? That if they are not active and troublesomely alive you ought to call in an expert to know whether their brains are normal? Don't you know they grow both mentally and physically through their incessant bodily motion? Have you never been told that by the constant repression of children the brain centres are paralyzed? A fresh idea drops through the senses into the mind of a little child. The brain seizes upon it and assimilates it. Then the impulse comes to do something with it—put it to use—and so complete the thought. But here comes in the older person who is incommoded by the child's activities. 'Don't,' he says. The impulse is arrested, the thought never completed, the brain centre injured for life. This happens to most children daily, hourly sometimes, and then we complain that our older boys and girls have no mental power, no originality."

Before School Age.

To the mother is entrusted the responsibility of planting a good seed by directing the activity of the mind and body into safe channels and she should not delegate this to another. She cannot take it for granted that the homely virtues which form the foundation of character will develop themselves. To keep the child's confidence, to have him feel that always he has mother's love and sympathy, is to establish a relation of inestimable value as childish days pass and school days begin.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

San Francisco—How the heart of a queen is being torn by strife, how her relatives and dearest friends are fighting each other, how she hopes and prays day and night that her own country may not be drawn into war—all this is revealed by Queen Marie, of Roumania, in a remarkable letter received here. The letter is remarkable the more because Roumania is now in the balance in the world war. Queen Marie is an English princess, and her husband, Ferdinand, is a Hohenzollern. "How is it possible that our so-called civilization should break into such monstrous reaction, for never has war been so deadly, never have such horrors been committed, never has so much been destroyed. Those unfortunate places where war has been raging are but vast churchyards, which no kindly hand can attend. Sometimes I wonder how such suffering can be borne. I tremble for my little country. What will its fate be? I forget myself in the great desire to make others happy."

London—Patents taken out by women in the United Kingdom during 1914 included 54 inventions connected with dress; 34 nursing and medical patents; mechanical, 24; household requisites, 20; games, 14; educational, 12; cooking, 9; toilet, 8; motor cars and cycling, 7; babies' requisites, 6; garden, 3; needlework, 3; and one aeroplane patent.

Philadelphia—"I am engaged, but I am not going to be married until women have the vote in at least one of the three campaign States," says Miss Jane Myer. The fair suffragist's fiance is Dr. Charles Reitzel, the successor of Professor Scott Nearing at the University of Pennsylvania. Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey are the battle-grounds of suffrage just now, and until one of these States give the women the vote the betrothed pair will postpone the wedding day. But—Miss Myer does not believe there will be any postponement.

Los Angeles—Mme. Nellie Melba, who sang here last night to a big audience, is completing a triumphant tour of the world, which has netted $152,500 for the British Red Cross funds. With the exception of two concerts which she gave in Honolulu, every dollar earned on the trip was given to the Red Cross. She left New York last April, going to London and then to Melbourne, her native city.

New York—Miss Dora Gruich, a Serbian girl, educated in the United States, and Miss Elva Reed, of Oregon, her secretary, are traveling to Servia, where they will establish a home for children orphaned by the war. The institute is the gift of John W. Frothingham, of New York, and his sister, Elizabeth W. Frothingham, of Tarrytown, N. Y. The institution will be American in character and the children will be taught English as well as the Servian tongue.

Denver—Unless Mrs. May Spencer Farrand, who disappeared mysteriously fifteen years ago, is found by the end of this month, she will be declared legally dead, and the fortune here awaiting her will go to Mrs. Louise A. Ryder, of New York. Mrs. Farrand was the second wife of the late Captain Charles E. Farrand, U. S. A. A nation-wide search has been made by the War Department and secret service men since she left Arvada, a Denver suburb, shortly after her husband's death. Neither relatives nor friends have heard from her since.

New York—A gigantic movement for the purification of the human race has been launched by Mrs. E. H. Harriman, widow of the railroad king. A group of the most able scientists in the United States will undertake to ascertain "what is the matter with the human race" and to formulate the plan for the elimination of defectives. The vast fortune of Mrs. Harriman is at the disposal of the movement, which contemplates the pushing of eugenic legislation in many States. Several States have already made elaborate experiments with money furnished by Mrs. Harriman. Experiments in Kansas developed the fact that it is possible by medical and surgical treatment to prevent reproduction of defectives. Eugenic societies will be built up in each State, and the public will be taught the necessity of laws to wipe out criminals and mental incompetents. For years preliminary work has been quietly conducted at Cold Springs Harbor, Long Island, under Mrs. Harriman's direction, and it has been found that the 10 per cent. of the present Americans who are defective can be eliminated as reproducers of human life.

STAMPING OUT NEW DRUG.

San Francisco, Sept. 16.—A new drug to replace opium, the cost of which has soared out of reach of the users by the enforcement of the Harrison anti-drug act, has gained an alarming foothold in this State, it is said. The new "dope" is Marihauna or Indian hemp, and it is secured from a plant common to Northern Mexico. That an organized ring is engaged in exploiting the opiate is the statement of Louis Zeh, secretary of the State Board of Pharmacy. A close watch is being maintained on the local Hindus, who seem to have been the first to recognize the commercial possibilities of the drug. The Hindus are said to have cultivated the plant in this State. Inspectors have destroyed the plants wherever found.

DAY OF ATONEMENT WILL BE OBSERVED

The Most Solemn Day of Jewish Year Begins at Sundown Tomorrow.

The Day of Atonement, or Yom Kippur, the most solemn day of the Jewish year, will be celebrated by the Hebrews of this city and the rest of the world, beginning at sundown tomorrow night. The day will be marked by an unbroken fast of twenty-four hours' duration, by almost continuous service in the synagogues and temples and by the observance of customs that are among the most ancient in Jewish worship.

As a solemn Sabbath the tenth day of the month Tishni will be observed by the closing of all Jewish places of business. No children can be at school, although this year the prohibition will not be necessary, as the great Sabbath falls on a Saturday. Occurring this year on the weekly Sabbath, the holy day will be a high and solemn one. The afflicting of the soul fasting is carried out by the solemn fast of twenty-four hours' duration, during which not a drop of water or crumb of bread may pass the lips. As part of the affliction of the soul smoking is also prohibited.

Ancient usages that have dropped off at the services on Sabbath, and even at other festivals, still hold their own on this great day. In orthodox synagogues many worshippers divest themselves of shoes and wear slippers, in accordance with the ancient habit of removing the shoes at public worship. In the stricter synagogues the faithful prostrate themselves three times, with forehead touching the ground, "falling on their faces before the Lord," according to ancient Biblical usage. In reformed congregations only the rabbis do this Oriental obeisance, which has historic value as one of the survivals of the ancient attitude of supplication. In some synagogues the white kittle, or shroud, will be worn by many worshippers.

The essential idea of the holy day is that of penitence and reconciliation with God. The penitential prayers of the ritual are of exceeding beauty and impressiveness, and are interspersed by magnificent outbursts of adoration. The rich melodies of the traditional chant, "Kol Nidre," will open the evening service. The services will be held tomorrow evening and Saturday morning. The Saturday services will continue practically all day until sunset.

MONDAY'S NEWSPAPERS

as well as those published on any day, contain accounts of an unusual number of accidents to pedestrians and motorists. A car has only to touch the clothing of a pedestrian and the owner will be brought face to face with the danger of a heavy suit for damages.

The annoyances and expense of defending, even tho' groundless, a suit against clever lawyers, exceeds the small cost of insurance.

We will be glad to submit rates to any automobile owner upon application. Auto fire 1%.

ROUGH JOLT FOR HACK ZONE BILL

Many Protest Against Moving Present Line to Increase Quarter Zone.

FORCEFUL ARGUMENTS

Hackmen Have Their Orators on Deck to Combat Petitioners—Public Affairs Committee of Common Council Greatly Impressed.

When the Councilmanic public affairs committee, headed by Chairman Thomas Hylan, had finished hearing the whys and the wherefore of the West End citizen's petition to have the hacking zone extended from Grant to Clinton avenues, in the Council chambers last night, it was the unanimous opinion of the large gathering present that the arguments were not sufficiently convincing to warrant the adoption of such an amendment to the present ordinance.

In fact, the voluminous protests and sentiment expressed against the measure stood out in graphic contrast to the general theory advanced for the increasing of the zone line. In view of the fact that last night's meeting was merely a public hearing to ascertain the sentiment of those interested, no Councilmanic opinion was expressed, although a number of the Councilmen, representing a majority vote, gave personal opinions, indicating that they were determined to put themselves on record, when the amendment was officially brought up, as being against it.

Many representatives of both sides of the case were present and delivered short arguments dealing in facts to substantiate their arguments one way or the other. So strong and convincing was the protest of the hackmen that one of the original signers in favor of the amendment, W. A. Power, openly declared that he wished his name to be stricken from the application and expressed a wish that the petition might be withdrawn.

Included in the material offered at the hearing were numerous letters from West End citizens and a petition signed by twenty-two liverymen and taxicab drivers.

Frank A. Weeks, of West Seventh street, one of those in favor of the measure, declared that he lived within 200 feet of Grant avenue, and did not think it reasonable for the hackmen to charge him the fifty-cent rate. His points involved arguments for increasing the zone on the western side, and stated that he believed there was a general demand for it that should be met.

J. Irwin Taylor, of 835 West Eighth street, said that he approved of the amendment and did not think that it would inflict a hardship on the hackmen. C. A. Rice, of 945 west Seventh street, reiterated Mr. Taylor's remarks.

Speaking as a representative of the West End Civic Association, and not as a party of individual interest, W. J. Boyd, secretary of the organization, said that his fellow members had voted unanimously to endorse the amendment. Herbert E. Langford, of Compton avenue, also supported the movement.

William H. Abbott, owner of the Plainfield Cab Company, a concern which would be affected by such an amendment, entered a general protest on behalf of the petitioners stating that at the present time a trip for twenty-five cents to the farthest extremity of the present western hack zone entailed a ride of three and one-eighth miles for the hackmen, and that they could not go further without losing money. He declared that the advance in gasoline had also been seriously felt, and that his concern paid $75 a month more for this necessity than it did a short time ago. He reviewed the history of the hacking zone, telling of its original line at Plainfield avenue, then the extension to Grant avenue, and now the demand for a further increase to Clinton avenue. He said that although all other commodities had been subjected to increases of late, the hackmen had maintained their usual scale and had made no effort to raise their fares. Mr. Abbott offered the argument that a majority of the "cabbies" are merely ekeing out a living, and that a majority of them do not average $3 a day.

Harry Huff, who operates nine taxicabs at the depot, said that if it were not for his private business the taxicab project would be a dismal failure, the fares at the station being insufficient to keep it going. He dwelt on the fact that a large number of individuals, including some of the petitioners, rode only when it rained, and that the hackmen and taxi drivers had to remain idle during the clear weather and take occasional chances on an occasional wet spell.

A. C. Wilmerding, of Belvidere avenue, said that there was no demand for an extension of the east-

SENATOR WM. HUGHES OUT FOR SUFFRAGE

Informs Men's League He Will Support Constitutional Amendment.

Paterson, Sept. 17.—U. S. Senator William Hughes, of New Jersey, has come out in opposition to his colleague, Senator James E. Martine, on the question of woman suffrage.

In an open letter to the New Jersey Men's League for Equal Suffrage, Senator Hughes states:

"I voted for the equal suffrage constitutional amendment in the United States Senate and I shall vote for the constitutional amendment to be submitted to the people of the State of New Jersey at the coming election. I voted to levy an income tax upon the incomes and earnings of men and women alike and I can see no reason why, if a woman is to be taxed on the basis of equality with a man, she should not be given an equal vote with him as to how her money is to be expended by public servants.

"Modern legislation deals largely with industrialism and attempts to better the situation of the working forces of the world. It seems only just that women who, with their children, form such an important part of our industrial system, should be given the right to attempt to alleviate and better the conditions surrounding them and to try to gain for all a larger share of what they produce. This, it seems to me, must be the chief end and aim of all civilization. It cannot be retarded, but, in my belief, it will be advanced by granting the franchise to women."

STARLING BRIGADE IS FINALLY ROUTED

Second Attack of Marksmen Results in Killing of One Hundred Birds.

Another engagement between the army of starlings in the borough and Chief Marshal Weiss' company last evening, in which the latter completely routed the bird brigade, marked the second attack in the campaign being waged against the pests.

The forces of the attacking party were augmented last night by two more marksmen—John La Maire and Frederick Eckhart—and altogether nearly half a hundred rounds of ammunition were fired in the engagement, which while short, was very decisive. The marshal's forces, a mere scouting party in point of numbers compared to the number of the birds, met with no opposition at all, and marched away from the battle ground after it was all over leaving a hundred dead on the field and a completely routed enemy.

There is a feeling among the starling infested section of the borough after last night's work that the neighborhood is to be freed from the nuisance at last. This belief comes from the fact that there were fewer birds about the trees last night than usual, and they did not seek their roosting places until late. Then this morning at daylight there were only a few in the trees, while ordinarily there would have been hundreds. Special Marshal Sheats, of the borough police force, who passed by the locality early this morning, said that there was scarcely a peep to be heard, while heretofore the birds have begun an incessant chatter at dawn, and gotten everybody in the neighborhood awake.

The vicinity of Watchung and Jackson avenues was the chief point of attraction in the borough last evening between 5 and 7 o'clock, and by the time Chief Weiss, Marshals Pope and Sheats, Arthur Fritz and La Maire and Eckhert arrived with their guns and fifty rounds of shells loaded with No. 9 shot, the streets were thick with carriages and automobiles and the sidewalks held their quota of curious folk. The belief is that one or two more bombardments will result in driving the birds away for good.

AUTO TRUCK UPSETS; THREE ARE INJURED

Harrison's leg was broken, Rudolph sustained a broken arm, while Mr. Hoffheimer was severely bruised.

The motor truck was one which had just been received, and was not yet licensed. A depression in the road caused the upset. Harrison was only recently discharged from Muhlenberg Hospital, where he had been a patient as the result of being kicked by a horse. He was taken to the Memorial Hospital at Morristown.

BODY OF 3-YEAR-OLD GIRL FOUND IN BROOK

Rowers Make Startling Discovery—Mother is Prostrated.

Two young women rowing in the secluded coolness of Green Brook, at Marshall place, Middlesex county, yesterday afternoon made the startling discovery of the body of a three-year-old child floating on the surface of the water.

The body was that of Mary Fzaeley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Fzaeley, who live at Marshall place. The little girl had gone to the brook to wash a cloth. In some manner she lost her balance and fell into the water, it is believed, although there were no witnesses to the accident. She was last seen by her mother about 5:15 p. m. yesterday going toward the brook and was found dead less than twenty minutes later. The body was floating in water more than forty feet deep when found.

The mother is prostrated with grief.

Funeral services will be held from the residence at 2 p. m. Saturday. Interment will be in St. Mary's cemetery in Plainfield.

SUDDEN DEATH OF MRS. W. F. WILLIAMS

Well Known Young Woman Succumbs to Acute Attack of Bright's Disease.

Mrs. Minnie Williams, wife of Will F. Williams, died suddenly this morning at her home on Westervelt avenue, following a long illness which became acute during the past ten days. Death was due to Bright's disease and heart trouble. Within the past few days Mrs. Williams had seemed a little better and there was hope for encouragement until this morning, when there was a sudden change for the worse. Her death was a severe shock to many friends in the city and borough.

Mrs. Williams was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James H. Force, and was born in this city, where she lived all her life. Her father was a widely-known hotel man, while his brothers, the late Albert L. Force and William L. Force, were also well-known, being the publishers of The Constitutionalist and the founders of the Plainfield Daily Press.

Mrs. Williams was actively engaged in the work of Trinity Reformed church, especially so in the Young Women's Mission Guild and the home department of the Sunday-school. She had a host of friends by whom she was loved and esteemed for her many excellent womanly qualities. She was also thoroughly devoted to her home, where she will be greatly missed.

There survives a husband, Will F. Williams, who is engaged in the stationery business on Park avenue; a sister, Mrs. Ernest A. Millard, of East Second street; a brother, John L. Force, of Westfield, and several cousins, including Miss Lillian A. Force, of Duer street, the borough.

The funeral will be held at the late home Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. J. Y. Brook, of Trinity Reformed church, will officiate, and the burial will be in the family plot in the North Plainfield cemetery.

TOURING CAR, STUCK IN MUD, HURTS MAN

Arthur S. Giles' Machine Leaps From Trap and Hits Arthur Hill.

While aiding in extricating the automobile touring car, owned by Arthur S. Giles, of 115 West Fifth street, from a muddy ditch at South Plainfield, yesterday afternoon, Arthur Hill, foreman of the A. C. Thompson Automobile Company's mechanical department in this city, sustained a painful injury to one of his legs. Mr. Hill was standing in front of the big machine when it suddenly leaped from its mud trap and struck him a hard blow on the leg.

Mr. Giles, in company with Charles Drake, had been swimming at Holly's pond, which is nearby, and when they went for their automobiles they found that Mr. Giles' car had become wedged in the mire. Word was sent to Plainfield for aid and Mr. Hill was dispatched to South Plainfield to assist in the work.

Dr. Anthony, of Park avenue, who was also enjoying a plunge in the pond, rendered first aid treatment to Mr. Hill and the latter was brought to his home here.

PREPARING FOR OPENING OF HARTRIDGE SCHOOL

As usual at this time painters and carpenters are busily at work at the Hartridge School putting both the residence and the recitation hall in the best of condition for the new term. At Oakwood the house is being repainted, and at the auditorium the ceiling is being redecorated and an entire new hardwood floor is being put in for the benefit of the gymnasium and dancing classes.

For a large section of the long piazza on the southwest side of the building an awning is to be constructed so heavy that it will be possible for the children of the Montessori class to be out of doors for part of the morning even in rainy or snowy weather. The first grade children will also have work out of doors for part of each day.

The school has ordered a new motor bus, which will be used instead of horses for the little children in the Netherwood and Hillside sections. All the contracts have been given to local workmen.

HOLY CROSS PREACHER.

The Rev. Horace E. Clute, of New York, will have charge of the services at the Holy Cross church, Sunday morning, at 11 o'clock.

PLAN TO BEAUTIFY HOSPITAL GROUNDS

Board of Governors Take Steps to Purchase Trees and Shrubbery.

One of the governors of Muhlenberg Hospital has contributed $100, and three or four other governors have given $10 each toward a fund to be known as the "Tree Fund," to make posible the purchase of trees and shrubs to beautify the hospital grounds.

This improvement is very much needed. The buildings warrant a good setting with attractive trees, and yet very naturally the governors of the hospital have hesitated to spend any money from the general fund of the hospital for such purpose.

The governors believe there are many citizens who would like to give from $1 up to this fund to permit the beautifying of the grounds for this one big charitable institution, which is doing such important work in our community. Arthur M. Collens, of 1320 Watchung avenue, will be pleased to receive any contributions to this fund.

MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN TO BEGIN ON TUESDAY

Harry B. Salter Completed Plans Yesterday for Work—Emblem Selected.

Harry B. Salter, secretary of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce, who has been procured as a "business evangelist" by the Business Men's Association of Plainfield, was in town yesterday. While here he completed arrangements for the two weeks' membership campaign which he will start, in conjunction with members of the Association, on Tuesday of next week. It is expected that his work will result in the formation of the strongest business promotion organization that the city has ever known.

A meeting of the emblem committee, which has had charge of the contest for a five dollar prize offered by the organization, for the best permanent emblem for the organization was held yesterday. The committee, consisting of Samuel Rothberg, Dan Hulick and Leslie R. Fort, made their selection and two were selected for honorary mention. In all about thirty designs were submitted, and the work of the committee was handicapped by the excellence of nearly every one submitted. A meeting of the executive committee of the organization was held at A. E. Force's store yesterday afternoon, and the decision of the emblem committee sustained. It was decided to have cuts made of the successful design, before announcing the winner, and these will be ready early next week.

Mr. Salter was enthusiastic yesterday about the prospects for a largely increased membership of the Business Men's Association. He said that he had never encountered a more enthusiastic group of workers than the local men, and that he looked forward with much pleasure to the prospects of leaving here after a strong organization for the promotion of commercial interests was assured. Incidentally he expressed admiration for the emblem selected, and said that in some ways it was more attractive than the one used by the Trenton Chamber of Commerce.

DR. CHARLES G. DAVIS TO WED MISS JESSIE CANN

Announcement was made today of the engagement of Miss Jessie May Cann, directress of nurses at Muhlenberg Hospital, to Dr. Charles Griffith Davis, son of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas S. Davis, of Park avenue. Dr. Davis is a graduate of the dental department of the University of Pennsylvania and has been engaged in the practice of dentistry here for several years. He is a member of the Plainfield Dental Society and has been active in the dental clinic at the hospital.

RUNAWAYS CAUGHT.

John White and Peter Mahler, two runaway boys from Elizabeth, were located near Potter's Crossing, by Lieutenant Maurice Higgins, of the local police force yesterday afternoon. FRED K. WILCOX, JR., HAS NARROW ESCAPE

Was Nearly Burned to Death in a Hotel at Hollis, Oklahoma.

Fred K. Wilcox, Jr., son of Fred K. Wilcox, of Dunellen avenue, who left the borough, where he was born and raised, about four years ago for Oklahoma, had a narrow escape from being burned to death when a hotel at Hollis, Oklahoma, in which he was stopping the night of Tuesday, September 7, caught on fire and burned to the ground. Mr. Wilcox resides at Chickash, Oklahoma. He is a traveling salesman for the Oliver Typewriter Company and was in Hollis on business.

In a letter written to his father on September 11, Mr. Wilcox described the incident graphically. He said that he was awakened at 2 o'clock in the morning, half overcome with smoke. The fire bells were ringing, and the people yelling. The whole building was on fire before he became fully awake and upon leaping out of bed he had time to put on his trousers and coat. The building was a fire-trap and he found the only avenue of escape to be a telephone pole which fortunately stood opposite and close to the window of his room.

As he was about to make his escape by this means he happened to think of his watch and pocketbook, which he had placed under his pillow upon retiring and he went back for them. He was floored once by the smoke, but managed to make his way to his bed and return with the desired articles back to the window. How he was able to do so he does not know.

MR. AND MRS. H. R. COOK GIVEN PLEASANT SURPRISE

Mr. and Mrs. Harry R. Cook, of Park place, were surprised at their home by twenty of their friends a few nights ago. The joke of the affair was that on Friday night two weeks ago Mr. Cook was among a number who surprised Henry Glazer, a neighbor, and during the evening Mr. Cook took occasion to remark that he did not think a great deal of surprise parties and added the boast that if any of his friends attempted to surprise him they would not get away with it as he said he would go out of the back door of his home as they came in the front.

Fred Vail and William Smith then decided that they would make the attempt at any rate to surprise Mr. Cook. The affair was arranged and a party of eighteen called quietly at the Cook home. As Mr. Cook was about to enter the hall everybody yelled "surprise," whereupon Mr. Cook right about faced and ran for the kitchen door to make his escape in the night. Messrs. Vail and Smith had taken precautionary means to prevent such a happening. They had stationed themselves on the kitchen porch and as Mr. Cook bolted through the kitchen door he ran right into their arms.

The evening was spent in playing "500" and pinochle. Henry Glazer and Fred Vail won first honors in the pinochle match over Edward Sutton and William Smith. Before the party broke up refreshments were served.

Four of the fingers of his right hand were badly cut as a result. Dr. Roger Cooley was summoned and attended to the injured members. The fellow will be unable to do any manual work for at least a month. Another laborer was quite badly burned near Gallagher's corner by hot tar which spattered over him. He was also attended by Dr. Cooley.

Under the direction of Rutgers Neilson, the moving pictures of the "community picnic" have been seen by practically every 'Plains and borough resident besides others in the nearby places where it has been exhibited. It is expected that the pictures will be shown, probably in the Fanwood firehouse and Excelsior Hall both, for the benefit of the Episcopal church.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Hudson Thompson have returned to their home on Martine avenue, after spending the summer at their cottage at Lake Hopatcong.

Miss Anna Lou Outwater, of Tillitson road, is visiting the Misses Todd, of Bellivale, N. Y.

Although Fanwood residents can expect to have a permanent sewer in another year or so, the time depending on when Plainfields' system is finished, the Board of Health is doing what it can to better present conditions. Following out the suggestion given at a joint meeting of the Board of Health and Council several months ago, it is probable that an inspector will be shortly appointed to make regular inspection of all the cesspools in the borough and order cleaning where necessary.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Despite the hot weather, large audiences attended Proctor's Theatre last evening, when Fatima, the Oriental dancer, made her appearance. Fatima's interpretation of Eastern dances was well received. "Poorhouse Rats," a dramatic comedy sketch by Milo Beldon and company, is an excellent act. Milo Beldon, who will be remembered by theatregoers of this city for the parts he took in "Seven Days" and "Paid in Full," is the author of this playlet, and takes the leading role as well. Howard and Ross, who juggle banjos at the same time they are being played, present a fine act. Not only are the banjo selections well rendered, but their introduction of operatic music, both on the instruments and diencesis ff ff ff ff ff vocally, is novel, and comes as a surprise to those who habitually follow the doings of the vaudeville stage. The bill is completed with Artois Brothers, in a comedy bar act; Frank Tierney and Frances Hope, in a singing, talking, dancing and piano act, and Von Hampton and Schriner, clever comedians, who are somewhat above the average. Proctor patrons should remember that this house is kept cool through the hot and oppressive weather. The motion picture feature for today is "The Tides of Time," with Mary Nash in the leading role, while for tomorrow "June Friday," an Edison feature, has been booked. Watch for the new serial production to be shown for the first time next Friday at this theatre.

NATIONAL COUNCIL VOTES FOR CHANGE

D. of L. to Be Known as Sons and Daughters of Liberty.

Portland, Me., Sept. 17.—The final debate on the question of changing the name of the Daughters of Liberty to Sons and Daughters of Liberty occupied the attention of the National Council for ninety-five minutes at its closing session, and was decidedly spirited, finally resulting in the changing ordered by a roll call vote of 105 to 39.

Five men voted against the change. Tuesday a recommendation to change the name was adopted, but the bylaw legalizing the change required a two-thirds vote and the opponents worked hard to defeat the project. First an effort was made to change to Defenders of Liberty, the claim being made that it would save expense by keeping the initials.

The men contended that the order was organized forty years ago by men, and that, at first, it was difficult to get women to join. It was organized as an auxiliary to the Order of United American Mechanics, all men being required to hold membership in either the senior or junior order. In recent years that requirement was abolished. The women objected because the men were finding fault with a name they elected. The men put forth the claim that the change was desired for the same reason that the women changed their own name—because it is expected to prove a benefit. All papers and books will be legalized until the change is made. State and subordinate councils will receive new charters, which will be paid for by the national council.

In the committee appointments made just before adjournment New Jersey obtained three places. Mrs. Sarah Angels, of Millville, is a member of the new committee, "state of order;" Mrs. Laura B. Taylor, of East Orange, a member of the appeal committee, and George W. Miller, of Washington, was reappointed chairman of the transportation committee.

ARRAIGN CINCINNATI SLAYER.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 17.—Harry Leahy, charged with the murder of Frank J. Clements by shooting in a bar-room on August 31, will be arraigned today. The prisoner has refused to give any reason for the shooting. His friends have declared that he will plead self-defense. Leahy was vice-president of the American District Telegraph Company. Witnesses of the shooting declare there was no argument, and that the first they knew of Leahy's intention was when the report of the gun rang out. Leahy had pressed a gun to the side of Clements and fired. Clements died five days after the shooting. Meanwhile, Leahy had been caught in Louisville, and was turned over to the Cincinnati police.

ITALIAN KILLED IN LINCOLN EXPLOSION

Body Blown to Atoms in Accident Shrouded in Mystery —Leaves a Family.

An explosion at the plant of the Commercial Acetylene Company, near Lincoln, yesterday afternoon, resulted in the death of John Corrillo, an Italian, whose body was blown to atoms. The Middlesex county authorities turned the body over to Higgins' morgue, in this city, and it now awaits a claimant. The man is said to have a wife and three children in Italy, but he is believed to have been without relations in this counetry. He was apparently about forty years of age.

Details of the fatal accident are meagre, and Detective Pelletier, of the Middlesex county prosecutor's office, is working on the case with a view to fixing the responsibility.

ANOTHER HOTTEST DAY; MERCURY REACHES 91

As if to ridicule that warning of the United States Weather Bureau to look out for a killing frost, Old Sol hung up another record yesterday for future September suns to shoot at. And if past history can be used in figuring precedent for future events it will stand for some years. The mercury hovered about 90 all of yesterday and once, at 2 p. m., it slipped over, registering 91 for a short time. This beat all past records for September 17 by 3 degrees. In 1907 the thermometer registered 88 in Plainfield, which was the hottest until yesterday came along.

DEPARTMENT CALLED TO EXTINGUISH TWO FIRES

An accumulation of smoke in the house occupied by J. D. Mitchell, 824 West Fourth street, called the fire department to that address at 9:31 this morning. There was no fire to be found and the cause of the smoke was not discovered.

From 9 until 12 o'clock the steamer was in use at the dumping grounds on Park avenue to extinguish a fire in the rubbish there. The engine flooded the place with water. Such a stench arose from the rubbish on fire that residents living in that section of the city requested the department to send a steamer to scene and drown the fire out.

THE SUPREME TEST.

"You aspire to become our Professor of Modern Languages?" asked the President of the Board of Trustees of the Milledgeville College.

"Yes, sir," was the respectful answer of the applicant.

"Konnen Sie Deutsch sprechen?" asked the Professor sharply.

"Jawohl!" came the answer of the applicant, not to be taken off his guard thus easily.

"Parlez-vous francais?" demanded the interogator, giving the applicant no time for recovery.

"Oui," said the applicant. The President beamed with pleasure upon his fellow members of the Board.

"It seems," he said, addressing no one in particular, "that the gentleman is eminently qualified for the post. But," turning again to applicant, "there is one more question that I must ask you. What is the simian equivalent of fear as expressed in the monkey language as transcribed by Professor Garner?"

Realizing that he had failed in the supreme test, the applicant turned sadly away.

SOMETHING TO HOLD HIM TO.

"Always be the same as you are now," he whispered to her tenderly, "and it is all I ask, my dearest one."

"And if I am, you will always love me?" she said, quietly.

"Yes," he answered her, "always."

She looked beyond him—into space. Only SHE knew that ere long she would be quiet different, for she was growing stout!

Then she smiled into his face. "And the more you see of me, the greater will be your love, will it not?" she asked.

"Yes," he answered, "I swear it!" And thus she was comforted.

DANIEL AND THE LIONS.

And it came to pass that Daniel was cast into the den of lions by order of King Darius.

Early the next morning, King Darius went to the den, rolled away the stone, and called out: "Do the lions bite?"

"Not unreasonably," replied Daniel, who was well up in the general vernacular of the day.

"Good," ejaculated King Darius as he rolled back the stone. Whereupon he went forth and proclaimed to the multitude that the lion question had been solved.

PARADE TO FEATURE W. C. T. U. GATHERING

State Convention Will Be Held in Montclair Latter Part of This Month.

One of the features of the State convention of the New Jersey W. C. T. U. in Montclair, this month, will be a parade on September 29, the second day of the gathering of the temperance workers. The convention will close on October 1. The arrangements for the parade are in charge of Frank F. Gray, commissioner of the Montclair Boy Scouts, and the organization of which he is the acting head will have a prominent part in the demonstration. The Montclair branch of the W. C. T. U. yesterday made a formal request to the public for contributions of banners and other materials for use in the floats, which will form one division of the parade.

It is the purpose of the Montclair branch to house the delegates in the homes of the local members during thier stay in the town. Dinner and supper will be served at a Montclair restaurant, which has engaged Metropolitan Hall, on Bloomfield avenue, to accommodate the visitors.

Among the speakers at the convention will be Charles Scanlon, head of the temperance department of the Presbyterian General Assembly; Daniel Poling, superintendent of the Christian Endeavor Society, and Mrs. Catherine Lent Stevenson, president of the Massachusetts Women's Christian Temperance Union. The singing at the convention will be in charge of Mrs. Grover D. Smith, of Montclair, who is musical director of the State organization. A quartet has been secured for the occasion.

The gathering in Montclair will be the forty-second annual convention of the New Jersey W. C. T. U. The convention has never been held in Montclair before, and the event will have special significance this year, for the members of the local branch are working earnestly to influence the citizens to vote for a "dry" town at an unofficial referendum on November 2.

The New Jersey W. C. T. U. was organized in Newark in 1874. This was the year that Miss Frances E. Willard, believing that "organization is the sun-glass which brings to a focus scattered influence and effort," founded the national W. C. T. U. New Jersey was not represented by delegates at the meeting where the national organization had its inception, but the members of the State society were in sympathy with the movement.

Mrs. M. R. Denman, a New Jersey delegate at the national convention held the following year, offered a suggestion, which came from Mrs. F. W. Moores, of Newark, that there should be held a season of noontide prayer for the workers. This suggestion was endorsed by the convention, and there is now a world-wide observance of the custom then adopted.

The fundamental principles for which the Women's Christian Temperance Union stands are total abstinence from intoxicants—prohibition, purity and peace. The motto of the New Jersey organization is "New Jersey Shall Be Redeemed." Forty-five departments of work have been instituted by the national organization. The organization regards woman suffrage as a strong factor in promoting temperance, and for that reason the department of franchise has become of much importance to the members.

The State organization has an enrollment of 11,250, including 1,511 men, who are honorary members. The gain in membership last year was 538. The propaganda of the union is spread throughout New Jersey through the State paper, the White Ribbon News.

CLAIMS RARITAN MERCHANT VIOLATED SUNDAY LAWS

Somerville, Sept. 17.—Joseph Navatto, formerly a commissioner of Raritan, a justice of the peace and for several years court interpreter, has preferred charges before Justice John Burns, of that place, against David Granetz, a merchant of Raritan, in which he alleges that on Sunday evening, September 5, in violation of the Sunday ordinance passed by the commissioners, sold a pair of shoes to an unknown man. The case was to have been heard last night, but was postponed to Monday night.

Granetz denies that he made such a sale, but the complainant claims that even if the Sunday ordinance does not cover the case, what is known as the "blue laws" do and that there was a violation.

The Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue church will hold its annual corn roast at Scotch Plains tomorrow afternoon and evening. All members are requested to take the 4 o'clock Main Line trolley from the stand.

ACTIVE SEASON AT THE DAY NURSERY REPORTED

The monthly meeting of the board of trustees of the City Union of the King's Daughters was held yesterday morning at The Day Nursery on West Front street, Mrs. Nelson Miller, president, presiding. Considerable business was transacted and interesting reports from the committee read. Mrs. A. E. Faber, chairman of the food supply and diet committee, reported that through the generosity of various circles they have been able to give the children ice cream and cake once a week all through the summer. The matron in charge of the Nursery reported that the public has been most generous in contributions of fruit and vegetables.

She also informed the board that 417 children were enrolled at the building during the month of August, which was 110 more then there were registered at the Nursery during August of last year. It was decided that because of the increase in attendance and in order to give each child some training to engage a third worker at the building. The Nursery building will be repainted in the near future and a number of interior repairs have been ordered.

The Dramatic Club will hold a rehearsal of "Brown of Harvard" in the kindergarten room at Washington School this evening.

In the auditorium the Dunbar dance will be held as usual. A large attendance is expected tonight.

The chairman of the Recreation committee is to conduct a public hearing in the library room at the Washington School at 8 o'clock this evening. Plans for organizing a West End "Community Center" will be discussed. The public is invited.

STRIKERS GET INCREASE.

Somerville, Sept. 17.—Many spinners in the card plant of the Johns-Mansville Works at Findern, who went on a strike on Wednesday, demanding an increase in pay from 20 to 25 cents an hour, were granted the increase and have returned to work. A dozen girls also struck, but failed in their demands. Three were discharged and the rest returned to work.

LUMBER WAS STOLEN.

G. I. Ferguson, of 111 Summit avenue, North Plainfield, reported to the local police yesterday that 1,000 feet of lumber which he had stored on Leland avenue had been stolen. No trace of the thief has been found.

W. C. T. U. LISTEN TO SUFFRAGE TALK

Dr. Dillah, of Ohio, Addresses "White Ribboners" at Annual Convention.

The afternoon and evening sessions of the thirty-first annual convention of the W. C. T. U. of Union county, held in the Presbyterian church, Dunellen, yesterday, were a continuation of the excellent meeting of the morning, and drew out large attendances.

The afternoon session opened at 2 o'clock with devotional exercises led by the Rev. H. L. Polan, pastor of the Seventh-Day Baptist church at New Market. The greater part of the afternoon was given over to the reading of reports bearing on the different branches of the work.

Mrs. Mary L. Winter, of this city, reported on the "Observance of the Sabbath." Others from this city to make reports were Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, superintendent of soldiers and sailors' work; Mrs. Edmund Teel, on "Social Meetings and Red Letter Days," and Mrs. E. A. Parse on "Railroad Men, Motormen and Firemen."

Mrs. J. Z. Hatfield, of Scotch Plains, read a report dealing with the Loyal Temperance Legion, and Mrs. J. L. Manning, of Dunellen, dealt in her report with the evangelistic and almshouse departments of W. C. T. U. work.

One of the features of the afternoon session was an address by the Rev. T. E. Vassar, pastor of the First Baptist church, of New Market. Mrs. E. L. Feickert, president of the New Jersey Equal Suffrage Association, who was scheduled to speak, was unable to be present and Dr. Dillah, of Ohio, a young woman of high intellectual calibre, substituted for her and delivered a splendid address.

The Rev. E. R. Brown, pastor of the Presbyterian church, of Dunellen, had charge of the devotional services at the opening of the evening session. The Rev. G. W. Kemble, of Rahway, delivered an address on "True Democracy."

The music in the evening comprised a solo by Miss Beatrice Cameron, of Dunellen, and selections by a quartet.

Supper was served by the Ladies' Aid Society, of the Presbyterian church, of Dunellen, upon the adjournment of the afternoon session.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

I write to thank you for the editorial in yesterday's paper, "Peace By Arbitration." Such utterance is a public service, for our people want in every way to be guarded against the insanity that would plunge us into the European chaos. The one argument of national honor fails to touch me, for I cannot see that I maintain my honor by knocking the other man down. That proves weight, not honor.

SAMUEL T. CARTER.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

In the absence of our corresponding secretary, the pleasant duty is mine, to write you that at the regular monthly meeting of the board of trustees of the Plainfield City Union of Kings' Daughters, held yesterday morning, September the 16th, it was unanimously voted to send to you a letter of our appreciation and thanks for your interest and zeal in raising through your paper the fund to carry on the milk station and baby clinic, held at the Day Nursery, through the summer. And we wish to take this opportunity to ask you, if you will kindly express publicly, for us, our gratitude to the many generous people who contributed to this fund, which, amounting to three hundred and seven dollars and twenty cents ($307.20), more than covered the expenses of this summer's work, that gave milk and ice and medicines, when necessary, to one hundred and eleven (111) babies; the total attendance in forty days being five hundred and eleven (511).

One could go on for many pages telling of the benefits that this generous fund made possible to many poor families, and we are sure that they would wish their thanks added to those of the King's Daughters.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN CHAPTER RESUMES FALL MEETINGS

Activities in the Abraham Lincoln Chapter, No. 122, I. C. S. Fraternity of the World, were resumed last night, when the members met in the "Frat" rooms in the First National Bank building. A most encouraging season is anticipated. John R. Barnes resigned as secretary of the chapter and C. Ivan Hill was elected to fill the vacancy. F. Robert Shaw was elected first vice president after the acceptance of the resignation of George L. Morrison.

As a result of the work of the ways and means committee, whose report was presented last night, much discussion on various beneficial topics was brought forth and many changes are expected. The committee comprises: C. E. Varien, S. C. Van Hoeusen, F. Robert Shaw, G. Lewis and H. W. Swile, chairman. The house committee, A. D. Doig and S. E. Van Hoeusen, members, will re-decorate the meeting rooms.

THE LOST IS RETURNED.

Frederick K. Hansgen, of 215 North avenue, Westfield, was allowed to take his motorcycle from police headquarters yesterday, after satisfying Lieutenant Maurice Higgins that it was the one stolen from him one year ago. Hansgen was driving his auto on South avenue Sunday when he recognized the machine, and escorted the driver to police headquarters. The owner was Charles L. Noe, of Elizabeth, who had purchased the machine from a second-hand store in New York, where it had probably been disposed of by the thief.

He claimed he had always paid the fifty cent rate without protest, and that he believed a majority of his fellow neighbors had done likewise.

Henry P. Stevens, of Netherwood, reiterated the previous statements to the effect that many people ride only when it rains, and indicated that he was satisfied with the present regulation.

Former Councilmanic President Leslie M. Daniel made a strong plea in behalf of the hackmen, declaring that he hired a hack on the average of 450 times a year, and that he thought it would be working an injustice to increase the twenty-five cent limit.

Michael Higgins, Peter Seader, Walter Hankerson and William J. Willis, all hackmen and taxi drivers, also spoke.

Scattered Sport Gleanings

"It isn't what you used to be; it's what you are today," says "Ruby Robert" Fitzsimmons. Thereby advancing the one point agreed upon by himself and the New York State Boxing Commission, which believes that Fitz is not a fit object to re-enter the ring.

Jack Fritts tells us he's going to trim Platt Adams and all the rest of the athletic gang in that all-around tomorrow afternoon. Well, Jackie, there's no time like the present to get your rights, even the women are at it.

Two miles a minute promises Oldfield. And still they shout. Pretty soon we won't be able to tell whether they're going or coming.

The defeat of George Throckmorton in that junior metropolitan tennis tourney is another of the surprises of the sport season. The Woodridge boy was considered a sure winner in this classic and his downfall came as a rude jolt.

These hot days don't make a fellow think any too well of booting the pigskin. Old Sol will have to calm down a bit before the local warriors agree upon hard work.

Talk going the rounds on this basketball league subject indicates that there'll be something doing at tonight's session of the City Baseball League. The time is ripe to break out with the organization plans and it's to be hoped that someone takes the initiative.

Frank Brennan, the injured City Leaguer, was welcomed home by a band of fifes and drums the other night. Music is said to be soothing but we'll stake our last dollar on the belief that the receipts from that benefit game were a whole lot more soothing. It was a commendable move and one thing that the City League should be proud of.

The bell has rung for straw lids but it's a safe bet that there'll be a few bleacherites who sport them out to ball games tomorrow. The baseball fan is always the last one to answer the call.

With a nucleus of football talent such as Coach Patch has to work with for a Plainfield High School football eleven we see no reason why the red and blue shouldn't sport a world beater this year. There's plenty of good new material and a wealth of last season goods.

Over in Rahway they say that there'll be a famine in football material. Well, it's about time the clique at that end of the county was put to rout.

With the National League pennant headed in the direction of Philadelphia it's high time we started to save our pennies toward that $3 carfare. It's a long way to the Polo Grounds but a longer way to Quakertown.

"Blossom," the Yale boy who copped the intercollegiate golf title, may prove easy fruit for the Princeton Tiger next year," screams the Newark Eagle. Providing the Eli bulldog doesn't get a hold on one of those knots in the Tiger's tail.

FIELDER JONES IN DUTCH AGAIN WITH UMPIRES

St. Louis, Sept. 17.—Fielder Jones, manager of the St. Louis Federals, yesterday received notice from President Gilmore, of the league, that he had been suspended for three days for his verbal clash with Umpire Mullin, Wednesday.

Fielder Jones created a sensation earlier in the season by announcing that he would resign as manager of the St. Louis team because the umpires along the Federal League circuit had not made their decisions according to his liking. He declared that the St. Louis team had been checked in its progress pennantward by the alleged incompetent officials. President James A. Gilmore seemed to consider that Jones had acted without due consideration and the matter was patched up. There is not a little interest now being shown, inasmuch as many figures that Jones will have another outbreak now that he has been suspended because of his argument with Umpire Mullin.

SATURDAY'S GAMES MAY DECIDE LEAGUE STANDING

Final fights for the one remaining prize in the City League will be waged tomorrow. While the games of this week are not the last of the season, it is probable that the contests will decide which of the teams shall occupy second place when the 1915 season closes.

The T. A. B. S. meet the First Baptist team on the Baptist grounds. If the former team wins they will have a strong hold on second place. On the other hand the Baptist team plays three more games in two weeks, and if it should win all three of them there would be a material change in the standing.

Clinton Avenue's only hope is for the Baptists to defeat T. A. B. S. Saturday, while its players triumph over Hope. The game will be played on the Hope grounds. The Clinton Avenues have one of the scrappiest teams in the league, and may be expected to fight harder tomorrow than at any time in the season. Its infield is the class of the organization on defensive ball, and if the hitters can connect Saturday there will be little hope for Hope.

Tomorrow's game are:
T. A. B. S. at First Baptist.
Clinton Avenue at Hope.

BOSTON FANS ATTACK COBB ON DIAMOND

Race for American Rag Grows Heated—Detroit Looks Like Best Bet.

As evidence of the intense interest shown by fans in the race between Boston and Detroit for the American League championship, Ty Cobb, champion hitter of the league, was assaulted after the game at Boston, yesterday. It was Cobb's hitting and base running that gave the Tigers a 6 to 1 victory over the Red Sox. More than 28,000 fans were out to cheer their team to victory and each time the Georgia Peach came to bat he was greeted with hisses.

Cobb provoked the hissing by making two of the Tigers' runs himself, and accepting part of the responsibility for others. In the eighth inning, however, he further angered the Red Sox rooters by throwing his bat at Mays. Two balls pitched by Mays came close to his head and he accused the twirler of an attempt to bean him. The next struck him on the hand and he threw his bat at the pitcher. This act did not decrease the hostility of the fans toward the Tiger star and when the game was over thousands of fans rushed on to the field and surrounded him. Paper, cushions and other articles not classed as deadly were thrown at him and but for the interference of the police, who escorted him to the clubhouse, it is believed that the mob would have injured the player.

Detroit is now but one and one-half games behind Boston and from the showing made in yesterday's game there is little hope for the Red Sox.

P. H. S. FOOTBALL MEN HAVE FIRST WORKOUT

P. H. S. pigskin warriors reported on Parker Field, yesterday afternoon and under the guidance of Coach Ralph S. Patch and Clarence Woodman, a former Colgate crack and member of the All-American eleven, held a strenuous work-out. Captain Dick Pennock was not on hand.

Among those who tried for berths on the team are: Miller, Dugan, Daniels, Vail, Butler, Mutnick, Van Hoesen, McDowell, Grossett, Wheelan, Hand, Peacock and Stevenson.

UMPIRE APOLOGIZES.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—Umpire Byron, who engaged in a fight with "Red" Smith, of the Boston Nationals, after Wednesday afternoon's game at the local league baseball grounds, yesterday offered a public apology for his part in the affair. Byron stepped in front of the grandstand just before yesterday's contest with the Brooklyns and told the fans he was sorry that the had taken part in Wednesday's mixup. His unusual disclaimer brought loud applause from the crowd.

He expressed the belief that Richmond and Harrisburg would continue in the league next season, although this will not be settled until a future meeting.

BASKETBALL LEAGUE WILL BE DISCUSSED

City Baseball Organization Will Hold Its Monthly Session Tonight.

Tentative plans for a City Basketball League are likely to come up for discussion at the weekly meeting of the City Baseball League to be held in the Daily Press office tonight, the business of the present organization being of such character that it will be possible to complete it in time to allow for a supplementary session to deal with the new proposition. Many club heads and basketball enthusiasts have endorsed the basketball idea and it is likely that a number will attend the gathering tonight. It is expected that the basketball league will be given an early start this year and those fostering the movement have expressed a desire that definite arrangements be made as soon as possible in order to give them an opportunity to adjust their plans accordingly.

President Walter C. Dobbins will preside at tonight's session and it is probable that a suggestion will be made to have the new sport league continued under the same management that fathered the successful baseball campaign. Several leaders have been suggested in the movement but the initiative steps will likely fall to the City Baseball League organizers.

AQUATIC TEAM FOR HIGH SCHOOL ARTISTS

Coach Patch Contemplates Organization of Formidable Outfit This Winter.

If the plans of Coach Ralph S. Patch work out, P. H. S. will have a formidable aquatic team this winter, dual meets being staged with other scholastic water-sport artists. As yet no captain or manager has been chosen for the squad, but it is understood that this formality will be done in a few days.

It is the purpose of Coach Patch to instruct the boys in the swimming arts and to hold open competitions for places on the team. It is most likely that Lorenzo Brower will be one of the leaders. There is also some talk of starting a girls' swimming team. In this line, also, P. H. S. has a great collection of artists.

SPORT BRIEFS

Frankie Mantell, of Ohio, and Al Rogers, of Buffalo, fought twenty rounds to a draw at Springfield, O., last night.

Johnny Evers, of the Boston Nationals, may become Yale's baseball coach next season. The faculty has Evers' terms under consideration.

Charles S. Garland, of Edgewood High School, Pittsburgh, and Louis W. Banks, of Adelphi Academy, Brooklyn, will meet today in final round of metropolitan junior tennis championship at Forest Hills, Long Island.

William, the world's champion five-year-old pacing stallion, driven by his owner, C. K. G. Billings, negotiated a mile in 1.59½, hitched to a wagon, at the Grand Circuit meeting, at Syracuse, yesterday. The former record was 2.01¼.

BASEBALL NOTES

Walter Johnson was in the box for Washington yesterday and St. Louis put some recruit pitchers in to practice.

Charley Herzog may lose his dream of seeing the Giants end in the cellar. Herzie did his part but he forgot that McGraw's men were to play another series with Pittsburgh.

Umpire Byron apologized for his fight with Red Smith, the Brooklyn third baseman, and strange to relate, he did it to the fans at yesterday's game instead of through the sport page.

Comiskey's aggregation of million dollar ball players lost to the New York Yankees by 3 to 2, yesterday. If he can ever get them to hitting as high as their weekly wage, others in Johnson's circuit will fight it out for second place.

Brooklyn was at the mercy of Jim Vaughn, while Philadelphia found Cincinnati easy, therefore the Dodgers are a little further away from first place.

NEW CHAMPIONSHIP ELIGIBILITY PLAN

Mayor Calkins, Originator of Par System of Handicapping, Discusses Question.

When the United States Golf Association executive committee gets busy on the new national championship eligibility work, the chances are it will have to make especial provision for the individuals with club affiliations only. In other words, such lists as the minor associations may submit to the national board may be minus the names of a number of prominent amateurs whose clubs do not belong to any sub-association.

Golfers, therefore, not automatically taken care of when the minor bodies send in their eligibility lists will probably have to file their applications through their club secretaries direct to the national board. It would, of course, be up to the individual to show proof why he should be entitled to compete for the national title.

With regard to the new championship eligibility plan, Mayor Leighton Calkins, originator of the par system of handicapping, said today that he considered the latest move a step in the right direction. Discussing the situation further, he said:

"I never have thought that the right kind of system consisted of one in which the national association had to make use of the regular handicap list to find out who were and who were not eligible to play in the championship. When Robert Watson was president of the U. S. G. A., I told him it was a prodigious job. Work along such lines was too difficult even for the Metropolitan Golf Association to get a good list even after that had been cut down to nine strokes.

"The chief point against the handicap lists that have been used for the last two years is that when a club sends in a batch of names handicapped on a medal play system, and knows that such list is going to be followed by the U. S. G. A., the club in question will not adhere strictly to a medal play test.

"In my opinion the executive board or a sub-committee of that body should be formed to constitute an eligibility committee, which could start in with a list of those who were eligible to compete in this year's championship, note where the different players came from and then put it up to their associations to prove and guarantee their eligibility. Some sort of a standard rule ought to be followed by the main body so as to keep out the dead wood."

Back in 1902, and a little later, when there was an agitation to have the U. S. G. A. follow the British method of having all match play rounds, which resulted in the governing body in this country trying the all match play experiment at Nassau in 1903, Mayor Calkins argued strongly in favor of a qualifying round, claiming that a champion should be able to at least make a good showing at the medal game. How clear were his views on playing conditions as far back as 1903 is shown by an article he wrote for a magazine about that time, in which he practically suggested the self-same plan of an extra day to be devoted to an elimination round, as was in the case of the Detroit tournament a short time since.

CANOEISTS TO GATHER.

A "get-together banquet" of 120 canoeists, representing various clubs in this vicinity, will be held tonight at Achtel-Stetter's, Newark. The racing crew of the Tuscarora Canoe Club will attend the banquet, as will crews of Paterson, Asbury Park, Wyona and Neptune clubs. The committee in charge has made extensive arrangements for the affair, and the tables will be turned into miniature lakes, and small canoes will float around on real water. The various trophies won by the Tuscarora Club will also be placed about the dining room. William F. McNeary, commodore of the Tuskies, will be the toastmaster. William Schooley, formerly of this city, is captain of the Tuskies.

LOCAL HORSE A WINNER.

Merry Widow, of Donnybrook Farm, won third prize for women's hunters up to carrying 165 pounds to the hounds, in the horse show of the New York State fair at Syracuse yesterday. The horse was entered against some of the classiest hunters in this section. Interest in the horse show and fair is shown by the fact that Governor Whitman pinned ribbons on many of the winners Thursday.

STATE BARBERS' ASSOCIATION IN FAVOR OF SUFFRAGE

The State Barbers' Association, which held its annual convention in Hoboken this week, went on record as being in favor of woman's suffrage, after a stirring address by C. F. Faley, of Pottsville, who is the second vice president. In the election of officers, Charles Pagliuca, of this city, was chosen treasurer and a member of the advisory board.

Eleven of the twelve locals of the State were represented at the gathering and after the business session the Hoboken local entertained the visitors at a banquet. The next convention will be held in Newark in September, 1916.

CHEER UP, A KILLING FROST IS ON ITS WAY

U. S. Weather Bureau Sends Out Strange Warning—Wear Your Straws.

Turn the fan on your fevered brow, hold your breath, sit on your hands and listen to this.

Charles F. Marvin is sending out circulars warning the perspiring populace, especially those in the corn belts of the country, warning them—we are afraid to say it—warning them to look out for killing frosts.

Don't strike! wait! You don't know who this fellow Marvin is. He has the support of President Wilson, backed by the United States army, and violence will avail nothing. Mr. Marvin is chief of the observing department of the weather bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture, and is therefore entitled to a hearing. H says, but wait, we'll let him say it himself:

"Owing to the generally backward state of this year's corn crop, especially in the northern, but important growing sections of the belt, there is great danger of injury to the crop by killing frosts, which may be expected at any time. It is, therefore, important that every effort possible be made to secure good seed for next year's crop. Where last year's corn is left over it should be carefully examined and the best ears saved for seed. Moreover, as corn matures unevenly, it is possible to secure seed from early ears even before the remainder of the crop is matured."

Just the same you can wear that old straw Kelly for another day or two. September 15 was the day of doom for them, but under the circumstances it will be perfectly proper to wait until the thermometer quits hugging ninety before decorating your bean with a new felt or stiff lid.

"No relief visible on the horizon" is the laconic comment of the weather man, who from this distance cannot see the danger of frost that this fellow Marvin speaks of.

LITERARY

A WOMAN IS JUDGED BY THE CLOTHES SHE WEARS.

In the October Woman's Home Companion, which is called a fall and winter fashion number, Grace Margaret Gould, the fashion editor, devotes seventeen illustrated pages to fashion news. One of her articles is entitled, "What Belongs with What and What Doesn't." In the following extract taken from this article Miss Gould reports some of the crimes that are committed in the name of fashion:

"A man is judged by the company he keeps, but with a woman it is the clothes she wears. After all, there is not much difference, for your dress is a pretty intimate companion. So it is wise for us to know what goes with what and what doesn't.

"Veritable crimes are committed in the name of hats. Think of the little dinky one, balancing on the head of the broad-shouldered woman with the big, round, fat face, like a fly on a pyramid. Think of the huge, animated hat that apparently floats on the air as it approaches you, until at length you make out the scrawny little creature who is striving to hold it up."

E. Alexander Powell's articles in Scribner's are making the realities of war in all their harrowing details plainly evident. He does not spar unpleasant details, but he brings out, too, the splendid spirit of the men at the front. He believes in the British army evidently, and says in his article "On the British Battle Line," in the October Scribner, that "The British soldier of this new army has none of the rollicking, devil-may-care recklessness of the traditional Tommie Atkins. He has not joined the army from any spirit of adventure or because he wanted to see the world. He is not an adventurer; he is a crusader. With him it is a dearly serious business. He has not enlisted because he wanted to or because he had to, but because he felt he ought to. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred he has left a family, a comfortable home, and a good job behind him. And, unlike the stay-at-homes in England, he doesn't make the mistake of underrating his enemy."

WHEN THE MILK SOURS.

The Southern housewife makes corn waffles with sour milk, and they are delicious, according to the following recipe: Into two cups of hot cornmeal mush stir a tablespoon each of butter and lard, and allow this mixture to become cold. Then add to it two well-beaten eggs, and flour and sour milk, first a little of one, then of the other, until a batter of the consistency of corn griddle cakes is produced; add salt to taste, and just before baking a tablespoon of saleratus dissolved in a little warm water.

If you have two tablespoons of thick sour cream when you start to cook a ham omelet, you can make it out of the ordinary. To three beaten yolks of eggs add the cream, four teaspoons of minced ham, the same quantity of grated cheese, salt and pepper to taste, a little chopped mint—if you have it—and lastly, the beaten whites of the eggs. Cook in butter as usual.

Deviled eggs, good for Sunday night supper, take on a different taste if enough thick, sour cream to moisten is added to the mashed yolks, then a dash of lemon juice, a little mixed mustard, salt and pepper to taste.

A splendid addition to cold ham is made as follows: Beat one-half cup of thick, sour cream, add a little salt and sugar and beat into the whole one-half cup of grated horseradish. —Woman's World for October.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

North Yakima, Wash.—Like Alexander of Macedon, Miss Margaret ("Peggy") Mulroony, former woman banker of Alaska, and now a successful apple grower of North Yakima, sighs for more worlds to conquer. When she was nineteen, she returned from boarding school in Paris, and with her sister, the present Countess Carboneau., went into the frozen north. Their adaptability and prowess in discovering "pay streaks" amazed the northwest. In Alaska they started a bank, with the elder sister as president, while Miss Peggy became cashier. The bank was at Dome Creek, the centre of the gold country. The miners brought their "pokes" of gold dust to the bank, where Miss Peggy took charge of it. Handsome commissions were paid and the bank flourished. During the Arctic winter, the girls loaned money like other bankers. "It sure was easy money," says beautiful Peggy Mulroony. When the girls had made their "pile," they bought an apple orchard here. With her elder sister now married, Miss Peggy is getting restless for another venture, and plans to go to South Africa.

St. Louis, Mo.—Mrs. Samuel Breadon, of this city, is the woman of "perfect profile," according to the decision of the judges at the San Francisco Fair. Her portrait was selected from those sent from all sections of the United States. She modestly declares she is no beauty, but is a strikingly handsome women of the auburn-haired, fair-skinned type. She is an expert swimmer, drives her own auto, and has taken golf championships. Before her marriage, she was Miss Rachel Wilson, of Winfield, Kansas.

POLITICAL NOTES

September 22—Sample primary ballots mailed to voters.

October 2—County committees meet for reorganization.

October 4—City committees meet for reorganization.

October 5—Republican and Democratic State conventions held in Trenton.

October 19—State referendum election, and third registration day in municipalities of more than 5,000 people.

October 26—Third and final registration day in municipalities of less than 5,000 inhabitants.

November 2—General Election Day.

Neither the Democrats nor the Progressives filed petitions for coroner candidates. This failure to attend to all the phases of a campaign is regarded by Republicans as showing an apathy in the opposing organizations, borne of the conviction that a G. O. P. victory is inevitable. Dr. Howard W. Potter is the Republican candidate for coroner.

The interesting fact has been recalled by many, that just previous to Henry J. McCandless' withdrawal as a Republican councilmanic candidate in the Sixth ward, Elizabeth, it was reported that he contemplated such a step in order to become a freeholder candidate. Mr. McCandless was regarded as the logical Republican councilmanic candidate in the Sixth, but, the story went, his many Democratic friends urged him to withdraw and run for something else with their support, in order that a Collins Democrat might be elected to City Council and thus enhance the General's chances of becoming comptroller. The story has been borne out so far, except that Mr. McCandless became a candidate for excise commissioner instead of freeholder.

Following the customary rule, neither the Republican nor the Democratic County Committee will mix in the primary campaign. No meetings will be held until the reorganization sessions early in October.

The statement issued last week by Republican State Chairman Bugbee showing that the G. O. P. will surely obtain control of the Legislature, attracted attention from the press of the State that indicated his reasoning had indeed made a deep impression. Democratic newspapers made little attempt to refute Mr. Bugbee.

The leaders in the recent Billy Sunday campaign in Passaic county have come to the front during the last few days as militant supporters of ex-Assemblyman James G. Blauvelt, the former Progressive leader, in his candidacy for the Republican State Senate nomination against Thomas F. McCran, former speaker of the Assembly, and ex-Assemblyman Stalter. The Assembly candidates of the Blauvelt faction have also received the endorsement of the clergymen and church workers. Their action was based not upon political grounds, but upon the plank for local option in the Blauvelt platform. The campaign is one of the bitterest ever waged in Passaic.

Resolutions pledging support to the Wilson Administration were unanimously passed at the closing session Saturday at Atlantic City of the New Jersey Postmasters' Association. Delegates expressed sympathy in the grave crisis, and voiced their intention of furthering any course he might pursue. The principal speaker at the banquet was James E. Martine, United States Senator, who urged cooperative work especially at this period. He asked that any prejudice be put aside and all unite in backing the Nation's Chief Executive.

Anti-Wittpenn Democrats are reported to be grooming Judge Charles F. X. O'Brien, now presiding in the Second Criminal Court of Jersey City, for the Congressional nomination at next year's primary in opposition to Congressman James A. Hamill, of the Twelfth district. Commissioner George F. Brensinger will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination to run against Congressman Edward W. Gray, or whatever nominee the Republicans select.

Opponents of State Senator Blanchard H. White, of Burlington county, are making strong efforts to defeat him at the primary for the Republican nomination. Circular letters are being mailed to G. O. P. voters in the interest of a rival candidate, enlarging upon the native birth of the latter. Senator White has called attention to the fact that he also is a native son.

DANIELS AT PROVIDENCE.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 17.—Hon. Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, and Governor David I. Walsh, of Massachusetts, will be the principal speakers at the Democratic love feast to be held tomorrow at Crescent Park. National issues will be discussed by the speakers. Several hundred will attend the big clambake, and "Little Rhody" will hear the first sound of the national campaign.

REDEEMING GEORGIA.

There are many in our country who are irritated by the lack of action in prosecuting those who lynched Leo M. Frank in Georgia and they are clamoring for vengeance. A sample expression from this class of bloodseekers is the following extract from a letter to Collier's Weekly:

"I beg of you not to let the matter rest. It must not rest. I feel that Leo M. Frank was a little comforted in his last agony by the thought of all the pepole who believed in him and had tried to help him.

"It might have been your son or your young brother caught in the hellish trap—it might sometime be my son."

This letter is from a woman—a mother—and she is not a Jewess. She is simply one of the thousands of mothers whose hearts have been touched by the sorrow of that Brooklyn mother who bore Leo M. Frank and lived to see her son sacrificed to satisfy the brutal lust of a mob of ignorant, mad "Georgia children."

The editor of Collier's wisely advises charity in dealing with those who lynched Frank. He blames the "persecution and murder" on ignorance, and warns that a permanent cure for Georgia can be brought about only through sympathetic understanding and education.

Collier's is right. Georgia has had enough of violence and if it is ever proper for civilization and the law to forgive a crime, the time is here.

The men who lynched Frank were not criminals as that word is generally used and understood. They went forth from their homes that night imbued with the same spirit that prompted the Boston Tea Party—or nearer still the same courageous heroism that inspired members of the Ku Klux Klan and saved the south in the dark days of the reconstruction. They placed their liberty and their lives in jeopardy to defend the memory of a little factory girl, and, as they thought, to safeguard their wives and daughters against a disgrace worse than death. They placed their neck in the hangman's noose, seeking no reward, no glory. Is that the work of criminals?

No! Don't blame those that lynched Frank. Blame the ages-old civilization of a state that permits its children to grow into such primitive manhood; blame rather the politicians and office-seekers who are even now stirring men already mad into further frenzy by using the Frank case as a stepping stone to political power; blame the lawmakers and executive officers who permit half-grown babes to slave long hours in sweat-shops, giving youth and health for a few handsfull of bread. And among other things blame Tom Watson, that misanthrope who seeks out the worst in mankind that he may exploit it. This man, living in seclusion in a little Georgia hamlet, fearing alike the bullets of enemies and the scorn of honest men, has done more to bring Georgia to disgrace than any other individual power.

It was he who fanned the spark of hatred against Frank until it ended in mob violence and threatened to bring about a race riot in Atlanta. And if Tom Watson is not muzzled, if Georgia is not allowed to forget the Frank case, at least until it has time for sober reflection, what has gone before will be but a beginning.

Months ago open boycotts were being conducted against leading Atlanta stores owned or conducted by Jews. If Tom Watson has his way he would drive all Jewish capital out of Atlanta, and he would not do it without bloodshed. The pity of it all is that this man has a following. There are many among the poor and illiterate of Georgia who believe that he is their friend and they willingly accept his advice.

Will the violence of the law remedy such a condition? The editor of Collier's was right when he warned against using a club against the misguided individuals who lynched Frank. There is work for a club in Georgia, but not among them.

Let the world and Georgia forget the Frank case for awhile. Instead of sending missionaries to the heathen of foreign countries let us free the child slaves of Georgia and educate them so that they will not repeat the mistakes of their fathers.

New Jersey is entirely too liberal in allowing reciprocity to automobilists from other states. Here we have hundreds of miles of good roads which are available to the citizens of any state in the union, and the automobilists are paying a good part of the bill. Of course there are states with which we exchange courtesies where the reciprocal privilege is warranted, but in the case of Pennsylvania the right to use New Jersey roads without paying a license fee should be discontinued. A well known Plainfielder has just returned from a trip lasting three or four days, which took him into scattered parts of the Keystone state. During that time he was compelled to pay over three dollars for the privilege of using toll roads, and they were practically the only good roads he encountered. It has been said that in order to get the best roads from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia, it is necessary to pay over twelve dollars in tolls. Certainly we should not grant reciprocity to a state which gives virtually nothing in return.

Another citizen was before Judge DeMeza this morning, charged with leaving his automobile standing in front of a fire hydrant. The police are, of course, subject to no criticism for enforcing this very good law, but at the same time the authorities should do something to make it easier for automobilists to realize where the hydrants are. The dull red color now used makes them inconspicuous, and scores of drivers approach them unconsiously, only to find a policeman awaiting them upon their return. The city authorities should see to it that the hydrants are painted some easily distinguishable color, and in the business section it might be a wise thing to erect posts as is now done in some cities, calling attention to them at a point level with the eye of the auto drivers.

Villa has disarmed his own men in the Juarez garrison to prevent their joining the army of Carranza. Possibly Carranza is offering a better brand of patriotism just now.

We wish to assure fond mothers that the arrival of Plainfield's automobile ambulance just as football becomes popular was purely a coincidence.

Now is the psychological time to stage murder. You could blame it on the heat and get away with it.

It looks as if Old Sol had formed an alliance with the straw hat and ice trusts.

Streams

Streams run in low places.

Low places where streams formerly ran but have been diverted therefrom, are ex-streamly low places. (Copyrighted, unnecessarily.)

It is easier to divert a stream than it is to divert some people.

When a man is seen digging a ditch from a low stream bed to a lower one, he is doing it for diversion.

Not his own diversion, but the stream's.

Who has not heard of a laughing brook? The brook was probably laughing because it was diverted.

Diverting a stream till it dries up is equivalent to tickling it to death.

When a human is diverted from his bed, he does not laugh.

When a large stream is unruly, such as the Platte River, the people of the town now and then washed out by said stream, say, "You'll be stopped if we dam you," and the stream replies, "I'll be—— if you stop me."

Bet on the stream.

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

A Hint To Housewives

DIRT left alone does no harm, but dirt disturbed may actually carry disease germs. What lies in behind the piano or on top of the whatnot really has no influence upon the health of the household. The trouble begins when you take a mop or a broom or a rag on a stick and go poking in behind there and stir it up.

As a matter of fact housecleaning time, spring and fall, invariably initiates a profitable season of "coughs and colds" which might never be, were germs not scattered promiscuously by industrious but obsolete housekeepers.

Housecleaning is a habit handed down by our dirty, ignorant colonial ancestors. In those days, the itch and such things were very popular, and it was no wonder folks got restless in the spring and fall and had to raise hob with the furniture. It is a sixteenth century sin visited upon the twentieth century housekeeper, a frank confession that woman, after all, is incapable of keeping step with the world's advance. A house, like a human being or a horse or an automobile, that is kept clean, certainly requires no periodic overhauling. A housekeeper who dares to be seen turning things topsy-turvy these days risks her very reputation. It isn't done any more unless a visit is expected from the board of health or rich relations.

There are houses and dooryards and human bodies that would unquestionably stand a thorough scrubbing just once, for the good of the community. But the practice of annual or semi-annual clean-up is as old-fashioned as the habit of taking a bath on the last day of school whether you need it or not.

We hold no brief for the husbands. We simply reiterate the fact that dirt is harmless so long as it isn't stirred up. Sweet as an immaculate house may be to the tired housekeeper's eyes, it is no protection whatever against the germs of disease. It is filth you can't see with the naked eye that brings home the measles. Clean looking people carry "colds." Perfectly pure looking water conveys diluted sewage—the typhoid germ. The finest tasting milk you ever drank may infect you with tuberculosis.

Housewife, spare that broom!

THE TRAMP STEAMER

A TRAMP steamer is the only kind of a tramp for which a use has been found so far. Like other tramps, it has a home, but never goes there. But unlike other tramps it is always working and its nose is seldom painted. Tramp steamers do not have gilt and white cabins and are not infested with millionaires and chorus girls returning from Europe on their frugal vacations. They are plain, awkward boats, as fat in the bows as a canal boat, and if a vacuum cleaner were turned on them after a trip, they would pan out more dirt than a Vermont farm has. But in their homely, diffident way they carry the ocean commerce of the world and enable the frugal housewife of America to buy English needles, because they come a cent a pound cheaper. The ocean liner travels back and forth between two ports, until she has worn a furrow in the map. But the tramp steamer plows slowly through the water from Liverpool to Melbourne and thence to Roratonga, Shanghai, Unalaska, Papeete, Reykjavik, Delagoa, Matanzas, Terra del Fuego, Tsuruga, Libau and other freckles on the map, which can only be found by a good geography scholar. Tramp steamers have carried enough wheat to Europe during the last year to feed 50,000,000 people. That shows the foolishness of their name. If they were real tramps they would not be carrying food. They would be panhandling it from port to port.

There are many thousands of tramp steamers in the world. Some of them are small and some are big enough to carry the crops of a whole county in one cargo. But practically none of them fly the United States flag. This is because the steamer which flies the United States flag has to pay its crew American wages and feed them civilized food. After the crew of an ordinary tramp steamer get over a three-months trip they sometimes go out and become real hoboes for the sheer luxury of it.

Nine hundred and fifty-six miles in an open boat with one day's board in her locker

Some people think the age of adventure will be over when the last war ceases. But so long as men can nurse rickety old steamers with rheumatic engines and weak backs through winter gales on the five oceans and row blithely to shore 956 miles by pedometer in an open boat with one day's board in her locker, when the said rickety steamer has flopped to the bottom, there will be some variety in life left for those who can't bear comfort and safety.

Views Of The Press

A Bohemian Pest

ONE WOULD think that any form of animal or vegetable life, introduced into the warmth and sunshine which we associate with Bohemia, would immediately develop—by the process of natural selection or otherwise—qualities which would either make it more useful to humanity or a more efficient organism.

But not so with the American muskrat, which in the ten years which have passed since it was introduced into that region by a nobleman, Prince Cellerede-Mannsfield, has become known as the "pest of Bohemia." Distributing itself for 100 miles around Prague, it has infested the streams, destroyed the fish, attacked the mussels and worked havoc among the crabs.

The streams in the Prague district are controlled by dams and grassed banks, and fish culture in the ponds formed thereby is a very important source of food supply. The muskrats undermine the banks and dams, allowing water and fish to escape; they feed on fish and disturb their spawning; they delight in river crabs and mussels, an important food supply and a supporter of large industry, respectively; and when other food becomes scarce they live on eggs.

Its last offense is that in Bohemia, although larger than in its native home, its fur is so inferior as to be useless.

Some supporters of the Quadruple Entente may endeavor to draw a moral from the adopted residence of the pestiferous muskrat, but before doing so it would be well to remember that the English sparrow has had a like development in this country, and the rabbit in Australia.—Sacramento Union.

NOTE: It would appear, however, from a recent article in one of our well-known magazines, that the rabbit pest in Australia has at last been turned to good account, the skins having found a market. And the Australian farmer is now growing to look upon this erstwhile plague as a blessing in disguise—rabbit, we might say, disguised as ermine.

No doubt he cannot but feel a thrill of pride to know that at this moment the tender pelt of that timid little creature, which not many days ago was nervously nibbling lettuces from his hand, may now be earning a lasting fame as it lolls in graceful ease about the august neck of the King of England!—Editor.

People's Legal Friend

BY E. R. BRANSON

Playing A Double Game

Q. I became surety on a note. Just before the note became due, the payée made an agreement with the man who made the note, and, I understand, was paid something for doing so, by which the maker was granted an extension of time for three months. I did not give my consent and in fact knew nothing about the transaction at the time. What effect will this have as to my liability?

A. You will be released from liability.

Make A Concrete Examination

Q. Is the examination of an abstract a difficult matter? Should the abstract always be examined when one buys property?

A. The examination of an abstract is usually attended with more or less difficulty and should be done by a competent legal adviser. Some abstracts of course are comparatively simple, but many others are intricate and require skilled attention and laborious efforts. It is always the safer and better plan, when buying property, to have the title inquired into, even though you may be fairly certain it is good, and the work should be done by a capable and careful lawyer.

Fire Insurance—A "Valued Policy"

Q. In speaking of fire insurance, what is a "valued policy"?

A. It is a policy which fixes in definite terms the value of the property insured and prescribes definitely the amount payable in the event of total destruction. For example, if a policy is written in the sum of $2,000 on a dwelling, and the policy further reads that the dwelling is "valued at $2,500," it is a "valued" policy. The meaning is that the company, unless fraud or imposition on the part of the policy-holder can be shown, is bound by the valuation of the property as fixed by the terms of the policy, and, under such circumstances, the company, in case the building is totally destroyed, will not be allowed to prove that the property was in fact not worth the amount of money named in the policy.

You Can Say It

Q. Is it necessary for an ordinary contract between an employer and a clerk to be in writing? A. No.

Say—Is Anybody Staying Married?

Where a man and his wife are about to separate, is it allowable for them to draw up an agreement, by which the wife will have a yearly income during the lifetime of both?

A. Yes.

Nailed To The Lease

Q. Is a landlord required to make alterations and improvements in the rented premises, where the lease says not?

A. No. You will be governed by the terms of the lease.

To Certify A Check

Q. What is the legal effect where a bank certifies a check?

A. The bank becomes the principal debtor and is required to pay the check whenever payment is demanded. The bank should therefore hold funds sufficient for this purpose.

Recording Acts

Q. What is the object of the recording acts in the various states?

A. They are intended to act as safeguards in the purchase and sale of property. When a conveyance has been recorded it affords what is called "constructive notice" of the purchaser's rights. Any subsequent purchaser will be bound thereby.

When Selling Land

Q. Where a man sells a piece of land, is he required to give an abstract of title?

A. Not unless he expressly agrees to do so. Custom frequently determines such matters.

The Life Line

BY LAURA KIRKMAN

The Ill-Tempered Man

This is the man who has a master. His ill temper is an admission that there is someone over him. Or some thing; for often he allows even a trivial duty to lash him. If he were his own master, he couldn't possibly be doing a thing he didn't want to do. He who runs himself takes the unpleasant duties of life as a matter of course; he expects to put out a sprat to catch a whale. He doesn't expect life to be all enjoyment, any more than a shopkeeper expects to get rich on an empty shop. Cheer proves leadership. Ill temper proves that the wearer is not taking life as a serious business. He is too childish for business life; he can only cry out for pleasures. He is in possession of his full health, yet prefers to sit in an invalid chair. And inactivity undermines. Soon the ill-tempered man will find his hand too weak to get a grip.

He's a jellyfish.

Suffrage and Shaves

The Suffragist attacked the shop
Devoted to the mug and strop
(The kind of place
Wherein your face
May undergo engraving).
"We want your vote," I heard her speak.
The victim turned the other cheek,
And said, "Begad!
That razor's bad!"
And the barber kept on shaving!

Within the apron-covered lap
Of that defenseless trousered chap
She placed a lot
Of pamphlets hot,
The which he wasn't craving.
And when he said, "Go take a flight!"
He gulped a lot of lather white,
And as he choked
And help invoked,
The barber kept on shaving!

Yea, customer on customer
Fled at the Suffrage lady's "Sir!"
Men dodged shampoos
And shines of shoes
And sought the sidewalk paving.
But still the damsel on the scene
Cried "Votes!" to the massage machine,
While strong of palm,
With perfect calm,
The barber kept on shaving!

O women! though your stern brigade
Tonsorial parlors may invade,
The barber gent
Still splashes scent
On heads that need no laving.
Though men of business flee your speech
And statesmen scatter when you preach,
I've seen one sort
Who held the fort—
The barber kept on shaving!

No government will ever become sufficiently paternal to keep the sucker and his money together.

The Missourians are mighty careful of their women. Hez Rasco, who was hanged not long ago, spent seven years in the penitentiary for killing one.

It is a part of nature's evening up process that the man who is henpecked never knows it.

There is this to say for the man who patronizes the burlesque show: he does not pretend that he is doing it in the cause of art.

The difference between them is exemplified in the fact that a man shivers it out until morning, while a woman gets up in the dark and hunts more covers.

It takes a mighty smart white man to live up to the titles conferred on the officers of a colored lodge.

A college girl's idea of a scandal is to hear that some other girl failed to make a sorority.

Generally speaking, a bore is one who insists on telling you what he thinks, instead of listening to what you think.

Radium has had the advantage of very active and enthusiastic press agents. When, by the way, is radium going to give its show?

The rule is that the woman who kins a man would have preferred to marry him.

He Was So Big.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—How the Elephant Checked His Trunk.

"IF you like my verse stories, kiddies," said daddy, preparing to tell the evening story, "I will tell you tonight about how the elephant checked his trunk."

"Oh, daddy, that will be fine!" exclaimed the children.

"Oh, listen, my kiddies, and you shall hear of an incident that's very queer.

"Over in Africa, far away, lived an elephant big as a ton of hay.

"The elephant, kiddies, was quite a chunk, and he had a great, long, curly trunk.

"The elephant rambled awhile, and then he was captured by some menagerie men.

"And all went merry for quite awhile, and to see that elephant was the style.

"Till—what do you think?—at last one day that naughty old elephant ran away!

"He hurried up to the station there and asked for a ticket for Anywhere.

"Then that elephant big—and he was some chunk!—chanced to remember to check his trunk.

"And the baggageman trembled and did not dare refuse to check it to Anywhere.

"So they checked the trunk, and they hung the check around the big, fat elephant's neck.

"The train it chugged, and the train rolled on till many a mile had past and gone.

"Till Anywhere was reached, and then, before you kiddies could count ten,

"The elephant left that funny old train and said, 'I'll never come back again.'

"So he hastened away to the forest dark that lay at the end of a lovely park.

"But something was missing, and soon that chunk said, 'What on earth did I do with my trunk?

" 'Oh, yes, I checked it. I've lost my check!' (You see, he'd forgotten 'twas round his neck.)

"He started to cry, when a monkey small cried, 'Look on your neck and forget to bawl!'

"So, thanking the monkey, that elephant chunk went back to the depot and got his trunk

"And uses it now to pull up trees and pick up tinlest bits of cheese."

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"The way to do this is to divide up." The doctor threw a fresh log on the bonfire. "Let each couple be responsible for an evening's entertainment."

"All right," "great stunt," came in chorus from the loungers in the fire-lit circle.

"I'll bring a croquet set," laughed Parsons, "and spread our entertainment over the whole week. Is it agreeable?"

"Where on earth would we play?" objected Jo. "The land here reminds me of the old relief maps at school."

"That's where the art comes in. Croquet on the level is too tame, but when you really have to study the lay of the land it becomes exciting."

"If you can make croquet exciting, come on," yawned Dick. "You'll have to show me before I'll believe it, anyhow. Nell and I have a stunt we'll pull off tomorrow evening."

Nell looked surprised, but everybody else was satisfied.

"We'll take the second evening," said the doctor. Olive nodded. "That leaves only the Scotts; Parsons is playing off his."

"Well," said Mr. Scott cautiously, "we'll take the last evening, or if we can't squeeze it in then we'll do a stunt in town or the first thing next year."

The next evening Dick got into Scott's auto in town, loaded with two suitcases. "What's this?" the men asked him.

"Ask me no questions and I'll tell you no lies," replied Dick. "I want to get out at the farmhouse a half mile this side of camp and buy an egg for shampooing Nell's hair."

They couldn't get anything out of him, and he disappeared into the farmhouse with a boy who met him and carried one of his suitcases. Nell did not seem anxious about him, and everybody else was soon occupied with setting up the croquet set Parsons had brought.

"Olive gets the first shot," they decided when the game was ready.

"All right," she agreed. "Now, I want to get through this first arch, but it's on the hillside, so I'm going to try shooting up the hill and give a slant through."

Olive shot, and her ball rolled neatly around the arch and off across the slanting grounds. Jo and Nell had no better success. Mrs. Scott elected to look on and restrain the enthusiasm of Gyp, her Spitz dog.

When Parsons had failed, the doctor took a hand. He swung his mallet nonchalantly and passed through the first two arches.

"Bravo!" cried everybody.

"This is too easy," said the doctor. "I'm going to make a handicap of it." He went all round the ground making a hole by pounding with his mallet before every wicket.

Dick lounged in when they were eating and gave no explanations, even under a hot cross-questioning. Just as they were finishing dinner Parsons jumped up excitedly.

"Holy smoke, what's that?" he shouted.

"How beautiful," agreed all the women.

Around the bend in the river, swimming sinuously near the other bank, came a great green snake no less than twenty feet long. It had a huge head raised from the water, and glowing yellow eyes. As they watched it passing, Scott happened to look at Dick; he was grinning broadly. Scott slapped him heartily on the back.

"Well, how did you work that?" he asked.

Everybody turned to look at Dick, then inspected the serpent.

"He blew up a garter snake with a tire pump," suggested Parsons.

"I know," cried Olive, as the serpent disappeared lower down by wriggling up the bank. "It's pine boughs on a rope and somebody swimming under a basket with a lantern or something."

"Right," agreed Dick; "you're a peerless detective."

"It's a peerless trick, anyhow," said Jo. "I never saw anything lovelier."

"Did you think of it yourself?" inquired Parsons.

"Parsons is jealous," taunted the doctor, "because he couldn't work his own game and I took the honors."

"Anyhow, you can't say my stunt was flat," returned Parsons warmly.

CHAPTER V.

Peale Makes Progress.

RODNEY left the club and went home. He skipped upstairs to his room two steps at a time and began flinging things out of drawers and chiffoniers. What trunk should he take—that new one he had made in Paris last summer "before the war?" No, he could send for that later, and besides, he didn't want to stay away from Mary any longer than he could help. He wouldn't take all his things just now; he would leave a good many behind, so that his father would be sorry if he ever came into his room again after his baby boy was gone. He would not take a trunk at all now—just his kit bag. Where was that kit bag? Johnson would know.

He started to ring for Johnson and then checked himself. He would not say anything to the servants yet. He didn't want them to be a party to this painful scene. He would leave them misinformed and keep his father guessing a little while. He would go and get that kit bag himself. It was in the garret most likely.

He had sneaked up the narrow garret staircase, the boards creaking now and then beneath his tread, just as they used to do when he was a child. Under the eaves he spied his kit bag, covered with dust. He dragged at it, and a pile of magazines and odds and ends of books fell forward across his arms. One of them was a battered cash book, or old diary, bound with a black and white back, and with many recipes written in a refined feminine hand on its blank pages.

Rodney remembered this well. It was a real heirloom from the Earles, his mother's people, who had prided themselves on "setting a good table." Rodney sat down on his dusty kit bag and turned over the yellowing pages idly. Some of the recipes were in an even older hand than his mother's—his grandmother's or his maiden aunts' probably—and now and then, in his mother's hand again, there would be a comment written in the margin, "Very choice" or "Extra good" or "Well worth trying." The recipes for these tasty old dishes looked good. Rodney decided to tuck the book in with his own things, a venial theft, and put it by some day for himself and Mary.

They certainly did sound good. "Old Farrington meat pie," "Hannah Earle's gold and silver cake," "Susan Pitcher's everlasting fruit cake." Yes, he would take it. And here was a formula even for soap, and in his mother's hand or his grandmother's, he could not be sure which, was the quaint marginal note: "The cheapest soap in the world. Unlucky for dirt." And so he had pitched the old book into the bag, stolen down the attic stairs again and bounded, dusty kit bag and all, into the little waiting room where Mary sat.

Dear Mary!

And she had let him hug her—the first taste of the bliss to come. How sweet and wonderful she was!

When he woke in the morning he rubbed his eyes a moment in bewilderment at his unaccustomed surroundings. And immediately the memory of Mary Grayson swept over him again, fresh and undimmed. He would call up Mary on the telephone before she got away to the office. And, by the way, he had an idea to tell her too. He was going to make soap, like his father. The old cook book had given him the idea. He left his coffee scarcely tasted and flew to a booth at the club.

"Well, Mary," he shouted through the receiver, which smelt of cigarettes, "did you know I'd lost my job?"

"Yes," said Mary's voice at a distance. "I suppose I shall lose mine, too, if I don't give you up."

"We should be friends in need, then," bawled Rodney at his end.

"Oh, Rodney, I'm so sorry," said Mary.

"Nonsense, you've made my future. Without you I'd never have got the idea—the big idea."

"Idea for what?"

"The idea to make money out of—that's all you need—and, just think, I found it in an old book"—

"What idea—what book?"

"It's a cook book."

"What on earth"—

"Well, you see, when I was packing I stumbled across an old family cook book. It fell open at a certain page—fate was on the job—it was a hunch"—

"But what is it?"

"It's an old family recipe for making cheap soap. It says it's the cheapest soap in the world, cheaper even then the manufacturers make it. I'm going into the soap business."

"What?"

"Sure—father did—look at the money he made. Why shouldn't I?"

"You're joking."

"I'm in dead earnest. I'm going to buck the trust. You see, I'll have all the popular sympathy—independent young son of soap king fights father—don't buy from the trust."

"But is that very nice to your father?"

"Has he been very nice to me? It's great! Down with monopoly! Hurrah for the people! I've heard political speeches like that! Hurrah for the people's soap! That isn't a bad name either—the people's soap!"

"But you haven't any capital."

"I never thought of that."

"You'd need a lot of money too."

"Well," Rodney said, "well, I'll just have to get it, that's all, and you'll be my secretary."

"Rodney, you must stop talking or you'll go stony broke with this long call!" yelled Mary.

"Well, when can I see you again?" Rodney persisted.

"I shall be at the office till 3," said Mary.

"I'll drop in. Father may be home with the gout," Rodney answered.

Rodney hung up the receiver and turned away reluctantly. Mary's voice—wasn't it the most wonderful voice in the world? He took out a cigarette and lit it, finding a quiet seat near the Forty-fourth street window to sit down and think things over.

He armed himself with a newspaper, so that he could occasionally hold it up and ward off unwelcome chatterers who might disturb his train of thought. The armament was not modern enough, however, to repel the attack of the alert young man who presently came and peered over the top of his paper.

"Well, Ambrose Peale," said Rodney, looking up.

"That's me absolutely," said Mr. Peale. "The same at your service. So you remember me, eh?"

The sight of Peale's keen and eager face took Rodney back two years at a jump. The two boys had met one night in the lobby of a Boston theater.

"Well, Mary, did you know I'd lost my job?"

The occasion had been an egg fight, not between Rodney and Ambrose Peale, but between the audience and the stage. It had been a very lively and savory affair indeed, quite efficiently carried through by the college students scattered out in front.

It had been a college play and had seemed to the student observers of it so lacking in verisimilitude that they had set up a counter demonstration in front to show probably what real college life was like. Rodney had not thrown any eggs himself, because he had forgotten to bring any with him, a circumstance which was the saving of him, for it had been noted by Peale, the manager of the piece, and brought him to the rescue. Peale had been very decent to him and kept him out of jail, thereby saving him numerous cuts, unlike the other fellows who had been duly haled before the dean and suspended, besides figuring in the headlines of the Boston papers.

Mr. Peale vowed he had been looking for Rodney for a week, but with no success.

"Very mysterious about you up on the avenue yesterday," he said. "What's up?"

"Just a little family row," said Rodney. "What's your line now?"

"Well, I'm still in the show business," said Peale. "Ever see the 'Belle of Broadway?' Great show, great girls, great cast."

"Oh, are you an actor?" asked Rodney carelessly.

"An actor? I should say not," said Peale scornfully. "I'm a press agent."

"Oh, I see!" said Rodney.

"But say," rattled Peale; "be sure to catch that show. It may leave town soon—out of town bookings, you know—but remember the name, 'Belle of Broadway.' "

"I've heard of it," said Rodney.

"Well, if you'll excuse me, I've been looking for you to talk business with you. Shall I blaze away?" asked Peale.

"Business? Surely, surely," rejoined Rodney, with an inward wink. "I'm a business man now. Blaze away, as you say."

"Well, well," said Peale reminiscently, "I could see at once you weren't an egg thrower, but I wouldn't have blamed you anyhow. It was a rotten show."

"Like the eggs?" put in Rodney, smiling.

"Absolutely," said Peale. "Now, I'm not much on handing myself flowers across the footlights, but do you happen to remember what I did for you?"

"You fixed things up with the chief of police," said Rodney, "and kept me from being expelled."

"And you said any time you could do anything for me"—

"That's still true," said Rodney.

"You're immense, son. Now, it's this way—have a chair—between you and me 'The Belle of Broadway' is an awful thing. Business gone to pot—something's got to be done. That's my business with you."

"With me?" said Rodney.

"You've got an aeroplane, haven't you?" inquired Peale plaintively.

"Yes—but"— began Rodney. "Let's go upstairs then," he added as an afterthought.

He knew Peale of old and that if he got started there was nothing that could hush his voice for other members. In the big room in the Forty-fourth street side upstairs they would be unmolested at this hour of the morning. Peale followed him in a docile manner.

"Then everything's all right," said Peale eagerly. "Now, you abduct the leading lady—Julia Clark—tomorrow night in your aeroplane—elope with her."

"What?"

"Sure! Some stunt too. Never been done. Julia's all for it. She's game for any press gag"—

"But I couldn't do such a thing as that," protested Rodney.

"Certainly you can," said Peale. "I'm telling you Julia 'll stand for it—a bird of a story. Why, you're up in the air with the leading lady. The next night standing room only to catch a look at the girl you're stuck on. I can see the headlines now, 'Soap King's Son Takes New Star Among the Stars With Flashlights.' "

"But it's out of the question," said Rodney. "I wouldn't do it, that's all. I'm not backing down from helping you, but there's some one who might object."

"A girl?" asked Peale acutely.

Rodney nodded.

"I guess it's cold," Peale concluded. "Girls are funny about their beaux doing a little innocent think like eloping with some other girl."

"Why don't you try somebody else?" suggested Rodney.

"I have! You were my last card. Well, I'm fired!" said Peale, with an air of finality.

It was a stunt that would have kept things going, he protested, but now—well, the show was so bad that people wouldn't even go to see it on a pass. They would have to close Saturday, and as for Ambrose Peale, he was out. Rodney did not believe that an obvious faked up lie like that would have done any good, he said. He'd feel very uncomfortable at not being able to oblige an old friend otherwise.

"I know it's advertising," he said, "but"—

"You bet it's advertising," began Peale, warming up. "What made the leading actresses? Advertising."

"But that sort of advertising can't ' of real value," said Rodney negligen '

"Oh, you're one of those wise g who don't believe in advertising, you?" said Peale, expostulating and pounding. "Now, don't get me talk advertising. That's where I liv where I have my town house an country estate, my yachts and motors. That's my home. Maybe you think love is important. Piffle! Advertising, my boy: the power of suggestion, the psychology of print. Some old gink, a professor of psychology, showed forty Vassar girls the other day two samples of satin, one blue, one pink, same grade, same value, same artistic worth. One he described as a delicate warm old rose; the other he called a faded blue. He asked them to choose their favorite. Girls picked the old rose. Why? Because they'd been told it was warm and delicate. No faded blue for theirs. What did it? Power of suggestion—advertising."

"You seem to know something about it," Rodney said aloud.

"An actor? I should say not. I'm a press agent."

"I not only seem to, I do," Peale agreed. "Just before I met you I told a young fellow downstairs that 'The Belle of Broadway' was the biggest hit in town. Ask him to go to the theater, give him his choice and I'll bet you $4 to a fried egg he picks 'The Belle of Broadway.' Advertising!"

"I don't believe it," Rodney protested.

"Well, try it. And, say, what makes you go to the theater yourself? I'll tell you. It's what you've read about the play or what some fellow's told you."

"Why, I suppose that's true," said Rodney, beginning to be convinced a little. "But I never read advertisements."

"Oh, you don't, eh? Say, what kind of garters do you wear?"

"Why, let me see. The ——," said Rodney.

said Peale. "What do bout 'em? Nothing. Are they any better than any other garter? You don't know—I don't know, but all my life every magazine I've ever looked into has had a picture of a man's leg with a certain kind of garter on it, like ——. So when I go into a store to buy a pair of garters I just naturally say ——. So do you. You don't read advertisements? Rot!"

"But"— said Rodney.

"No 'but' about it," answered Peale. "Advertising's responsible for everything. When Bryan advertised grape juice do you know that its sale went up 652 gallons a day?"

"You don't really mean it?"

"I do."

"But 652 gallons. How do you know it was 652?" asked Rodney.

"I'll let you into a little secret," confided Peale. "I don't know a thing about grape juice—and as long as my health and strength keep up I hope I never shall—but if I said I'd read in a newspaper that the sale had gone up 652 gallons you wouldn't have doubted it, would you?"

"No, I suppose I shouldn't," Rodney agreed.

"And you'd have told somebody else, and he'd have believed you too," went on Peale.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Household Hints

CREAM OF TOMATO SOUP.

Material—Milk, one quart; fresh or canned tomatoes, one-half pint; bay leaf, one, large; butter, two tablespoonfuls; mace, one blade, or a stick of celery or leaves; salt, one teaspoonful; sugar, one teaspoonful; soda, one-fourth teaspoonful; parsley, (chopped), one tablespoonful; paprika. Utensils—Double boiler, tablespoon, teaspoon, sieve, soup tureen, saucepan. Directions—Put the tomatoes into saucepan with the bay leaf and mace or celery; cover and simmer slowly fifteen minutes. Put the milk into a double boiler. Rub the butter and flour together, adding a little of the hot milk, until smooth. Pour into the milk, stirring all the while until it thickens. Strain the tomatoes into a soup tureen, add the sugar, soda, paprika, salt and pepper; then pour in the creamy mixture all at once, stirring very gently until well blended. Sprinkle the parsley over the top and serve at once. This soup should never be thick, but of a light creamy consistency. A teaspoonful of whipped cream may be served on top.

RECIPES.

Meat Loaf—Three pounds of cooked veal chopped fine, one cup of cracker crumbs, two eggs, one cup veal broth, one tablespoonful salt, pepper to taste, one tablespoon melted butter. Mix thoroughly, mold into a loaf and bake slowly one hour.

Blackberry Froth—Dissolve two tablespoons of gelatine and one cupful of sugar in a pint of water. Strain; add an equal quantity of blackberry juice, and set aside until it is thick. Whip until a solid froth with an egg beater; stir in the stiffly beaten whites of four eggs and turn it into a mold. Garnish with whole berries. Serve with whipped cream.

Egg Poached in Milk—For each egg allow one tablespoonful of milk. Eggs poached in milk are more delicate and have a nicer taste than when poached in water.

Baked Apple Trifle—Butter a baking dish well throughout, line with toasted bread broken into bits (dry), fill with apples sliced or cut into eighths; cover the top with more bits of toast; dredge with sugar (according to tartness of apples); strew with cinnamon, dot with butter and add a very little hot water. Bake until the apples are well done throughout and the top is brown.

Fried Peaches (served as a vegetable with veal or lamb)—this is a novel and delicious dish. To each person allow two peaches. Pare, cut in two; take a granite pan, put in a generous lump of butter, add your peaches and cook over a slow fire from ten to twenty minutes, according to the hardness of the peaches, turning frequently (the oven may be used for this if it is not too hot). When done, strew with sugar, turn, place on a platter; pour the syrup in the pan over it and serve hot.

Floating Island—Bring to a boil one quart of milk, have whites of two eggs beaten stiff and drop in boiling milk by spoonfuls, cover and let stand one minute. Lift out with perforated spoon. Thicken milk with two level spoonfuls of cornstarch, remove from stove; add eggs yolks well beaten, three-fourths cups sugar and pinch salt, a few drops of almond. In the bottom of a pretty glass dish slice about six ripe island peaches and cover with one-half box burnt marshmellows over this pour custard and put whites on top at intervals, putting one-fourth spoonful of bright jelly on each "floating island."

THE TABLE.

Swedish Rye Bread—Scald two cups rye flour with two teaspoons anise seed and one tablespoon lard. At the same time take one cake compressed yeast, six tablespoons sugar and two cups lukewarm water. Add enough white flour to make batter as for cake, let stand one hour, then mix all together. Add six tablespoons sirup, two teaspoons salt, then knead with white flour; let stand till ready to shape in loaves. When ready to bake wash top with hot water and wash again fifteen minutes before taking out.

For the publication of a prediction that his country would go to war with Germany, a member of the Russian Duma is now on trial. He made his prediction eighteen months before the war began.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

Elsie Janis, star of musical comedy, will appear on the screen of the U. S. Astor Theatre this afternoon and tonight in "Betty In Search of a Thrill." Miss Janis, of course, dominates the actions in this splendid subject, but she is assisted by a capable cast of studio favorites. The film abounds in mirthful situations and will keep even the most blase theatre-goers in almost continuous laughter. Charming Emmy Wehlan will make her photo-dramatic debut in Plainfield tomorrow afternoon in that powerful Metro feature, "When a Woman Loves," now being shown at all the principal theatres in New York. Miss Wehlan, like Miss Janis, is a star of the musical comedy realm, but her work in this subject places her in the front rank of screen tragediennes. The story is one of many tense situations. "The Man Trail" will be the dramatic feature on the Astor screen Monday and Tuesday.

FORMER LOCAL MAN IN TRAGEDY

Woolridge Killed His Wife Then Shot Himself in Head.

FOLLOWING A QUARREL

Victim Formerly Employed at Smalley's Stone Quarry in North Plainfield—Was Well Known in This City.

In a fit of anger, Frank E. Woolridge, a negro formerly employed at the Smalley stone quarry in North Plainfield, shot his wife and then committed suicide at their home, 88 South Fifteenth street, Newark, yesterday. The local police were last night requested to notify the man's brother, George Woolridge, of 523 East Third street, of the trouble, and he was found working at the quarry where his dead brother formerly was employed.

Woolridge and his wife had quarreled through the night, according to Minnie Page, colored, who lives on the first floor of the house in which the Woolridges had the second-floor flat of four rooms.

Terror prevented Miss Page from going upstairs to intercede for the woman, she said. The shooting occurred in a bedroom, the window of which looks out on an open lot. Neighbors aroused by the shots, saw Mrs. Woolridge at this window, her head, shoulders and outstretched arms showing above the ledge.

The Fifth Precinct police were summoned and took Mrs. Woolridge, who was still breathing, to the City Hospital. She died within a short time. Woolridge probably died instantly. He fired two shots into his right ear.

Discounting somewhat the note left by Woolridge as to the cause, were letters that had been exchanged between the man and his wife, and which were found in the chiffonier. Some of the missives were filled with terms of endearment. A sample of the others was one which, after referring to the estrangement in the summer, ended: "That ought not to whappen. If it happens again I'm going to tell you good-bye. You'll never see me any more."

Woolridge's note was simply: "To whom it may concern: Frank Woolridge did this deed because I was wrapped up in debt all the time for the last five years. I have done nothing but pay my money to people."

ROBERT T. HOUK WEDS MISS RUTH MILLIKEN

The marriage of Miss Ruth Milliken, daughter of Foster Milliken, of New York city, to Robert Thurston Houk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Houk, of Dayton, Ohio, took place at noon today, in the chantry of St. Thomas' church, New York city. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Irving McGrew, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires. Miss Anna DeGraff and Miss Katherine Brown, of this city, were bridesmaids. Following the ceremony a small reception was held at the St. Regis, attended by the immediate relatives of the couple.

Miss Milliken is well known in Plainfield, being the niece of Mrs. James W. DeGraff, of 996 Central avenue.

ANTONY SZWEDO'S FUNERAL IS LARGELY ATTENDED

A large attendance of relatives and friends attended the funeral service of Antony Szwedo, husband of Nellie Szwedo, of 205 Liberty street, who met his death on the railroad tracks while picking coal, early Thursday morning, held this morning from the mortuary parlors of J. J. & C. A. Higgins, of West Fourth street, and later from St. Mary's church, where a mass of requiem was celebrated by the Rev. Bernard M. Bogan, pastor of the church. There were many pretty floral set pieces sent by relatives and acquaintances of the unfortunate young man. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

DR. RANDOLPH'S SUBJECT.

The Rev. D. B. F. Randolph, pastor of Monroe chapel, will preach on "The Public Schools and Education," tomorrow, in the morning, and in the evening at 8 o'clock upon the topic, "Spiritual Echoes." The Epworth League meeting will commence at 7:15.

The regular meeting of the Sunday school board of the First Methodist Episcopal church will be held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock in Vincent chapel. As business of importance is to be transacted, a full attendance of the board is desired.

WORK ON SCHOOL BUILDING HELD UP

Union Men Fail to Report on An "Unfair" Job at South Plainfield.

An acute situation in labor circles was avoided today at South Plainfield when non-union men in the employ of D. J. Galbraith, a plumbing contractor of this city, failed to go to work at the South Plainfield school building, where an addition is being built to the main structure.

The Galbraith shop was declared "unfair" at a meeting of the Plumbers' Union, last evening, and the Building Trades Council sanctioned this action. A resolution was passed that if any of Mr. Galbraith's men went to work at the South Plainfield school this morning, where Mr. Galbraith has the plumbing and heating contract, that the other artisians who might be working on the job would be called off.

For the purpose of carrying out this plan, Business Agent William H. Lunger, of the Building Trades Council, went to the South Plainfield school job early this morning prepared to call out every carpenter, painter, mason or other mechanic at work there. Further developments in the matter are being awaited.

GAHAGAN HEARING AGAIN POSTPONED

William A. Coddington Called Into Case at Last Moment in Elizabeth.

On the strength of a plea made by William A. Coddington, of this city, in the Orphans' Court at Elizabeth, yesterday, citing unusual circumstances, Judge James C. Connolly granted another postponement of two weeks to hear the final argument in the estate of William A. Gahagan, the matter appertaining to an accounting filed by the executors. The motion met strenuous opposition from William R. Wilson, of Elizabeth, counsel for the heirs.

When the case was called yesterday afternoon the executors were surprised to find that their attorneys, Judge Irwin and Judge Carey, of Jersey City, were not present, and Judge Coddington, who was in court on other matters, was pressed into service.

The Plainfield attorney made a hurried investigation into the case and found that Judge Irwin had not yet returned from a trip to the Panama Canal. It was explained that the ship on which he sailed for home had been delayed by a landslide in the canal zone and he would probably not arrive before next week. Despite the unusual circumstances surrounding the case Attorney Wilson entered vigorous objection to Mr. Coddington's request for a delay but the court finally decided to put the matter off as suggested by the Plainfielder.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MISS ELLA TRAVERS HELD

The funeral of Miss Ellen Travers, aged sixty-eight years, who died Thursday morning, was held from the residence of her sister, Mrs. Joseph Smith, 15 Wilson avenue, North Plainfield, at 8:30 this morning, and from St. Joseph's church at 9 o'clock, where a solemn high mass of requiem was said by the Rev. Father P. J. Hart, pastor of the church. Father Hart took occasion at the same time to eulogize the Christian life of the woman. Mrs. Alfred Seidel, soloist in the choir of the borough church, sang several selections during the service. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery, the following acting as pallbearers: John Connelley, Charles Zimmerman, Edward Driver, Joseph Flack, James Regan and James Gunning. The floral offerings which adorned the casket were noteworthy, many handsome set pieces coming from relatives and friends of the deceased, who was held in high esteem by all.

WEARS BROAD SMILE.

James A. Stafford, of Newtonville, Mass., formerly of Boston and a one-time resident of this city, was in town this morning calling on friends and was wearing a broad smile as he is now a father of a girl born last Sunday. His wife, Miss May Sebring, was also a former Plainfielder.

MRS. FUNK TO BE SUFFRAGE SPEAKER

Well Known Chicago Woman Will Address Gathering Here Tonight.

Mrs. Antoinette Funk, of Chicago, will be one of three speakers at the street meeting at Front street and Madison avenue, tonight, which is conducted under the auspices of the Plainfield branch of the New Jersey Equal Suffrage League. Mrs. Funk, who has been a practicing lawyer for fifteen years in the western city, has been one of the foremost of suffrage workers to bring about the successful campaign in Illinois. She was the counsel for the Chicago Federation of Labor and has made an extensive study of the labor question, thereby being thoroughly conversant with the topic. A lawyer by profession, Mrs. Funk, who has a clear voice, presents her facts in a logical style and holds an audience in rapt attention throughout her address.

Beside, Mrs. Funk, the local suffragists have been fortunate in securing two local clergymen to speak in favor of suffrage. They are the Rev. C. L. Gillespie, pastor of the Grace Methodist church, of North Plainfield, and the Rev. Edward S. Ralston, pastor of the Netherwood Reformed church. Both will tell why they believe in suffrage. The meeting will start promptly at 8:15.

NIELS NIELSON WEDS MISS ELEANOR H. LEE

Nuptials Quietly Celebrated in Grace Baptist Church, Trenton.

The marriage of Miss Eleanor H. Lee, of Edgewood avenue, Trenton, and Niels Nielson, of the same city, but formerly of Plainfield, was solemnized Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock in the Grace Baptist church that place. No invitations were issued for the wedding, as it was very quiet on account of the recent death of the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Rebecca Beatty.

Rev. Charles F. Fields, pastor of the Trenton church, officiated at the ceremony, which was witnessed by the immediate relatives of the bride and groom. Miss Florence Westenburger, a classmate of the bride, played the nuptial music.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Linwood Lawrence Lee, was attired in a gown of white silk and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. Mrs George W. Reynolds, as matron of honor, wore white net over pink satin and carried an arm bouquet of pink asters. Olaf Nielson, of Westfield, a brother of the groom, acted as best man.

Following an extended wedding trip the couple will reside at 911 Edgewood avenue, Trenton. The bride, who is most attractive and accomplished, is well known in the western section of Trenton. Both bride and groom are prominent members of the Grace Baptist church, Miss Lee being a teacher in the Sunday-school. Mr. Nielson is a pharmacist, and is connected with the drug department of the Stuckert drug store. He will be remembered by many Plainfielders at the time he was employed at the Hodge pharmacy, this city.

As a representative of the people of Middlsex county, William A. Coddington, of this city, has appeared before Vice-Chancellor Howell in the Newark Chancery Court and had the sewer injunction case set down for a hearing on December 14, 15 and 16.

This action is brought by the people of the Borough of Middlesex against Plainfield, North Plainfield and Dunellen, the municipalities engaged in the construction of the joint sewer line. It is the object of the complainants to restrain the three towns from locating sewer beds in portions of the borough where they will prove detrimental to property.

FAIL TO MAKE AN ACCOUNTING

Court Orders Neals to Show Cause Why They Should Not Be Prosecuted.

RETURNABLE SEPT. 24

Frank Neal, it is Said, Has Been Exercising Power of Administration of Estate Individually—Daughter Seeks Settlement.

Failure on the part of Mrs. Harriet A. Neal, Frank and W. Edward Neal, executors of the estate of Frank S. Neal, who died in this city about five years ago, to fulfill an order made by Judge James C. Connolly, in the Union County Orphan's Court, on July 30, directing them to file an inventory of the estate, led to a second order being issued yesterday afternoon, compelling them to show cause on Friday, September 24, as to why they should not be prosecuted for contempt of court. The latter action was authorized by Judge Connolly at the request of William A. Coddington, of this city, who is acting as attorney for Mrs. Florence Neal Williams, daughter of the testator, and one of the beneficiaries.

Proceedings in court yesterday indicated that Mrs. Neal and Edward Neal, the latter now being a resident of St. Paul, Minn., were not actively engaged in the management of the estate, and that Frank Neal, of this city, was exercising that power individually.

The original demand for an accounting was made by Judge Coddington, and when the rule was granted, subsequent action followed. Mrs. Williams, at the time of her father's death, was sixteen years old, and when she recently became of age she instituted action to determine what had been done with the bulk of the estate, including her share. Through her attorney, Judge Coddington, Mrs. Williams is endeavoring to get control of what is due her under the terms of the will, and is also trying to find out what has been done with the remainder by the executors.

One of the biggest items in the will was a piece of property located at Central avenue and West Front street. This was sold several years ago for a sum said to be $32,000.

Isaac P. Runyon, of this city, represented Mrs. Neal and Edward Neal, and George W. Anderson, of Somerville, appeared for Frank Neal.

The subject of basketball was broached at last night's session, and for a few minutes it provoked keen enthusiasm. The managers of each baseball outfit stated that they would have teams, and a number of outside interests were also represented.

G. O. P. OF THE BOROUGH PLAN FOR DEMONSTRATION

The Young Men's Republican Club, of North Plainfield, held a meeting last night at 17 Chatham street, and listened to encouraging reports from the workers. It was stated that the canvass of voters in each of the five districts of the borough has shown that a deep interest is being taken in the only contest there will be at the primary—the nomination of a collector.

Plans for a big demonstration next week were talked over and several new members were elected. The evening closed with a smoker at which ice cream and cake were served.

CAPSTICK WILL AID VETERANS OF G. A. R.

Congressman and His Secretary Will Meet Delegates at Washington Office.

With a view to enabling the veterans to get as much enjoyment as possible out of their stay in the national capital, Congressman John H. Capstick, of the Fifth Congressional District, has announced that he will be in his office, room No. 434, Congressional Office Building, Washington, D. C., during the national encampment of G. A. R. veterans, which begins September 27, and that he will be pleased to greet any New Jersey delegates at that time. The local representation will be in charge of Adjutant H. Craig Smith and a special invitation has been extended to them.

It is the object of Congressman Capstick, with the aid of his secretary, John E. Nicol, of this city, to provide escorts for the veterans on sight-seeing trips and to inform them of the manner in which their time might best be spent. Numerous places of interest attract the old soldiers at the Capitol and the Congressman will do what he can toward securing admission courtesies.

Congressman Capstick is particularly interested in the "vets" from the Fifth Congressional District and it is probable that delegates from each post will call upon him.

COUNTY INSPECTOR VISITS THE GARAGES

Investigates Complaints as to Short Measure in Sale of Gasoline.

In response to complaints that the garage proprietors of Plainfield and vicinity were not giving full gallon measure through the gasolene pumps in use at the curbs, Isaac Seeley, county superintendent of weights and measures, accompanied by Augustus W. Schwartz, a former county inspector, now the State superintendent, visited several of the local garages yesterday. In two places it was found that wrong measure was being given, one garage supplying half a pint excess with every gallon, the other one being three pints short.

The tour of the garages was a thorough one, and with the two exceptions noted the inspectors found the garages of Plainfield in good shape. In the two instances where the measure was defective there was something wrong with the mechanism of the pumps. In every garage visited the inspectors warned the proprietors to use care in inspecting their pumps. Gasoline is selling today for 19 cents a gallon retail.

While in the vicinity the inspectors also investigated complaints that some of the farmers who sell in Plainfield were giving short weight. The only ground for complaint found was that in some cases the farmers were selling from baskets holding only six quarts, which is against the law. The measures must contain two, four, eight, sixteen or thirty-two quarts in order to comply with the law.

William A. Codington, of this city, made application in the Orphans' Court, at Elizabeth, yesterday for an order permitting the exceptions filed to the will of Elizabeth Runyon by Mrs. Vandalia Runyon to be withdrawn and to have the Plainfield Trust Company, as executor, discharged from its duties. It was represented by Mr. Coddington to the court that settlements had been made with all parties concerned and mutual releases passed between them.

ENGLAND FACES A REVOLUTION

Labor Will Resist Efforts to Conscript Men for Army.

CABINET MAY RESIGN

Germany Uneasy Over Nearness of Success of Allied Bankers in Securing Billion Dollar Loan From American Bankers.

London, Sept. 18.—England today faces a worse calamity than war. If the threats of conscriptionist ministers are carried out it is authoritatively admitted that there will be a revolution in the country and all the diplomatic resources of the crown and parliament are being brought into play to avert the crisis.

The indications are that if the conscriptionists in the Cabinet, of whom Lloyd George, Curzon and Selborne are believed to be the most active, press for an immediate decision, they will be worsted. Of twenty-two members of the Cabinet, only nine, at most, favor conscription.

Many fear that even if a settlement is effected now, it will only mean a postponement of the crisis for a few weeks, since the determination with which the conscriptionists are pursuing their campaign seems to make a smash of the Cabinet inevitable, sooner or later.

Bomb Fighting in France.

Paris, Sept. 18.—The following was issued by the War Office today:

"Night movements in the sector of Neuville or Roclincourt before Roye and on the plateau of Quenneviers consisted of frequent bombardments by artillery of different calibres. There was a battle with bombs and rifle fire but no engagement of infantry. In Champagne around Perthes and between the Aisne and the Argonne there were very sharp cannonades. There is nothing to report from the rest of the front."

Turks Shell Crimea.

Constantinople, Sept. 18.—Today's war statement says:

"Part of our fleet shelled a lighthouse and a factory on the south coast of Crimea. On the Irak front our volunteers surprised an enemy camp at Kalaatueldjim on the nights of September 12 and September 13. One hundred were killed."

STARLING NUISANCE IS ABATED IN THE BOROUGH

That the starling nuisance in the borough is about over with is now the belief of those residents who have been putting up with it all summer. The shooting was continued last evening, and so effective was it that practically no birds at all were noticed in the trees near Jackson and Watchung avenues this morning. It is feared by some, though, that the birds will locate in another section of the borough where their presence will constitute as much of a nuisance as ever. No such information has been given out, though.

What the President of Princeton says:

"To the Editor of the Princeton Alumni Weekly:

My Dear Sir—I am profoundly convinced that the time has come for the Alumni to consider most seriously the advisability of a general movement to discontinue the free serving of beer in the reunion tents. We must not allow Princeton to fall far behind the conspicious movements of the age in which we live. The spirit of self-restraint and self-control as regards drinking has grown so rapidly both abroad and in this country during the last year that it would be well for us to face the facts as they are and endeavor to create through a free and frank discussion a strong Princeton sentiment on this question. From my own observation and from letters which I have received from true and sincere friends of Princeton since commencement time, I am convinced that the fair name and honor of Princeton are at stake, and that we, as Princeton men, must see clear and think straight on this subject.

This is the company, organized by Reginald de Koven, the composer, for the purpose of restoring the glories of English light opera. The principals were recruited from the grand opera houses of Europe and America, and a revival of "Robin Hood" was made at the New Amsterdam Theatre in New York two seasons ago, where it ran for six months to capacity houses, was then transferred to the Knickerbocker Theatre for another run and subsequently toured the country to enthusiastic welcome. It was Mr. De Koven's intention to make it a permanent organization, consequently most of the original company have been retained and are making their third tour of the country, taking in only the large cities.

Coming to the Plainfield Theatre on Tuesday, September 21, will be the dainty musical comedy success, "The Only Girl," which comes direct from a year's run at the Lyric Theatre, New York, where it was conceded to be the greatest musical comedy hit of the past few years in the big metropolis. It is the work of Victor Herbert and Henry Blossom, who have in the past given us "The Red Mill," "Mlle. Modiste" and operas of that high standard. The production is under the management of its original producer, Joe Weber, who has kept the cast, chorus and orchestra intact since it was seen in New York.

BOY BREAKS LEG IN FOOTBALL PRACTICE

Two Somerville High Players Are Injured in a Collision.

Somerville, Sept. 18.—The first of the football accidents in this section occurred here yesterday afternoon, when Frank Jewett and Jacob Falk, students of the Somerville High School, were injured while at practice. Jewett sutained a fractured leg and Falk was knocked unconscious for some time.

The two young men ran together while playing a "scrub" game. Both were rendered unconscious for more than ten minutes. Falk was not seriously hurt, but was stunned. He will be out in a few days. Jewett's left leg was fractured.

HONORARY ROLL OF MISSIONARY SOCIETY

Five Members of Warren Chapel Organization Attended Every Meeting.

The first fall meeting of the Missionary and Aid Society of Warren chapel was held yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, preceded by an executive meeting at 2 o'clock. Mrs. J. O. McKelvey, president of the society, opened the meeting with devotional exercises, after which the work of the organization for the coming year was taken up. It was decided to sew a box of clothing for the girls' school at Huntsville, Tenn., and the all-day sewing meeting was set for Thursday, October 7, beginning at 9:30. A hot luncheon will be served the women at noon. The first "at home" of the pastor and his wife has been set for Thursday, October 28.

Much interest was manifested in the honorary list, which was read at the meeting, consisting of the names of the members who have not been absent at any meeting of the society during the year. The women who have kept this standard up are Mrs. E. Gibson Smith, Mrs. John Higgins, Mrs. R. O. Stewart, Miss Hattie Taynor and Mrs. J. O. McKelvey. They have been invited to take luncheon with the president, Mrs. McKelvey, on Friday, October 17. The following members have missed but one meeting during the year: Mrs. Henry Bishop, Mrs. William Demarest, Mrs. William Bacon, Mrs. John Johnson and Mrs. Frank Burner. Their names were also placed on the honorary list.

Mrs. James Goodwin, chairman of the home missionary department, read an interesting paper on that topic, while in the absence of Mrs. R. O. Stewart, chairman of the foreign topic, Mrs. McKelvey prepared and read a paper relative to that department. Following the meeting refreshment were served by Mrs. John Higgins and her committee.

JUDGE ROBERT CAREY TO ADDRESS DUTCH ARMS

The members of the Dutch Arms, of Trinity Reformed church, will take up their fall and winter work at the monthly meeting, which will be held Monday night at 7 o'clock. A Dutch dinner will be served at 7:15 o'clock and there will be music by the band for the benefit of their guests.

These will be Judge Robert Carey, of Jersey City, who will make an address, and Assemblyman William N. Runyon. Edgar Sheppard will be master of ceremonies. The seventh annual prospectus of the society has just been issued by President Arthur B. Cole, and shows the organization to be in a flourishing condition.

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

A delightful birthday social was given Birrel and Genevieve Lievers by their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Lievers, of Belmont avenue, early last evening, twelve little playmates of the two attending the affair. Games and singing were the principal features of the gathering, while refreshments were served by the mother of the girls. The two were the recipients of many handsome gifts from their friends. Miss Blanche LaMair, of the borough, assisted Mrs. Lievers in entertaining.

C. E. RAISE $83.01.

The Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church pledged fifty dollars toward the support of Camp Endeavor this summer, and raised $83.01, which they were able to do because of the liberal response met with from members of the society, the Sunday school and friends. The amount raised covered the entire expenses of a week's vacation at the camp for about 33 children, or 8 mothers, 16 children and 8 babies.

A Galley o' Fun!

FEMINA VICTRIX.

In the beginning a man's horse was his dearest possession. It would carry him everywhere, and it started from the seat, without cranking.

But presently he ate something which gave him that feeling of fulness—that is to say, he discovered his stomach and opened up a new way to his heart.

Woman was not slow to sieze the advantage thus offered, and from that day forward she gained steadily in importance, while the horse has lost ground commensurately.

Hence arose the natural enmity between women and horses. Almost the worst you can say about a horse is that it is perfectly safe for a woman to drive.

The Horse-Show exhibits are the last phase of the unequal contest. Here the horse is degraded to the merest pretext and woman is the whole thing.

PLAINFIELD'S TAX RATE TO BE $1.91

Collector W. R. Townsend Officially Announced the Figures Today.

Plainfield's tax rate this year will be $1.91, the same as last year. Such was the definite announcement made by Tax Collector William R. Townsend this morning upon the receipt of certain county data which has been holding up the report for the past week. Despite the fact that there was a decrease of $13,000 in the 1915 budget over the total of last year, this advantage is counteracted by the demand made by the public schools for additional funds, including $6,000 appropriated for the purchase of the lot on which will be erected a school in the east end of the city.

The county tax rate is 0.339 per $100 valuation and the State school tax is 0.259 per $100 valuation. The net ratables for the city total $31,116,652. This is a material increase over the figures of last year. In personal tax, too, Plainfield shows a substantial increase, this year's total being $3,950,250. The entire gain for net ratables in the county this year falls behind that of 1914 over 1913.

EPWORTH LEAGUE HOLD ANNUAL CORN ROAST

The members of the Epworth League, of Grace M. E. church, held their annual corn toast last night on the Nier property, at the end of Johnson's drive. About 100 participated. This was the fifth or sixth affair of the kind given under the auspices of the society.

Sweet corn and sweet potatoes were roasted in a huge bonfire and tasty sausages, fried to a turn, added zest to the feast. While grouped about the fire some of the league members sang, others read to add to the enjoyment of the evening.

In charge of the affair were President J. Russell Harden, of the league; Miss Lillian Breakey, chairman of the social committee; Raymond Miller and Miss Mary Hoagland.

The church is planning to observe "rally day" September 26.

BENEFITS FROM BOOKS.

Traveling Along the Roads That Lead Us Into Other Worlds.

The benefit of literature can hardly be overestimated. Books enlarge a man's horizon. They raise a mirage of water brooks and date palm to travelers in the desert. They are "the sick man's health, the prisoner's release." Shut within a narrow routine of dull necessity, sad at heart in a world where wrong triumphs, where beauty has no assurance of respect, where humanity toils terribly merely for its daily bread or the satisfaction of trivial appetites, the earthly pilgrim need do no more than pick up a book and, lo, he steps into another world.

Here he is free from sorrow and care, free from the burden of his body, from envy, jealousy, contempt, self satisfaction, from vain regrets, from wishes that can never wear the livery of hope, from narrowness of soul and hardness of heart.

He may mingle in the society of the good and great; he may listen to the wise man and the prophet; he may see all the conditions of human happiness and misery; he may watch the human spirit in its strife with circumstances nobly conquer or basely succumb; he may go down through the "gate of a hundred sorrows" or accompany Dante and Beatrice through the spheres of paradise.—Atlantic Monthly.

WOMAN'S LEAGUE WOULD USE VOTES TO ASSAIL POVERTY

"Undeserved poverty is the daily curse of a vast portion of womankind. I propose to show them how to fight poverty with the ballot," says Mrs. Mary Ware Dennett, artist and author.

Mrs. Dennett is leader of a group of suffrage seekers who have an answer to the query: "What are you going to do with it?" They are members of the Women's Henry George League and they look upon suffrage as a means to swing a contingent of new voters to the support of single tax.

"Women's public activity has always dealt with the problems arising out of unequal wealth," says Mrs. Dennett. "Women have been active for mothers' pensions, workingmen's compensation, minimum wage laws, municipal milk depots and the like. They have never been led into what men call 'political questions.' Our proposal is not to treat the symptoms of poverty, but to strike a blow at its root, which we believe is unequal right to the earth."

Associated with Mrs. Dennett are Mrs. Joseph Fels of Philadelphia, honorary chairman; Miss Amy Mali Hicks of New Jersey, secetary, and Miss Mary Boies Ely, treasurer. Miss Hicks is an artist and member of the artist colony at Free Acres, which has single tax as one of its tenets. Miss Ely is founder of the Ely school for girls at Greenwich, Conn. Mrs. Fels is devoting her entire time and a fortune to single tax. Among the men on the co-operating council are Surgeon General Gorgas, Lincoln Steffens, Bishop Charles D. Williams, Frederick C. Howe and Congressman Warren Worth Bailey.

Four states, New York, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, are to vote on suffrage this year, involving the possible enfranchisement of 6,700,000 women. About 4,000,000 now vote in western states. The league is working for suffrage success in the four campaign states and for the spread of their doctrines among women generally.

Miss Hicks has her own reason for her faith. "I am an artist," she says, "and no real art can exist where joy and freedom are strangers. I do not hope to make earth into a heaven, but I do hope that we can eradicate

LONE MAN DECLINED TO VOTE ON SUFFRAGE

New Brunswick, Sept. 18.—Upon a rising vote on suffrage being taken at the Middlesex County W. C. T. U. convention at the First Baptist church, on Thursday, fifty women stood up, and the one man present, Dr. Leslie L. Hand, pastor of the Milltown Methodist church, remained seated. The vote followed a brief address by Mrs. McNab Miller, a suffrage campaigner from Missouri, Mrs. Anna R. Fisher, the county W. C. T. U. president, asking the convention to go on record on the suffrage question.

"What! You are not in favor of giving the women the right to vote?" asked Mrs. Fisher when she noted that Dr. Hand was not voting. "I am surprised, but I am sorry now that I asked for the rising vote." Dr. Hand made no reply.

The county reports showed the organization had 302 members in the county and a balance of $41.41 in the treasury. The following officers were elected, all being re-elections except that of the corresponding secretary in place of Mrs. Jesse Whiting, of this city, who declined: President, Mrs. A. R. Fisher, Sayreville; recording secretary, Mrs. William F. Perrine, Jamesburg; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. E. Curry, Cranbury; treasurer, Mrs. A. A. Mundy, Metuchen.

The county prohibition convention will be held here September 23 at Odd Fellows' Hall.

ANTI-SUFFRAGE

Conducted by New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage.

Spring Lake, Sept. 18.—Mrs. E. Yarde Breese, president of the New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage, made public today, from her summer home at this place, th following letter to Champlain L. Riley, of Plainfield, in answer to his letter of September 1 referring to statements made in regard to the connection of General Dennis F. Collins with the Equal Suffrage League, of Elizabeth, giving as authority for her statements the files of the Elizabeth Daily Journal and the Elizabeth Evening Times.

Mr. Riley had written Mrs. Breese an open letter, which received wide publicity, stating that unless she directed the speakers representing the association of which she is president to cease referring to General Collins, he would be forced to adopt legal measures in gaining his desires.

Champlain L. Riley, President,
N. J. Men's League for Equal Suffrage,
Plainfield, N. J.

Dear Sir—

In reply to your communication of September 1, in which you state that the statements made by the speakers of our association to the effect that General Dennis F. Collins, of Elizabeth, was a vice-president of the New Jersey Men's League for Woman Suffrage, is untrue and made for the purpose of impeaching the integrity of your league, permit me to call your attention to the fact that the New Jersey Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage never makes, through its speakers or otherwise, statements which we have not the proof to substantiate. In this instance I refer you to the Elizabeth Daily Journal, of February 9, 1914, in which the following article appeared under the heading, "Will Aid Equal Suffrage Cause—Collins and Mravlag in Men's League—Meeting to Be Held at Knapp's House."

"Call for a meeting of local men who have expressed their willingness to co-operate with the Men's Equal Suffrage League of New Jersey, has been issued for Friday night at 8 o'clock, at the home of Edgar A. Knapp, 670 North Broad street. Political affiliations evidently do not figure in consideration of the question, as every party has prominent representation in the committee. This is shown by the presence of the names of Mayor Mravlag; General Denis F. Collins, County Clerk Calvert and Mayor Fish, of Roselle Park, upon the roster."

"The call for the conference, as sent forth today by Mr. Knapp, reads as follows: 'Having signified your willingness to serve on a committee to co-operate with the Men's Equal Suffrage League of New Jersey in arranging for a mass meeting in Elizabeth, I am writing to ask you to meet at my house, 670 North Broad street, Elizabeth, on Friday evening, February 13, at 8 o'clock, to confer with the executive committee of the Men's League.

"'It is very important that we have a full attendance, and I earnestly hope you will make every effort to be present.'

"'I enclose a list of gentlemen that have consented to serve with you.'

"Beside these mentioned the following were announced as members of the committee also: R. Barnard Cissell, John L. Gray, Robert S. Huse, C. P. Morrell, W. R. Richart, Randolph P. Harrison, Rev. William B. Hamilton, Roland F. Calhoun, William Jones, Edward Olmstead, John Chetwood Elliott, Shiras Campbell, James O. Kellogg, Jr., L. T. Jones and Rev. Joseph Kyle, Alexander Lyon, James C. Kellog."

Also, in the Elizabeth Daily Journal of February 14, 1914, appeared the following:

"Will Hold Mass Meeting to Aid Suffrage Cause—Plans Made by Men's League to Conduct Votes for Women' Campaign—Notable Speakers Will Be Engaged.

"Sponsored by men prominent in all three of the leading political parties, plans for the holding of a big rally to advance the suffrage cause in this city and county were launched last night at a meeting at the home of Edgar A. Knapp, 670 North Broad treet. A general committee was organized with Judge James C. Connolly, of the Court of Common Pleas, as chairman, and Mayor Mravlag, "General Dennis F. Collins," Robert S. Huse and Edgar A. Knapp as vice-chairmen. * * * Mr. Knapp announced that General Collins had consented to serve on the committee, but his departure for Florida on Thursday prevented him from being present."

In the Elizabeth Evening Times of March 17, 1914, under the heading, "Vote for Women Cause Advanced at Enthusiastic Theatre Rally," appeared the following: "Committee on stage. The special committee in in charge of the rally, many of whom occupied places on the stage, is as follows: Judge James C. Connolly, Mayor Victor Mravlag, Hon. Charles N. Fowler, James C. Calvert, R. Barnard Cissell, John L. Gray, Robert S Huse, C. P. Morrell, W. R. Richart Randolph P. Harrison, Rev. William B. Hamilton, Roland F. Calhoun, all of Elizabeth; Mayor Harwood Fish Roselle Park; and William Jones, Edward Olmstead, John Chetwood Elliott, Shiras Campbell, Rev. Joseph Kyle, Alexander Lyon, James C. Kellogg, L. T. Jones, 'General Dennis F. Collins, etc.'"

The Times states in the same article that "Judge Connolly introduced Champlain L. Riley, of Plainfield, president of the Men's State League for Equal Suffrage, who presided as chairman."

I wish particularly to call your attention to the fact, Mr. Riley, that these newspaper assertions have "never" been denied.

Very truly yours,
GEORGIANNA S. BREESE,
President.

PROGRESS AND PROSPERITY IN PLAINFIELD

MANY BUILDING PLANS ARE FILED

New Era Has Dawned for Material Interests According to Statistics.

AUGUST SHOWED GAIN

During the First Two Weeks in September 510 New Buildings Were Projected in New York Valued at $6,016,948.

New York, Sept. 18.—That a new era has dawned for building material interests seems apparent from building statistics coming in covering the half month of September. The first two weeks of the month showed a total of 9,912 new building plans filed with a total estimated value of $28,996,000. In August, which showed a gain of 13.7 per cent. over any month since August, 1914, the first two weeks showed returns of 8,868 new building projects with an estimated value of $32,901,990. The first two weeks of September showed a total of 510 new buildings projected in New York valued at $6,016,948 as against 433 valued at $6876,583 in the first two weeks of August.

In these figures there will be found a slight retraction in the estimated value of building operations both for the country and for New York, but a sharp improvement in the number of new operations projected is shown. This is held to indicate a brisker movement on the part of building speculators, an element that has not been particularly active in building construction work anywhere outside of the Pacific coast for the last three years.

Cheaper money seems to be the main cause for this improvement. Money is more readily available than it has been in a long time. Banks are even seeking good borrowing accounts by advertisement and by personal solicitation. The Harriman bank and the Bankers Trust Company are two notable cases where advertisements have ben used to solicit credit extension and two banks sent their representatives to the president of a large building commodity concern this week offering to make favorable loans if money was needed.

This freedom of money seems to be most apparent in those lines that are likely most to benefit from exigencies arising from the war. Portland cement, steel, wire products, metal lath, metal ceilings, nails, wire, sheet brass and copper are among the prime factors of progression and they, in turn, are creating better conditions for common brick, fire brick, glass, pig iron, rope, cable, conduits, ship building and factory trades of lumber and oils.

In practically every one of these commodities upward movements of prices are recorded. The latest to move up is the crushed stone department. Prices have been down as low as 60 cents a cubic yard, this year, while quotations at present are between eighty-five and ninety cents and are decidedly stiff at that time. For instance, last week the Public Service Commission opened bids for 243,000 cubic yards of either trap rock or hard lime stone. The bids were found to be of such wide variance that all were rejected and new figures advertised for. When these were opened the upper Hudson Stone Company quoted $228,010 and the Haverstraw Crushed Stone Company made a bid of $250,240. These quotations show approximately a ninety cent level even for large quantities showing that if the present demand continues ordinary market prices for November deliveries will be somewhere around a dollar a yard.

Crushed stone being a component of concrete it is interesting to note the trend of Portland cement prices. New business calling for November delivery is being taken almost universally from the Lehigh district above $1.52 and current business is not near so weak at $1.42 as it was a fortnight ago. In fact the statement was made this week that $1.48 is bottom even as quoted by the small companies.

I beams 3 to 15 inches; channels, 3 to 15 inches; angles, 3 to 6 inches on one or both legs, ¼ inch thick and over, and zees 3 inches and over, are being quoted at $1.35 c. base. The price of pig iron is stiff, one purchaser of 45,500 tons of basic pig iron having paid as high as $17, delivered, in the first quarter, for 10,000 tons and $17.25 for the remainder. Even those prices were below the price some sellers have announced for the first quarter of 1916.

The settlement of the brick laborers' strike at Haverstraw has cleared the tension in that market as far as supply is concerned for the winter. This difficulty served to permit this section to unload a large quantity of 1915 brick and about 60 per cent. of the district's capacity is now being operated mostly for delivery this winter and early next spring. There is a considerable quantity of brick held here in the market on order, but the base price range for this commodity today is $5.75 to $6 for good Hudsons and about $5.50 and $6 for Raritans.

Prospective builders should be advised that current stocks in dealers' hands are being held at prices for immediate acceptance that probably will not prevail. Freight cars are practically all busy and bottoms for hauling supplies to this market by water are extremely scarce. In addition, mills have little or no reserves on hand.

POSTOFFICE WORK IS STILL DELAYED

Government Waiting for Estimate on Changes That Were Ordered.

There is still "nothing doing" around the new postoffice building. Several weeks of idleness have followed the determination of the government to make such alterations in the plans as were suggested after an inspection of them, to provide additional office room. In the interval the necessary changes in the original design have been made, and plans showing these changes are in the hands of the general contractors for estimating.

The delay in getting started on the work again is due to the fact that the general contractors have turned over many parts of the work to various sub-contractors, and the general contractors must receive estimates from these sub-contractors on the changes before they can turn their figures over to Government Inspector Nealy.

Mr. Nealy has already figured the changes, and is in a position to know within a few minutes after opening the bid whether the price demanded is about right, or too high or too low. If the figures correspond with his, he will send the estimate to Washington with a recommendation that it be accepted; otherwise he will recommend its rejection. In the latter case it will be necessary to advertise for bids from other firms.

The stone is arriving slowly and is being carted to the site. As each piece is cut to exact size and for the particular position it will occupy in the building, the task of laying up the walls will go ahead speedily when work is once more resumed. It is expected that the work can be under way again by October 1.

LABORERS CAN FIND WORK IN MIDDLESEX COUNTY

Work cannot be so scarce in Middlesex county, according to Col. Howard G. Gilmour, of the Public Service Corporation. He stated the other day that the company is unable to secure the services of enough men to work on the road improvements they have under way in Middlesex, having a pay roll now showing only 25 per cent. of the number of laborers engaged a year ago. The company is paying higher wages, too, Col. Gilmour said.

The Public Service representative stated that many men are working in the powder mills and other manufacturing plants rushed with war orders, and that thousands of Italians have returned to Italy during the past few months. Col. Gilmour said that his concern is forced to bring men to Middlesex county from other parts of the State to work on the road improvements.

POND MACHINE TOOL CO. TO BUILD AN EXTENSION

Plans are out for an extension to the Pond Works of the Niles-Bement-Pond Company. The extension will be 28x57 feet in dimensions, two stories high, of brick construction, and will adjoin the present draughting room. The first floor will contain space for storage and a vault, while the second floor will be used as a blue print department. The cost will be from $8,000 to $10,000.

MORE SCHOOL IMPROVEMENTS.

Improvements to cost $18,000 are to be made to the New Providence School. Plans are being prepared by J. N. Pierson & Son, of Perth Amboy, the architects for the Harrison Avenue School in the borough.

CONTRACT FILED.

The following contract was put on record at Elizabeth this week: Kline Realty Company with M. Rabinowitz, entire work, new building, Rahway, $1.

Total Cost of Improvements Will Aggregate About $724.

Business was light in the building department this week. Only three permits were issued by Inspector T. O. Doane, and these only totaled $724 in estimated cost. One permit was for a garage to cost $300, which was the largest sum for which a permit was issued. Another was for a building for the storage of junk, while the third permit issued was for an addition to a dwelling. Following are the permits by wards:

Furgerson will do the carpenter work.

THIRD WARD.

A permit was issued to Mrs. John Rafferty, of 22 Sanford avenue, for an addition to the frame house owned by her and situated at 401 Grant avenue, occupied by Dr. John Rafferty. The estimated cost is $259.

FOURTH WARD.

BOROUGH SCHOOL WORK IS HELD UP

Harrison Avenue Building Won't Be Ready for Month at Least.

Work on the Harrison Avenue School, in North Plainfield, is absolutely at a standstill as the result of the business difficulties the Borough Board of Education is having with L. Belluccio & Brother, of Elizabeth, the general contractors, and there is no likelihood of the building being ready for use for a month at least.

As the result of stop notices, etc. no work beyond laying the concrete floor in the first story hall and the toilets has been done since L. Belluccio threw up the contract, but it is hoped that after the meeting of the Board, Monday night, arrangements can be made to finish up everything.

The exterior of the building is pretty well finished, but inside there are doors to hang, plumbing fixtures to set, radiators to place in position and attach, glass to place in the doors opening from class rooms into the halls, besides work for the painters. The steam heating apparatus is in place in the cellar, and consists of two sectional boilers, twins, so arranged that one or both may be used at one time, thus giving the school a boiler for use in case anything happens to one, or permitting the use of only one in very mild weather.

The grounds surrounding the building are not graded, but it may be the plan of the building and grounds committee not to complete this work until spring. Some of the school furniture has arrived and is stored in the building. A representative from the concern furnishing the desks, chairs, etc., was in the borough Friday for the purpose of placing the furniture in position. He could not do that, however, but spent some time in assembling the pieces.

It is expected that a representative of the New England Casualty Company, the concern which bonded the contractors, will be present at the Board meeting Monday night and that Borough Counsel Isaac P. Runyon will have matters straightened out by that time so that the sub-contractors can go ahead with their work and be assured that no turn of affairs will hold up their pay.

JAMES HURLEY, JR., ERECTS ANOTHER NEW DWELLING

James Hurley, Jr., of Belmont avenue, is building another house on Hurley place, North Plainfield, the seventh he has built on that street. The new house is ready for the lathers and will be finished in time for fall occupancy.

In dimensions it will be 24x32 feet, two stories high, for one family, and will cost about $3,000. It will contain all modern improvements.

SEVERAL RENTALS IN DUNELLEN ARE REPORTED

A few of the rentals in Dunellen made recently are as follows:

The house of the Watchung Investment Company, on North avenue, once known as the Fenner house, situated next to the Dunellen Theatre, has been rented to Stewart Corkell and family, who have been residing on Madison avenue, south, since moving to Dunellen from the River road, Piscataway. They took possession on September 20.

Lester Nelson, of New Market, has rented the new bungalow of J. L. McDonough, on Columbia street, and moved in there last Thursday.

John Vanderwahl has rented one of the houses of William Titus on Levgar street.

MALTBY ESTATE SOLD TO ARLAND J. RIDENOUR

The E. C. Maltby estate on Plainfield avenue has been sold to Orland J. Ridenour, of Great Neck, Long Island, who will make extensive improvements to the place and occupy it as a residence. The sale was made through a New York broker, and the price paid was $30,000.

The estate comprises fifteen acres and on it are a large residence and a complete set of outbuildings. The property is now in charge of a caretaker, but as soon as the improvements are completed Mr. Ridenour will occupy it.

The new owner is a New York publisher and is reputed to be very wealthy. The Maltby estate is one of the fine old places of Plainfield.

BURNING OF LEAVES IS DETRIMENT TO HEALTH

The season of the year when it is customary in Plainfield to burn the dead leaves in the streets is at hand and it is supposed that the practice will be followed this fall as it has been in the past.

The city ordinance regulating this matter should be revised, say objectors to the practice, and the burning of leaves should be made unlawful. The present ordinance stipulates when and where leaves may be burned, specifying the time before 12 o'clock in the morning. Persons who dislike the practice say that it should be unlawful to burn them at all. Not only is there the danger of fire, they say, but the smoked filled atmosphere is a source of annoyance to many people.

It is related that a New York man was deterred from locating in this city permanently because the smoke-filled atmosphere last fall, during the leaf burning period, irritated his nasal passages or those of some members of his family, and upon passing the city up as a place of abode he declared that the practice of burning the leaves here every fall was all he had against the place as a home town.

WILLIAM A. CODDINGTON BUYS BOUND BROOK LAND

In Middlesex county Wednesday William A. Coddington, of this city, was the purchaser of a number of building lots at Beechwood Heights, Bound Brook, at a sale held in the sheriff's office. He has not as yet determined what disposition he will make of the land.

The purchase price, $1,000, is considered an unusually low figure. The lots are located on improved streets and are ideally centered for residential purposes.

ACQUIRES PROPERTY.

William A. Codington, of this city, purchased the Herman Frederich property in Piscataway township at sheriff sale this week. The property has been in litigation in the Court of Chancery and W. Stout and others were complainants. The decree and costs amounted to $1,923.56.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

Among the hardest things to find in Plainfield are door numbers. Many of them are hidden behind a screen door or painted over the color of the house, making it necessary for any one looking for a number to ring door bells, thus putting the occupants of houses to unnecessary trouble.

House numbers should be placed where they could be seen night or day. This could be done by painting the numbers on the houses a different color from the background upon which they are placed, or if the numbers were painted on the glass transome over the front doors. Is there not an ordinance covering this matter If not, why not?

Thanking you for the space in your valuable paper,

Respectfully,
U. B. CRANE.

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

I wish to correct the statement in the news item of today's Press that I was arrested and severely reprimanded for stopping my automobile too near a fire hydrant.

Officer Fritts did not arrest me, but only politely told me to appear before the magistrate in the morning. It is putting it altogether too mildly to say that I was reprimanded by the judge. I was not reprimanded. I was most outrageously browbeaten and insulted in most ungrammatical language.

I tried to explain to the judge that I fully understood the law and did not dispute the officer's word, but I was told to "shut up" and to "go hire a lawyer and plead guilty," for all he, Judge DeMeza, cared.

I also tried to explain that I had first stopped my car the required distance from the hydrant, which I had not observed, when a horse cart ahead of me started to back into me, and I then backed my car a few feet into the forbiden area. I was again told by DeMeza to "shut up" until he "got through," and when he did get through he simply walked out of the little court room and yelled back at me, "Just because you live in Netherwood you needn't think you are better than anyone else." It then appeared that my only offense was my living in Netherwood, where, perhaps, my vote does not count.

I fully appreciate that Judge DeMeza has shown rare judgment and ability in dealing with the colored people, who furnish most of the cases brought before him. In settling family rows among the colored population he has shown an insight into the African mind that is truly wonderful, but his ability seems to have been developed all in one line, and he does not seem to know how to talk to a white man who may be so unfortunate as to be forced to appear in his dingy little courtroom.

It is certainly outrageous that a self-respecting, law-abiding citizen, who for the first time since the new law was passed, may absent-mindedly stop his car near an unmarked and hardly noticeable hydrant, should be dragged before a police judge, and, without being given the least opportunity to explain, be subjected to insult and abuse as though he were but a low criminal driver of a garbage cart.

How long will the citizens of Plainfield stand for this sort of thing?

Respectfully,
S. W. RUSHMORE.

ENDEAVORERS ARRANGE SIGHTSEEING TOUR

Delegates to State Convention Will Be Given Automobile Ride.

The route which will be taken by the automobiles in the sightseeing tour that has been arranged for out-of-the-county delegates to the approaching State Christian Endeavor convention has been arranged by the hospitality committee.

Already a number of well-known men of Elizabeth have signified their willingness to lend their cars for the use of the committee for this trip. Elizabeth and Union county abound in places of historic interest, and it is believed that many of the delegates will wish to see some of the places of which they have read.

About 100 automobiles, some of which will be decorated in the orange and black that are the State union colors, will be in line. The cars will start from the convention church at 5 o'clock on Thursday, October 7, the second day of the convention. The cars will go up Morris avenue as far as the Kean residence, formerly Liberty Hall, will go from there to Connecticut Farms and see the old church and the famous bridge, the procession encircling the square.

The Presbyterian church at Springfield will be visited, and in turn the autoists will pass through Fanwood, Scotch Plains, Westfield, Roselle and Rahway, in each of which there are places of much interest.

Returning to Elizabeth by way of Rahway avenue, a halt will be made at the First Presbyterian church, and the guests and their hosts will then go down Elizabeth avenue as far as Catherine street, affording opportunity to see some of the old houses rich in historical value.

The autos will go through Catherine street to East Jersey, and up East Jersey street to Scott Park, Elizabeth, where a short song service, including patriotic airs, will be held.

The hospitality committee will be greatly assisted by the Boy Scouts of the Central Baptist church, Elizabeth. The two troops, Nos. 12 and 24, have tendered their services, and it is probable that the Scouts of the Second and Third Presbyterian churches will also assist.

"THE BOY FATHER OF THE MAN."

The problem of the respective rights of capital and labor is being brought to the attention of thinking people with increasing seriousness almost every day. For the past week not a day has passed without the papers telling of paid agitators going from city to city with the sole purpose of kindling the flame of class hatred and industrial warfare in the hearts of laboring people; of thousands laying aside the tools of productive labor to force their employers to grant them their demands, some of which are just and others unjust; and of violence, riot and even bloodshed in the attempts of strikers to prevent "scabs" from being employed in their places.

All sorts of panaceas are confidently urged by enthusiasts to solve this problem, from syndicalism and state socialism to the absolute prohibition of labor organizations, and yet the solution seems further off than ever.

The Young Men's Christian Associations are endeavoring to attack the problem from an entirely different angle. Admitting that there is much of truth in the statement "as go the colleges so goes the nation," association leaders feel that the future of the industrial world rests very largely in the hands, not of the boys who are in college preparing for positions of influence and leadership, but of the apprentice boys, errand boys, wagon boys, boys in "dead end" jobs and boys in all sorts of factory work who are starting out poorly equipped educationally and physically in the great battle of industry. From among these boys will rise up the future labor leaders, and the great mass of them will be swayed and swept on to higher planes of living or to lower ones, by the irresistable personalities of these leaders.

The opportunity to mould the character of these future leaders is ours today. Given proper training now they will become a power for social righteousness and economic justice; left to their own devices they may become saturated with the doctrines of lawlessness and sabotage that they hear advocated by the man working at the next bench, and the idealism that burns like a spark in the breast of every young man may flame forth in a blaze of destruction.

Under Y. M. C. A. auspices clubs of boys who may never attend the activities of the association are formed into clubs, meeting often during the noon hour in the shop or store where they work.

Such clubs have seven objectives in view:—

1. To guide employed boys into useful and successful careers.
2. To provide good times, recreation that re-creates.
3. To secure recognition that physical vigor is the basis of success.
4. To give these working boys a sense of brotherhood with all men.
5. To create and satisfy a desire for education as equipment for success and enjoyment of life.
6. To train them in religious development as equipment for success and enjoyment of life.
7. To reveal the value of the natural social groups, particularly the family, its relationship and idealism and its influences on the life of the individual boy.

Philips Brooks once said: "He who helps a boy become a strong and good man renders a contribution of the first order to the welfare of society," and surely the school or church or association that helps a boy become a valuable citizen, who might otherwise become an undesirable one, is rendering such a service and is helping in no small way in the solving of the greatest problem of the day.

CAPTAIN E. W. EBERLE IN CHARGE OF ACADEMY

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 18 – Capt. E. W. Eberle, recently commandant of the Navy Yard at Washington, will on Monday take office as superintendent of the U. S. Naval Academy. He relieves Rear Admiral William F. Fullam, who is assigned to the command of the Pacific Reserve Fleet. The change at Annapolis has come about through the recent examination scandal at the Academy. Admiral Fullam had recommended the dismissal of seven midshipmen for irregularities in examinations, but a later investigation ordered by the Washington authorities recommended the dismissal of only two of the accused middies. Admiral Fullam, in leaving the Academy, has expressed pleasure in being relieved of the burden of political string-pulling. He aroused the enmity of several congressmen who were interested in the accused cadets, and has declared himself as weary of political influence. He is quoted as having said he would rather go to sea in command of a collier than remain in Annapolis if his recommendations were disregarded. Captain Eberle, the new superintendent, is a native of Texas, and was brought up at Fort Smith, Ark. He taught international law and English here for two years in the nineties. He was on the Oregon when she made her famous trip around the Horn to join in the battle of Santiago. He has had several important commands since then, and was commandant of the Washington Navy Yard up to his present appointment. Capt. Eberle will have a brand new faculty at the Academy, a general reorganization of the teaching staff having been brought about this fall. The heads of nearly all departments were detached for duty elsewhere.

Beginning Monday pupils will be allowed to register in special classes in which elective subjects are taken.

Gymnastic classes will be resumed next week, the boys registering on Monday and the girls, Tuesday. Students, with the exception of seniors, must take this subject.

The swimming pool will be reopened Monday. From 2 to 3 in the afternoon, High School boys will be allowed to take a dip, while from 3 to 4 boys of other schools may take a swim. From 4 to 5 candidates for the P. H. S. swimming team will practice.

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

The Appendix At Present

FASHIONS change from year to year in every line of human activity. Medicine and surgery are no exceptions. The appendix vermiformis at present is not in such bad odor as it was a decade ago. Surgeons are actually refraining from removing it in some cases of appendicitis.

It is abhorrent to our sense of decency to inflict statistics upon the anxious reader. And this is no subject for such figures, for, although the appendix is in better odor it is just as treacherous as it ever was in the palmiest days of fashionable appendicectomy. The motive of this philippic is simply to show that the pendulum is swinging back from the advanced position of immediate operation in every case diagnosed as appendicitis, to a more consistent position of watchful waiting.

Beyond the shadow of a doubt many unnecessary fatalities are caused by appendicitis without operation. At the same time hundreds of cases of acute appendicitis terminate in recovery without surgical intervention. But who is to say in advance whether a given case will pull through without a hypodermic of sterile steel at the right moment? Surely not the victim of the illness. As surely not the old fogy "yarb" doctor who doesn't believe in germs, surgery and such new-fangled things. Only a thoroughly trained physician or surgeon, or both, could be trusted to make this vital decision—that is, if it were our precious appendix at stake.

Under absolute rest in bed—and absolute rest means a trained nurse to do every little thing except breathe for you—and physiological splints for the alimentary canal—which means nothing taken into the stomach to start up peristaltic movement—for the first forty-eight hours, the average first attack of appendicitis is relieved. After recovery, if there is any reason to believe that the appendix has been damaged, or if any symptoms whatever remain, then is the ideal time to have a safe interval operation as a sort of life insurance against a second and always more dangerous attack. But this "interval operation" is a deplorably inadequate excuse to use for refusing to be speared when the doctor in attendance advises you to be opened, for a bad case may not reach an interval.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

When Castor Oil Is Anathema

Mrs. H. J. W., a woman of firm convictions, writes: You are not an advocate of castor oil as a cathartic, I believe. Nevertheless we have warded off appendicitis by its prompt use on more than one occasion in our household.

Answer—If there is one occasion when this crude inheritance is anathema it is when there is suspicion or fear of acute appendicitis. Castor oil administered under such circumstances without the advice of a doctor has been the straw that turned the scales against recovery many a time and oft.

Explaining How It Was

How was it, inquires another woman of mature age, that we never heard of appendicitis when we were young? Did the doctors discover the disease to take the place of "colds"?

Answer — Inflammation of the bowels laid under the green sod the poor wretch with appendicitis in the days before surgery. Now it is the fashion to get in and remove the festering appendix before the inflammation spreads all through the abdominal cavity and produces fatal peritonitis (inflammation of the bowels). As for "colds," show us a doctor who is content with such a diagnosis to-day and we'll show you some one who is taking life easy.

WILD OATS

THERE are two kinds of agriculturalists. One kind sows tame oats in the country fields and the other sows wild oats on the Great White Ways.

Tame oats are sown in the spring, but wild oats are sown all the year round. Tame oats are sown between daybreak and sunset, but the most successful wild oat agriculturalists start putting in the crop about midnight and ride home with the milkman in the morning. Tame oats will not grow without rain, but if there is anything that isn't necessary in raising a crop of wild oats it is water—except in minute quantities as a chaser.

The young man who has a large quantity of wild oats to put in usually dresses for the job very carefully. He wears all the clothes his tailor will trust him for. And yet sowing wild oats is infinitely harder on clothes than the other job. Night after night, the sower will come home with his plug hat mashed down over his ears and one tail of his dress coat unaccounted for. This proves that the wild oats farmer is a fool. He should swathe himself in blue overalls and wear a two-acre straw-hat which does not soil easily. People would send for the insanity commission if a farmer were discovered putting in tame oats in a plug hat and Prince Albert. But said plug hat would last seven years longer in a tame oats field than it usually does in the wild oats business.

The bona fide farmer puts in all his oats in a few days, but the happy young man with the soft pompadour hair and the pellet of gray matter under his left ear sows wild oats with industry for as much as ten years at a time, frequently working twenty-four hours a day at the job. Wild oats were formerly sown by hand, but machinery is getting into the field of course and at present most of them are sown by automobile. An earnest toiler in a fast automobile with a few assistants can sow enough wild oats in one evening to reap about four decades of unavailing regrets spotted with divorce suits, personal injury damages and red-nosed gloom.

Wild oats were formerly sown by hand, but machinery is getting into the field of course

The cost of sowing wild oats depends on the sower. It usually takes all he has and the crop can't be marketed for seven cents. Still the wild oats sower is very scornful of th plain and freckled farmer and laughs loudly at his foolishness in sticking to the unilluminated style of agriculture. It is quite safe to do anything at which the wild oats sower laughs loudly.

Clouds

Your time won't be wasted in studying the Clouds. For, haven't you ever realized that there are other places than books from which you may learn? In fact, where did the people get their ideas and knowledge first?

The source of all knowledge is in Nature.

It's good to get acquainted with the Clouds. At times, you will be able to see the inimitable castles around which your imagination may trot and play. And then there will be times when the massive canopies of the Clouds are bound to blot out all the fanciful and suggest solely the sturdy and the serious. And then, at other times, perhaps in just a few moments of change, there will be the silver and the crimson and the golden and the purple—a veritable magic of colors suggesting all the Optimism and Hope and Aspiration possible to a human heart.

What a changing Library of Knowledge are the Clouds!

Here is something else that the Clouds suggest. Not a Cloud ever remains long in the same place. And never has there been two Clouds the same. In fact, the glory of the Clouds, their fascination and their usefulness as brain stimulators, lie almost wholly in their variety—their changeability.

But, as you glory in the beauty of the Clouds, do not forget what they do, how they sprinkle the earth and freshen it, and how they make it possible for you to live from the harvests of the fields. Remember how in snow they formulate the myriads of intricate crystals, more marvelous than the human hand has ever been able to fashion, and do not forget how at times they shield the burning sun, thus protecting millions of lives at critical periods.

But these few sentences are just suggestions. As you go and as you come, look into the heart of the Clouds and do honor to them.

What's The Use

What's the use a-gettin' blue
When there's nothing ailin' you,
When your appetite's O. K.,
And you get three squares a day,
When your job is cinched for fair,
And your pay is always there,
And your family's eatin' too,
What's the use a-gettin' blue?

What's the use a-gettin' blue
When the sky's a somber hue?
It wont always be that way,
Surely will clear off some day.
If your neighbor has more cash,
And dines on expensive hash,
It may be he envies you.
What's the use a-gettin' blue?

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How the Dog Finally Got His Bone.

"And so the poor dog got none!"

"KIDDIES," said daddy, with a smile, "you have both heard that—

"'Old Mother Hubbard, she went to the cupboard
To get her poor dog a bone.
And when she got there the cupboard was bare,
And so the poor dog got none.'"

"But the bedtime story, daddy. I thought you were going to tell us one."

"And so I am, sonny," replied daddy. "I am going to tell you how that poor little doggie finally got his bone.

"Well, when Old Mother Hubbard couldn't find a bone in her cupboard for that poor dog the dog felt very bad indeed, and not only for himself, for he was a very unselfish dog. The dog, you know, children, is man's best friend, and he is also the best friend of women and children. And this dog felt very badly because he knew that, if there wasn't a bone for him, then his good mistress had nothing for herself either.

"So this dog that belonged to Old Mother Hubbard went out on the street to think about it. He felt pretty well starved, you may be sure, and his bones seemed to be sticking right out of his tummy, he was so hungry. But he knew that his good old mistress was very hungry too. He couldn't go to the store and order articles of food or to the butcher shop to buy meat, for nobody could trust a dog to do marketing. And if Old Mother Hubbard hadn't any credit at the stores or the butcher shop how could her dog have?

"So this dog went out on the main town street and sat down on the curb and scratched his chin with his hind paw and thought about his problem. He simply must procure a meal for his dear mistress, and if there was anything left he would have it.

"So he trotted down the walk till he came to a butcher shop which his mistress had visited when she had more money, and he sat down and looked wistfully at the meat which hung from big hooks inside. And the butcher thought he wanted to steal it, and so he drove him away.

"But the little dog was not to be discouraged, and he came back and sat there again. And again he was driven away, and again he returned.

"And then the butcher man looked at him more closely and said: 'Why, that is Mother Hubbard's dog. He must be hungry, and, if so, Mother Hubbard must be hungry too. She has grown poor, I'm told.'

"So he sent a boy to Mother Hubbard's with a package of meat, in which there was a bone. So that is how the poor dog finally got his bone."

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"It's your turn this evening, Doctor," said Dick, coming in with an armful of brushwood after supper.

"All in good time, my boy."

When they had all gathered about the camp fire, strewn on the grass and in hammocks, the doctor was observed slipping toward his tent.

"It takes a lot of nerve to wait around and arouse expectation like this," Parsons called after him.

They were just calling for a ghost story when there came out into the firelight a most hideous, bent old woman in torn and faded blue calico, with a red flannel petticoat hanging in waves on the ground about her feet. From under her black poke bonnet a huge wrinkled nose protruded, and when she grinned broadly upon them they could see that half her teeth were gone.

"How dreadful," whispered Jo and Nell, looking at each other. They knew it must be part of the stunt, but the creature was so appalling with her toothless smile and bent back, and the change had been lightning-quick.

"Pretty ladies want to have their fortunes told?" the hag said in a cracked whine. "You"—turning to Nell—"will lose the great fortune from abroad; you"—to Jo—"within a year will go about this country smashing windows and shrieking for votes for women; you"—to Olive—"will grow older and older with the years, and your sharp temper will become bitterer and bitterer till you come to look like me; and your bloodthirsty hound"—the Scotts' Spitz was yapping and snarling during the whole performance—"will suck out a woman's blood, and the dog will die of the poison."

Then suddenly the fortune teller set off whirling about and about the company, stepping daintily and pirouetting on her toes in a hesitation waltz, with an astonishing variety of kick-steps between whiles.

"That appears to be a combination of a hornpipe and a maxixe," commented Dick, laughing heartily. "Where on earth did he get that rig?"

"The face is what interests me; it makes me shudder—and the teeth," added Jo.

"Hey, there!" called out Parsons, "the dog wants to dance with you."

The Spitz had indeed broken from Mrs. Scott's arms and was rushing and snarling about the dancer.

"O catch him!" cried Mrs. Scott in distress. "He'll really hurt him."

No one knew which she meant would hurt whom, for the doctor's dance steps had become more vigorous and he was kicking out manfully enough.

Dick ran for the water pail, and the other men grabbed sticks. The little dog had become thoroughly entangled in the doctor's draperies and was holding on well.

"Don't hit him with those sticks, Scott," called Dick. "I'll fix him with this." He came close and aimed the water squarely into the dog's face. The little animal rolled over gasping.

The doctor was tearing off his draperies and swearing under his breath.

"Oh, did he really hurt you?" asked Mrs. Scott. "You naughty Gypie!"

"Nothing much but the draperies," said the doctor as he examined his wounds. "But if you'll hunt out that carbolic, Olive, I'll go in the tent and give my calf a drink of it. Truly, Mrs. Scott, it's nothing."

"Talk about prophecy!" said Parsons wickedly after the excitement had cooled a little. "It remains only to know the fate of the dog, and then we shall be sure that all he said is unmistakably true."

CHAPTER VI.

Chasing Capital.

"WHAT kind of eggs do you eat?" Peale asked Rodney.

"Why, hen's eggs, of course," Rodney laughed.

"Did you ever eat a duck egg?" asked Peale.

"Why, no," said Rodney. "At any rate, not often."

"Do you know anything against the duck?"

"No."

"Exactly. When a duck lays an egg it's a —— fool and keeps quiet about it but when a hen does, my boy—cluck, cluck, all over the place. Advertising! So you eat hen's eggs."

"You're beginning to convince me," laughed Rodney. He was beginning to get excited.

"You really believe that with proper advertising you could build up a great business?" he asked.

"Believe! Look around you. Everything's doing it," declared Peale.

"Do you want to work for me?"

"Sure! Now."

"What's your salary?" asked Rodney, the new business man.

"I've been getting $60, but I'm worth $75," said Peale quickly.

"I'll give you $100," Rodney told him.

"What's your business—counterfeiting?" asked Peale skeptically.

"No, it's"— began Rodney.

"Don't tell me," Peale interrupted. "As long as it doesn't send me to state prison or the chair it's all right. Could I have about $25 advance on salary now?"

"Oh, all right," said Rodney, handing him the money.

"Just as an evidence of good faith," Peale explained, counting the crisp bills. "Well, now, I'm working for you. What business are you in?" he began again.

"The soap business," said Rodney boldly.

"Nice clean business. With father?" asked Peale, grinning.

"Against him," explained Rodney.

"Oh!" said Peale.

Rodney reminded him that he and his father had had a quarrel, and Peale agreed very sympathetically that fathers were very unreasonable these days.

Finally Peale commented, "Do you know why your father is the soap king?"

"I suppose because he controls all the soap business in the country except one," said Rodney.

"Exactly, and the way he keeps control of it is by buying out all his live competitors. And now here's a blue ribbon champion of the world scheme. Why don't we make good and sell out to father?"

"No; I don't care to do that. I want to make good myself," said Rodney.

"Well, if father is forced to buy you out, isn't that enough? What do you want?" asked Peale.

"I've got to be a success myself. I've got to show father and—Miss Grayson," explained Rodney. He went on further:

"You see father says I can't earn $5 a week."

"He isn't right, is he?" queried Peale.

"No, sir; you'll see," Rodney answered proudly.

"I hope so," said Peale dryly. "At that it's a pretty tough job selling soap if father's against us."

"I suppose it is," Rodney agreed.

When poor Rodney trotted out the story of the cookbook Peale wanted to know if he was "kidding him," but grew less skeptical when he heard all there was to hear about the cheapest soap in the world. It was a good line, he said, the cheapest soap. How could they use it? he inquired, pausing and thinking deeply, while Rodney was lost in business meditation too.

Suddenly Rodney called out:

"Peale, I've got an entirely different idea."

"Well, don't be selfish. Share it with me," said his partner.

"Why do the people jam the cabarets where they only serve champagne," began Rodney excitedly. "Why do they crowd the restaurants where they put up a rope to keep you out? Why do they sit in the sixteenth row in the orchestra when they could have the third row in the balcony? Why do they buy imported clothes? Why do they ride in French automobiles? Because they're better? No; because they're expensive—because they cost more money. So all the sheep think they ought to be better. My boy, listen—'the most expensive soap in the world.'"

"My boy, I could kiss you!" cried Peale delightedly. "A pupil after my own heart—50 cents a cake!" cried Peale.

"A dollar, and we'll make it a warm, delicate old rose," sang Rodney.

"Each cake in a separate box, with a paper rose on the lid," said Peale. "But what shall we call it?"

"Old rose," suggested Rodney after a moment.

"Rotten—doesn't mean anything," rejected Peale.

"Let's think," said Rodney.

"I am thinking. I never stop," said Peale.

"The soap that made Pittsburgh clean," said Rodney.

"Too long. You need something catchy."

"I had an idea awhile ago," said Rodney—"the People's Soap."

"Not if you're going to catch the rich boobs," said Peale.

Then suddenly Rodney remembered the legend in the old cookbook and cried out:

"Wait, wait! Listen! Listen close! The 13 Soap. Unlucky for Dirt."

"Son," said Peale joyously, "it's all over. The old man'll be on his knees in a month."

"We open the office Monday," Rodney sang out.

"You see father says I can't earn $5 a week."

"Where's the office?" Peale inquired.

"Let's get one," said Rodney.

"With furniture and everything," said Peale, "and, say, you'd better call up your tailor and order a couple of business suits."

After this manner began the business of the great 13 Soap Company, which was to bring the Soap King Cyrus Martin to his knees and make Rodney a rich man in his own right so he could marry Mary Grayson.

The office of the soap company was opened with Mary working for the concern.

From time to time an undersecretary or subtypewriter stuck her head through the door and announced some one. This young person opened the door now suddenly and announced with mingled glee and curiosity:

"The Countess de Bowreen!"

Money, when you are chasing it up in the form of capital, is a real will o' the wisp. Now you see it within your grasp, and again your gaze is quite blank. None of the three conspirators in the room realized what was to come of the French and titled lady's interruption and only looked upon her as an inconvenient bore, to be disposed of as best could be.

"Oh, that dreadful woman again," sighed Mary.

The countess entered and came over to Rodney at once, speaking to him in French:

"Vousetes Monsieur Martin?" she cooed.

Rodney nodded.

"Ah, cher Monsieur Martin—Je suis enchantee de vous voir."

"The dame's loony," said Peale in an aside to Mary.

"No; she's French," said Mary. "She wanted to see your father, and she doesn't speak English. I saw her up at the house."

"Well, let her talk to me," Rodney announced, remembering that he had taken a course in elementary French at Harvard.

"Say, can you speak French?" asked Peale, surprised and impressed by his new partner's accomplishments.

"Not very well, but I can understand it," said Rodney. Then, going over to the countess, he said blankly in English, "Fire ahead."

"Eh?" said the countess.

"Let me see. Oh, yes—parlez," stuttered Rodney.

"Ah, mon Dieu—enfin—vous—comprenez Francais?" began the countess delightedly.

"Oui," said Rodney.

"You're immense, kid," put in Peale.

The one French word was enough to start up the countess at her best gait.

"Je suis Madame la Comtesse de Beaurien—je desire parler a Monsieur Martin apropos des affaires du savon. Je voudrais obtenir l'agence du savon Martin pour la France," she rattled off in one breath.

"Wait a minute—wait a minute," said Rodney.

"What did she say?" asked Mary.

"She's a speedy spieler, all right," said Peale.

"Would you mind saying that over, and say it slow?" asked Rodney of the countess.

"Eh?" said that lady again.

"Oh, repetez ca s'il vous plait—lentement," stumbled Rodney.

"Je suis Madame la Comtesse de Beaurien—je desire obtenir l'agence du savon Martin pour la France—le peux donner cinquante mille francs pour cette agence."

"Oui," said Rodney, quite pleased with himself, upon which the countess was off again:

"Et enfin—voulez vous arranger cette affaire pour moi? J'ai beaucoup de references. Je suis riche; je suis bien connue a Paris."

"Wait a minute—wait a minute," protested Rodney. Then, turning to Peale, he interrupted plausibly:

"She wants the agency for father's soap for France and is willing to pay 50,000 francs for the concession."

"How much is that in real money?" asked Peale quickly.

"Ten thousand dollars," said Rodney.

"Had I better tell your father?" asked Mary. But Rodney had an inspiration.

"No, no! Why not keep father out of this? We'll sell her the agency for the 13 Soap. That'd be another ten thousand for us. Peale, she's a gift from the gods!"

"Go to it," said Peale, elated.

"But how can you sell her your agency?" objected the prudent Mary.

"I don't know. How can I?" wondered Rodney.

"If only Marie were here to interpret for us!" sighed Mary.

The three partners looked at each other helplessly. They felt as if there were something hovering around that ought not to be allowed to get away, and yet it still eluded them.

"I suppose Marie's the French maid," said Peale. "Doesn't she ever come to the office? It might pay us to send up for her. Get a taxi. Buy one, to get $10,000 back on it."

But as luck would have it Marie herself burst through the door at this moment, shrieking violently at the under secretary in her native gibberish. She was another gift from heaven, said Rodney. It was the work of a few minutes to introduce the two compatriots and turn them loose on each other. Rodney bundled them into a side room so the rest could hear themselves think, he said. Then he sent Mary and Peale after them, Mary, on second thought, to translate Peale's slang and Marie to put it into French.

Suddenly a door opened, and he started guiltily, but his fears turned to hope when he saw Mr. William Smith coming in. Old Uncle William Smith, one of the oldest friends of the family, had been one of the capital possibilities he had had in mind.

Mr. Smith was not really an uncle but bore that title only by way of courtesy. Rodney's mother and Mrs. Smith had been at school together, and their children, in the tender years when the real and the pretended are not clear to them in the matter of uncles, had always looked upon their elders as related. Uncle William Smith, when Rodney was a boy, used to make a great show of looking through all his pockets to see if he had a nickel in them for him. Would he find anything now? He would tackle Uncle William for $10,000. Would he fail? Well, he could try.

Peale stuck his head through the door at this moment to catch Rodney's eye and execute a large and on the whole encouraging wink apropos of the French interview. Rodney gave another wink to Peale that said volumes about Mr. Smith.

It Was the Work of a Few Minutes to Turn Them Loose on Each Other.

"That's all now, Mr. Peale," said Rodney, raising his voice.

"Yes, sir, I understand," said Peale, winking again. "He takes 50,000 shares at par."

"Yes, quite right," said Rodney as Peale's head disappeared.

"Who the deuce is that, Rod?" asked Mr. Smith briskly.

"Oh, one of my staff," said Rodney carelessly.

"One of your what?" asked Mr. Smith, amazed.

"My staff; I've gone into business," said Rodney.

"You've done what?" asked Mr. Smith, laughing uproariously.

"Gone into business. I'm a business man," repeated Rodney.

"That's the funniest thing I've ever heard of," said Mr. Smith.

Household Hints

GREEN TOMATO MINCEMEAT

One peck green tomatoes chopped fine; cover with boiling water, let stand one hour, then drain. When well drained add two quarts chopped apples, one cup chopped suet, two pounds chopped raisins, four pounds brown sugar, two teaspoons cinnamon, two of cloves, one grated nutmeg, one teaspoon salt, two-thirds teaspoon pepper. Mix all together and cook half hour. Take off stove and add one large cup vinegar. Can and seal while hot.

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

To Remove Stains From Silk Garments—Use five parts glycerin mixed with five parts water and one-quarter part ammonia. Try a small piece first, and if it takes the color out, don't use ammonia.

Cleaning Copper or Brass—Cut a lemon in half, dip in salt and rub over surface of metal, which must be speedily washed with water to prevent the acid eating into it.

TO KEEP ICE CREAM.

When ice cream is served and some is left over pack it in a Mason jar, put on a rubber ring and screw the top of the jar on as tight as is possible. Drop the jar into the bucket of salt and ice, in which the ice cream was originally. When wanted the cream will be quite as firm as it was when first opened.

THE TABLE

Mushroom Bouillon—To a quart of mushrooms take one quart milk (or half milk and water), two tablespoons butter, pepper and salt to taste. Thoroughly wash fresh mushrooms, peel carefully, then cut in small pieces. Melt butter, put in mushrooms, add milk and season. Simmer on back of range about an hour, then boil ten minutes.

Wafers With Cheese—These are very nice to serve with the mushroom bouillon. Mix about two tablespoons catsup, one tablespoon mustard (German is the best) with one-fourth pound York state cheese, grated. Mix and spread on wafers. Lay in pan and heat in oven just a minute or two until crisp. This can be made and put in a jar; will keep some time, and ready for emergency.

Beef and Mutton Pie—Take tender meat, pound it out thin and broil it ten minutes, then cut off the bony and gristly parts. Season it highly with salt and pepper, butter it and cut it into small pieces. Line a pudding dish with pastry, put in the meat and to each layer add a teaspoonful of tomato catsup with a tablespoonful of water. Sprinkle over flour, cover it with pie crust and ornament as you please with pastry. Cold roast or boiled beef and mutton make a good pie by cutting into bits and season highly with salt and pepper. Put into a pie dish, turn a little melted butter over, or gravy, and pour in water till you can just see it at the top.

Pineapple Tapioca Pudding—Three cups water, one-half cup sugar, three-fourths cup grated pineapple (or any fresh or preserved fruits you have in house), one-half cup tapioca. This pudding can be made for six people at a cost of from twelve to fifteen cents.

Fruit Puffs—Sift together one pint flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt. Then stir in enough sweet milk to make a batter quite thick. Put a tablespoon of batter into cups until half the batter is used. Then place on it a layer of fruit and cover with remainder of batter. Put cups in steamer for twenty minutes. Serve with sugar and cream.

Prince of Wales Cake—Dark part: One cup brown sugar and one-half cup butter (creamed together), yolks of three eggs, one-half cup sour milk, one tablespoon New Orleans molasses, one teaspoon cloves, a little nutmeg, one teaspoon soda sifted with two cups flour, one cup chopped raisins.

Beet Salad—Boil medium-sized beets until well done. Peel and let cool; then scoop out centers, salt them slightly and fill with peas. Line a dish with crisp lettuce leaves and place the beets in a ring of cold boiled diced potatoes. Serve with French dressing.

RUNYON QUITS P. H. S. BUT OTHERS ARE AVAILABLE

Although Ralph Runyon, the Plainfield High School champion field athlete, has entered college, Plainfield High School still have a splendid array of trackmen. It is likely that August Francke will assume Runyon's title as pole vaulter, although Eddie Dugan and a few others are hot after the distinction.

Bill Daniel, one of the fastest quarter-mile runners in this vicinity, is still in school, as are Monroe O'Donnell, John Causbrook and Pete McDonough. Jack Fritts is coaching the team. Of the other Red and Blue cinderpath devotees, Louis Markweather, Maurice Roddy and Phil Mills look to be the real stuff.

BASEBALL GOSSIP BREAKS THROUGH IN HIGH SCHOOL

With the opening of High School comes the usual amount of baseball gossip, dealing mainly with the prospects of a good team next year. According to figures Plainfield High School should have a fast outfit although the team has been divested of some of its best material by the last graduation.

In the pitching box Gerald Linke and Sid Butler look to be classy enough, while behind the bat the old standby, "Box" Apgar, will be seen. The infield will have to undergo a complete change, and it is likely that Allan Stevenson will cover first, O'Leary or Coudray second, and Carlton Dunham third. In the region of third base it is likely that Mullin, a new man, may be seen, although a shift of Kyle to first would give Stevenson a shot at the difficult station. In the outer works Phil Mills and Noonan are practically sure of regular berths, while a host of "subs" will no doubt be on hand to try for the other position.

CHANNEL BASS ARE PLENTIFUL THIS YEAR

Ten channel bass were caught from the beach at Deal this week by three fishing members of the Asbury Park Fishing Club. It was the first time in the history of the club that such a run of channel bass has been known so far north. Barnegat and Seaside Park are haunts of this particular fish, and they have rarely been known to migrate much further north. When, two years ago, Charles Ward landed one from the beach at Deal it was considered remarkable, and it was considered more remarkable when last year Edward Waters landed one from a boat some distance off shore.

The first of the ten was landed at 5 o'clock on Monday evening. The three fishermen remained on the beach until 8 o'clock. They were well rewarded. Henry C. Rydell landed the largest, weighing 38 pounds and 6 ounces. He caught two others weighing 32 pounds 4 ounces and 28 pounds 8 ounces. Albert Hunt, who had taken the first of the year Saturday night, weighing 21 pounds 3 ounces, hooked two more Monday night, weighing 24 pounds 2 ounces and 28 pounds 12 ounces. Harry Metz caught five, weighing 22, 28, 32, 30 and 31 pounds respectively; thus with his two days' fishing, he sets up a new record in the Asbury Park Fishing Club. O. W. Jones was the other lucky fisherman, the landing one that scaled at 28½ pounds. Frank G. Ernest, also fishing at the time, landed a pretty striped bass that weighed 10 pounds 8 ounces, as did Horace Fischer, who caught a striper that weighed 5 pounds 2 ounces.

BUFFALO WINS PENNANT.

Buffalo clinched the pennant in the International League yesterday by breaking even with the Skeeters, while Providence lost two games to Toronto. The season closes today, even though the Bisons should lose and the Grays win the former would maintain the lead by two points.

GARLAND JUNIOR CHAMPION; THROCKMORTON IN DOUBLES

Forest Hills, L. I., Sept. 18.—Charles S. Garland, a Pittsburgh schoolboy, won the metropolitan junior championship tennis title in the singles here yesterday, on the clay courts of the Wet Side Tennis Club. Garland, by the use of the smoothest of driving strokes, defeated Louis M. Banks, of Adelphia Academy, Brooklyn, in straight sets by scores of 6—2, 6—1, 6—2.

Rain caused a postponement of the championship match in the doubles. George P. Throckmorton and W. H. Forster, a New Jersey pair, were leading Charles S. Garland and W. I. Pitt at 6—1 and 2—3 on games in the second set.

SPORTING NOTES

The first hunt races of the season are set for today at Belmont Park Terminal, on Long Island, under the United Hunt colors. Six races are on the card.

Ad Wolgast is matched to box Leach Cross in New York next Friday night, and to meet Kid Thomas in Philadelphia the following Monday.

The curtain raiser at the new Sheepshead Bay Speedway will be an auto parade from New York to the track today. The two-mile course is in great shape for the tryouts today.

The stake races at the Exposition track at San Francisco will wind up today with the San Francisco Handicap for 3 year olds and upward, one mile.

The Providence auto speedway will have its first races today. It is the only asphalt race course in the country. The oval is a one-mile track, 70 feet wide at the narrowest point.

The boxing fans have their eye on Denver, where Charlie White is billed to go 20 rounds with Freddie Welsh a week from Monday. White has been showing well and will give the champ a lot of trouble, according to eastern opinion.

Billiards comes strong into the sport arena next week, when the three cushion inter-city league gets under way. The matches will continue into next May, and over 600 games will be played.

WILLIAM WINS TITLE.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 18.—R. Norris William, representing Harvard, won the intercollegiate lawn tennis singles championship on the course of the Merion Cricket Club, at Haverford, yesterday, by easily defeating Leonard Beekman, of Princeton, in the final round. The scores were 6—2, 6—1, 6—2.

Williams held the intercollegiate title in 1913. Last year it was held by George M. Church, of Princeton, who has since been graduated from college.

SUSPENSION PROLONGED.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—Heinie Zimmerman's suspension from the Cubs' lineup was to have expired last night, but a telegram from President Tener, of the National League, makes the suspension indefinite because of Zimmerman's verbal abuse of Eason on last Tuesday.

Bancroft, Phillies' Sensational Shortstop, Real Find of 1915 Season

FRANK BANCROFT, the Phillies' sensational shortstop, is the greatest find of the 1915 season. His shortstop work is as sensational and fully up to the class of Maranville, the electric little short fielder of the Braves during 1914. In fact, Bancroft has kept the Quakers in the race, and if they win the championship to that lucky "find" from the Pacific coast will belong most of the credit, with due regard for what Alexander has done. Bancroft has made the Phillies' infield and is easily the sensation of the 1915 season.

HE THROWS TO FIRST TO PASS A BATSMAN.

The question as to whether a batter was intentionally passed to first is a constant source of argument among baseball fans.

In a recent game in the Central association the pitcher of the Waterloo club left no doubt regarding his intentions by pitching four balls to the first baseman instead of the catcher.

Following the fourth pitch the umpire ordered the batter to take his base.

TWO BASEBALL FEATS.

Pitcher Thompson of Atlanta, in the Southern association, did not allow a hit in a seven inning contest with Little Rock recently, his team winning, 5 to 0. Only one batter reached first. He was passed.

Another feature cropped out in that circuit the same day, Chattanooga winning the first game of a double header from Birmingham, 1 to 0, and playing nine innings without a score in the second contest.

JAPANESE LIKE GOLF; FOUR MIGHTY ADEPTS

Four Japanese merchants of New York rank among the best golfers enrolled as members of the North Jersey Country club. They took up the game about a year ago and have shown such wonderful skill at it that they are able right now to give a real battle to the best players among the white members of the club. They are T. Awoki, H. Yoshida, K. Ichinomiye and S. Nomura.

"Golf is a wonderful game," said Nomura. "We are fascinated by it and play it whenever we get a chance. We try always to improve our game by watching the expert Americans play. We never miss a championship contest in this section in which the American stars are contestants."

INDIANS SCARCE IN BASEBALL

Red Men Are Fast Disappearing From Big Baseball Leagues.

The Indians seem to be disappearing from baseball.

Chief Bender, Chief Meyers, Chief Johnson, Jim Thorpe and Jim Bluejacket seem to be the sole remaining members of the race that once cut a wide swath in the pastime. And Bender and Meyers are due to pass soon beyond the big league horizon.

Justin Clarke, Balenti, Jude, Le Roy, Bruce and a flock of others who came from the wind swept plains of the west to grace the big league diamonds have gone, and none have come to take their place.

A few years ago an Indian on a ball team was figured as a big drawing card. But they draw no more, and the big league scouts seem to be giving them the go-by.

MADE LONGER HITS POSSIBLE.

Old Time Baseball Weighed Only Three Ounces.

A baseball weighed three ounces in 1845 and because of its lightness used to have tremendous distance when properly swatted.

In 1854 the weight was increased to six and one-quarter ounces. This was found to be too heavy. In 1860 it was reduced to six ounces, and in 1870 it was again reduced a quarter of an ounce.

In later years it was further reduced until it reached its present weight of a trifle over five ounces.

STRINGENT ATHLETICS FOR COLUMBIA NOW

With the restoration of football at Columbia university a new eligibility code has been adopted by the largest of the American universities.

Hereafter no freshman will be eligible to represent Columbia in major sports, no student can represent the university for more than four years in major sports and no student holding a degree from another college or university can represent Columbia in any sport.

These rules have been in effect, so far as the Columbia oarsmen are concerned, for several years, but the new code will now apply to the football, baseball and track teams.

BASKETBALL RULES UNIFORM

Amateurs and Collegiates Will Play, Alike This Season.

A committee appointed by the Amateur Athletic union, to confer with the college athletic authorities regarding basketball, announced recently that for the first time in the history of that game the amateur and collegiate rules this year will be alike. This result was attained through a number of open meetings held during the winter, and a mail vote.

The principal point of disagreement was the dribble rule. The new uniform rule now adopted is in substance as follows: Dribbling will be permitted, and at the end of the dribble a player will be allowed to throw for goal, and if he makes the goal it will count.

Heretofore the amateur rule did not permit the scoring of a goal after a dribble, but the amateur authorities have conceded this point to the college men, and in the future amateur teams with permit this style of play.

NEW RACE TRACK MARVEL.

Fred Judy, an Eighty-two Pound Youth, Now Sensation in the Saddle.

Fred Judy, the eighty-two pound jockey, who is something of a sensation on the Saratoga (N. Y.) track, is being touted as a coming wonder.

He's sixteen years old, handles a horse like a veteran and has outridden many of the best jockeys in the game.

His home is in Kansas City, where his father has a law office.

How to Keep Our City Moving

We must keep moving. A city booms only so long as its manufacturers and merchants keep moving. The wheels of every line of endeavor must be kept turning if the city is going to develop, and what is of deeper concern than the wheels of Plainfield kept turning?

Should every one who has the interest of Plainfield close at heart buy goods from our merchants, the benefits all around can easily be seen. Thousands of dollars that would otherwise go out of the city will be kept circulating here and contribute a big share towards making a bigger and busier Plainfield.

A dollar spent at home will keep that dollar at home and all will share in the profits.

NOTT ENGINE CO. IS NOW 'INACTIVE'

Still Wants City to Take Engine Not Ready 14 Months After Ordered.

HISTORY OF THE CASE

One Delay After Another Has Kept Netherwood Section From Securing Desired Fire Protection—Has Been Here Since February.

Plainfield people will be interested to know that the Nott Motor Fire Engine Company, of Minneapolis, has, at least temporarily, abandoned the manufacture of motor fire engines.

The company's secretary reports it "inactive," and one of its former agents says that the company will not resume the old business. Obligations of the company are to be assumed really the parent corporation, by the W. S. Nott Company, which is

It is the announced purpose of the W. S. Nott Company to furnish parts for all engines now in use during their lifetime, but it may be necessary when a machine breaks for it to be out of service until the factory can prepare and send the needed part from Minneapolis.

Years ago W. S. Nott began the manufacture of steam fire engines and he built up and maintained a reputation for putting out a powerful, serviceable engine. The Nott engine was one of the best of the old steam engines and hundreds of them are still in use over the United States.

When it became apparent that motor driven fire apparatus was to take the place of horse-drawn machines the firm decided to keep abreast with the times and there was organized the Nott Motor Fire Engine Company. In its employ was a capable steam engine designer, named Penney, and he was commissioned to design a motor fire engine. His first creation was a motor-driven apparatus, carrying a steam engine. Many of these were sold, but it soon developed that the chassis was called upon to carry far too much weight, and Mr. Penney then went to work on an engine with chassis and pump both driven by the same motor. His designs were carried out and the engine put on the market, but Penney was soon let out and a new designer and superintendent engaged.

The next superintendent of the Nott plant was a former race car designer and driver. The engine now on trial with the Plainfield fire department is his work.

If the Nott Motor Fire Engine Company was not a success it cannot be blamed on the sales department, for all automobile men and fire officials are agreed that its sales manager was one of the best in the business—a Mr. Wilkinson, and he had the support of a corps of capable salesmen.

During his career as sales manager for the Nott company, Mr. Wilkinson sold the New York fire department nine pieces of apparatus. Two were motor driven engines, with motor driven pumps and seven were motor driven hose wagons. One of the engines was destroyed in an accident more than a year ago and the driver was killed. The other is now in service on Staten Island.

Of the seven motor hose carts several are not in use, according to a statement made by one who is close to the head of the New York department.

Plainfield's new automobile fire engine was ordered July 22, 1914, and in accepting the order the Nott Fire Engine Company contracted in writing to deliver it here for service on or before October 15, 1914.

On January 26, 1915, over six months after the order, the councilmanic fire committee publicly expressed its indignation at the repeated delay in shipping the engine. Agent Robert Woodhouse, who represented the Nott people in the sale of the engine, was declared to have "run dry of explanations." The councilmen called attention to the fact that the Nott people had reported the engine shipped weeks before this and they threatened to refuse the apparatus when it did reach Plainfield because of the apparently inexcusable delay.

Mr Woodhouse made a public statement a few days later, January 30 to be exact, in which he said that the delays were caused by changes made in the design of the engine. He declared that these twelfth-hour improvements had resulted in an added expenditure on the engine of more than $500, which he bore personally.

Finally Plainfield received a waybill. This came to the office of Chief Doane on the morning of February 1, and it carried authentic information to the effect that the apparatus had been shipped from the Nott factory in Minneapolis, January 28, 1915, more than three months after the time specified in the purchase contract.

The engine was finally received

J. V. E. VANDERHOEF OFFERS EXPLANATION

Tells Why He Deposited Funds With State Trust Company.

In view of the stories which have reached Tax Collector J. V. E. Vanderhoef, of the borough, to the effect that he had withdrawn funds from the Plainfield Trust Company, he was led to make a statement concerning the matter today. In an interview with a reporter for the Plainfield Daily Press today, Mr. Vanderhoef said:

"Stories have been circulated to the effect that I, as borough treasurer, had withdrawn $35,000 from the Plainfield Trust Company and deposited the same with the State Trust Company, of which I am a director. This I wish to deny most emphatically. The facts are as follows: The Plainfield Trust Company, along with other institutions, bid for $35,000 worth of sewer bonds and being the highest bidder was awarded the bonds.

"Mayor Clark, Charles M. Dolliver and myself went to the Plainfield Trust Company, delivered the bonds and I received the checks for the same. I then turned to Mr. Clark and asked him in what account I should deposit the amount received and he said the collecting sewage system account in the State Trust Company. As borough treasurer I have absolutely nothing to say as to where the funds should be deposited. The Borough Council designates the depository."

CARROLL PROMISES TO LEAVE NORTH PLAINFIELD

Frank Carroll, 31 years old, of Manning avenue, was arrested Saturday night by Marshal Herrmann, of the borough police force, for being drunk on Race street. Sentence was suspended upon Carroll promising to remain away from the borough for a year.

The man already owes the borough a fine of fifteen dollars less two dollars paid on account. When his memory was refreshed in regard to this matter, he promised to reduce the sum a little more tonight.

SPENCER SCRIBNER AGREES TO SETTLE BOARD BILL

Upon a warrant sworn to by Mrs. Mary Spencer, of New Market, before Justice Von Minden, of that place, charging Spencer Scribner with leaving an unpaid board bill behind him when he left her roof, Spencer was arrested Saturday afternoon by Chief Marshal Weiss, of the borough police force, and arraigned before Justice Thomas H. Snape. Upon Scribner agreeing to settle the claim, he was released. Chief Weiss found him firing the tar pot for one of the gangs of men at work on the North Plainfield sewer job.

FUNERAL SERVICES OF MRS. W. F. WILLIAMS HELD

The funeral of Mrs. Will F. Williams was held yesterday afternoon from her late home on Westervelt avenue, in charge of the Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, of which she was a member. It was one of the most largely attended house funerals held in this city in some time. Interment was made in the family plot in the North Plainfield cemetery.

The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. Among the pieces were flowers from the home department of the Sunday-school, the Young Women's Missionary Guild, the Ladies' Aid Society, the Ladies' Christian Work Society and the Sewing Bee, to which she belonged.

The pall bearers were H. Clifford Van Emburgh, Fred Van Emburgh, William Walsh, Nelson Van Winkle, William H. Olmsted and Roy Genung.

TALKED ON "EDUCATION."

In place of the regular preaching service at the First M. E. church, yesterday morning, Albert B. Meredith, B. A., assistant commissioner of education for New Jersey, delivered an address on an educational topic. Mr. Meredith, who taught in the Plainfield High School several years ago, was listened to with keen attention. The pastor, the Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson, preached in the evening.

BUSINESS MEN'S MEETING.

An important meeting of the Business Men's Credit Association will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in headquarters on Park avenue. As matters of financial importance to the members will be discussed a large attendance is requested.

BELIEVES HIS LIFE IS AT A PREMIUM

Black Hand Threats and Pistol Shots Impress This On Man's Mind.

Somerville, Sept. 20.—The prosecutor's office is working on an alleged "black hand" case upon complaint made by Samuel Beaumount, an Italian employed by Lewis Brothers, the grocers, of Rocky Hill. Beaumount alleges in his story that he received a "black hand" letter three or four weeks ago demanding fifty dollars, and stipulating where the money was to be placed and threatening him with dire consequences if the demand was not complied with.

Beaumount paid no attention to the letter, but last Tuesday, as he was driving the Lewis Brothers' motor delivery truck through a lonely section of Rocky Hill, a man leaped out at him from behind a rock and ordered him to throw up his hands. As Beaumount did not obey, the man is alleged to have fired a shot from a revolver at Beaumount, which passed right by his hip and lodged in the automobile seat cushion, and a second shot which struck the rear of the car and glanced, going through the top of the windshield. Beaumount is thoroughly aroused over the attempts to take his life, and has turned the matter over to the local authorities. Prosecutor's Detective George B. Totten is working on the case.

MRS. IRVING STEWART'S FUNERAL LARGELY ATTENDED

The funeral of Mrs. Lucilla D. Stewart, wife of Irving Stewart, who died last Friday following a brief illness, was held yesterday afternoon from the residence of Walter E. Stewart, 526 West Seventh street. Rev. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, conducted the service which was attended by a large number of friends and relatives of the deceased. The flowers were especially beautiful, numerous handsome set pieces coming from relatives and friends in this and other cities. The interment, which was private, took place in Hillside cemetery.

J. EVARTS TRACY REMOVED TO MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL

J. Evarts Tracy, a former well-known resident of Plainfield, is seriously ill at Muhlenberg Hospital, where he was taken on Saturday. Mr. Tracy has been making his home in New York for some time, but recently went to his camp in Northern Canada. While there he was taken ill and his condition was such that it was thought best to bring him to the local hospital. He withstood the trip remarkably well.

Mr. Tracy is the father of Evarts and Howard C. Tracy, of this city, and for many years was prominent in the practice of law in New York city. He is about 80 years old.

COURT LENIENT WITH PILLARS

Members of Cult Given Fine and Jail Sentence, Then Discharged.

DEFIED POLICE HEAD

Revivalists Refused to Move From Point Where Traffic Was Congested Saturday Night—Penitent in Court.

Adjudged guilty after a long hearing before Judge William G. DeMeza in the police court this morning on a charge preferred against them by Lieut. Maurice Higgins, eight representatives of the Pillar of Fire were each sentenced to pay a fine of $20 and serve forty days in the county jail. This sentence was later suspended to be invoked upon a second appearance of any of the defendants before the local court on similar charges. Those arraigned were: Molly Reilly, aged 52; Delia Hoffman, aged 41; Minnie L. Reilly, aged 18; John O. Fairley, aged 37; Oliver C. Wilson, aged 37; Ferdinand G. Hamilton, aged 22; Flossie J. Plank, aged 21, and William P. Plank, aged 49.

Higgins' allegation grew out of the group refusing to obey a police order to move from the westerly side of Park avenue on Second street, to another point less conjested, thereby violating a city ordinance. A second complaint was filed by Captain John J. Flynn, charging disorderly conduct and this will be heard next Monday morning, the same defendants being involved.

The arrest of the Holy Jumpers, as they are commonly known, caused a sensation in the business section of the town Saturday night and came as a climax to a long period of patient dealings with the cult on the part of the police and city officials. Owing to the heavy traffic on West Second street Saturday night, caused principally by the autos and other vehicles travelling to the Plainfield Theatre, Lieut. Higgins, who was on duty at the point, ordered the revivalists to discontinue their street meetings in that section. According to testimony given in court he approached the leader, Oliver C. Wilson, with the suggestion that the Jumpers find another place but that the latter merely "clapped his hands and danced away," retorting, "I've had no orders from headquarters."

Later Acting-Chief John J. Flynn appeared on the scene and approached Wilson with a similar demand. According to Flynn and other witnesses the Pillar shouted a rejoiner similar to the one he gave Higgins and resumed his place in the revival at the point where he had been interrupted. This was followed by Flynn's order to Patrolmen Welsh and Neylon to place the four men in Pillar of Fire regalia under arrest. The coppers started for police headquarters with their prisoners and the four women in the group took up the revival program. Flynn then warned the feminine members of the cult but was given little satisfaction, and after several minutes of wrangling, was compelled to arrest them also.

The revival was curtailed at a time when West Second street was thronged with theatre-goers and a large crowd followed the Jumpers to police headquarters. The men were assigned cells, but the women were allowed to remain in the reception room. Enroute to the Sycamore avenue building and after their commitment the Jumpers continued their song service. One of the selections that met the ears of a curious mob that encircled the headquarters was a tenor solo on an original version of the old song, "In the prison cell I sit." Who gave the rendition is unknown but 'tis said that it came from the prison in tones of genuine emotion and pleasing voice.

In police court this morning the city's case was prosecuted by Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed and the eight Pillars were not represented. Wilson was the principal witness for the defendants, while Higgins, Flynn, Welsh and Neylon were put on the stand by the prosecution. Wilson claimed he feared an attack by Roman Catholic ruffians if he went to any other point not so well lighted. He entered a denial of being discourteous to police officers and appeared to be very penitent.

All except Plank admitted having been guilty of refusing to obey the police order. Plank said that he had not personally been approached and was taken into custody merely because the others were. This prompted a query by Mr. Reed as to whether or not Plank was loyal to the cult and whether he would have consented to move had he been approached. "If this is true," continued Mr. Reed, "We might find a path through which you can run out of this trouble. After considerable hesitation Plank declared half-heartedly that he would have followed the instructions of

ROBERT T. HOUK, JR., WEDS MISS MILLIKEN

Brilliant Society Function in Chantry of St. Thomas' Church, New York.

The wedding of Miss Ruth Milliken, daughter of Foster Milliken, and Robert Thurston Houk, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Thurston Houk, of Dayton, Ohio, was celebrated at noon on Saturday in the chantry of St. Thomas' church, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-third street, New York, and the officiating clergymen were the Rev. Irving McGrew, of Philadelphia, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, rector of the church. The bride, who walked with her father, wore a short white satin frock, in Empire effect, flounced with point applique and having a straight full over dress of white tulle; folds of white satin banded it over the bust, and the tulle sleeves were full and short. The satin train had trails of orange blossoms at the side and the voluminous tulle veil was draped low at the back and held by knots of orange blossoms on the dark coiffure. Her flowers were white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Miss Katherine Talbot Houk, a sister of the groom, was the maid of honor. She wore yellow satin taffeta with a shirred Eton coat. The other attendants were Misses Marjorie L. Williams, of New York; Katherine M. Brown and Anna M. de Graff, of Plainfield; Louise Lynch, of Towanda, Pa.; Mrs. Philip Schuyler Church, of Geneva, N. Y., and Mrs. Alexander Hammer, of Lexington, Mass. Their frocks were brilliant canary-colored taffeta, very full skirts, with lace hems, and looped but flat panniers at the side back, and the round necked, low cut, close fitting corsages were appliqued with silver flowers, as was each short cap sleeve. Harold Talbott, of Dayton, Ohio, a cousin of the groom, acted as best man.

The reception, held at the St. Regis, was a small one for about 150 friends and relatives. The wedding cake, weighing 300 pounds, occupied a prominent place. Surmounting it was a white cathedral on the banks of a canal in Venice, done in sugar, and through its open doors came the notes of "Oh, Lovely Night" from "The Tales of Hoffman" from an electrically played music box. In the miniature canal about the cathedral sailed electrically propelled gondolas, manned by gondoliers dressed as cupids.

Mr. and Mrs. Houk will spend their honeymoon at Lake Placid and afterward will go to Toronto, Canada, to make their home there.

REFUSED TO OBEY OFFICER; GIVEN A SCARE IN COURT

James Ross, an Italian living in West Second street, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning on a charge preferred by Patrolman John Kelly. According to the policeman he instructed Ross, along with a number of other youths, to move away from a spot where they were congregating and blocking traffic. Kelly says all obeyed but Ross and after waiting a reasonable length of time for the Italian to act he locked him up.

In disposing of the case Judge DeMeza hung a suspended sentence of $10 fine or forty days in jail over the prisoner's head and referred to him as one of the "fresh" element who the police were going to stop from loitering in the business section.

ITALIAN ASSUALTS 14 YEAR OLD GIRL

Threatens Playmate With Pistol When She Attempts to Interfere.

Somerville, Sept. 20.—Charged with attempted criminal assault upon a fourteen-year-old girl and with threatening her friend with a pistol to force her to keep his attack a secret, Rafsale Orio, an Italian, is being held here to await the action of the grand jury.

Orio has been living near Mannville with a German woman whom he claims is his wife. Two days ago he went to the home of Tereso Ansillo, a fourteen-year-old girl, and attacked her in her bedroom. She was alone in the house when Orio entered, but a young girl who came to visit her is said to have found her struggling in the arms of the Italian. Orio, it is alleged, pulled a revolver and told her he would kill her if she ever reported his attempt at assault to the police, but the two girls told their story Sunday and the man was arrested. His case will be considered by the grand jury tomorrow.

HEAR PASTOR RUSSELL AND PREPARE FOR END

Those Who Believe His Prophecies Ready for Armageddon—Final Struggle.

All those who heard the lecture of Pastor Russell at the Plainfield Theatre last night, and who believe in his boasted power to predict future events from a studious interpretation of the Bible, were up bright and early today putting their worldly affairs in shape for a sudden shift into another existence.

Pastor Russell, who modestly admits that he is the greatest Bible student of his time or all time, and who asserts that his interpretation of the Word of God and that of his disciples is the only true one, declared that the European war, in which practically all the nations across the water are engulfed, was the beginning of Armageddon—that final struggle between the hosts of the Lord and the armies of sin, when the right shall triumph and the world will be no more.

The war now being fought out by 21,000,000 men across a battle front 1,500 miles long, is but a preliminary skirmish to Armageddon, however, according to Pastor Russell. In the end all nations shall be drawn in and all shall be destroyed, he said, and quoted the Bible to prove it. He promised that God would gather the armies of all nations into the valley of Jehosophat, after which the four winds of strife would be unloosed, which he interpreted as meaning a revolution in all countries. The valley of Jehosophat is a symbolical expression, meaning cemetery or death.

According to Pastor Russell, God has deserted the world. He last left man to be consumed by his own wickedness and the stupendous slaughter now going on in Europe is but the begining. After the death of all the armies, followed by the dark wave of revolution there will come anarchy, continued the pastor, cheerfully.

"Every man against his brother," was the prophesy of Pastor Russell, "and if it is not stopped by the gracious hand of God no flesh will survive." For the benefit of those who believe, he promised that the black wave of anarchy would be stopped before the world perished.

Pastor Russell was heard in a two-hour lecture by a crowd that filled the theatre. His story of the destruction of the world was but a small part of his discourse in which he pointed out to his hearers the true way in which to live and to finally find eternal happiness. He declared that there was no hell and that many of those who preached a hell of fire did not believe it themselves.

Admission was free and no collection was taken, but in introducing the speaker of the evening it was explained that his books could be obtained at small cost and without trouble.

This opens up a new source of income for both submarine companies. The Government is now building at Portsmouth a lake submarine boat for which it is paying a royalty of $52,700 to the Lake Torpedo boat Company and as these two companies have a monopoly of the business in America, and as all the foreign boats in use are constructed in accordance with the patents of one or the other, the United States government would be compelled to pay royalties for every boat constructed under Secretary Daniel's plan.

CUSSES KAISER, GETS WHIPPED AND FINED

Russian Warrior Even Beaten By Peace Apostle.

Dunellen, Sept. 20.—After losing an engagement with the Germans, which resulted from his public declaration of "To H— with the Kaiser," Frelyan Denkovie, a Russian, beat an orderly retreat to his boarding house here Saturday evening and intrenched himself in his room.

August Gavernik, with whom he boarded, attempted to invade the room on a peaceful mission and was attacked by Denkovie, who was still smarting from his defeat at the hands of the Kaiser's friends. A lively fight followed in which the apostle of peace triumphed after badly battering his warrior boarder. In order to insure himself a restful night he had Denkovie locked up for the night and when tried in court for disorderly conduct the turbulent boarder was fined $10 and costs for his Saturday night spree. In taxing the fine Judge Campbell told Denkovie:

"You want to be protected by the laws of this country but you don't respect them yourself. I understand you are one of those who do not believe in paying poll taxes. Ordinarily I do not have any jurisdiction over those who say they will not pay their poll tax, but I've got you. I find you guilty and fine you $10."

The fine was paid.

MISSING LAD SPENT THE NIGHT WITH HIS PET DOG

A group made up of Mashal Patrick Tarpey, Paul Ratti, Frank Markey and Lawrence Saunders were standing in front of Paul Ratti' fruit emporium early this morning discussing the mysterious disappearance of Mr. Ratti's eight-year-old son, Joseph, who had not been seen since half past seven last evening, when the missing lad strode up to them. The father, who had staid up all night, was in such a state that he could only stare at his boy and Marshal Patrick Tarpey was the first to address him.

"Where have you been?" the marshal asked.

"Sleeping in the dog coop," the lad replied.

Mr. Ratti notified the police that his boy was missing at 10 o'clock last night, and the town was scoured from end to end during the night by the police and John Fedderman. The Ratti back yard, in which the dog coop was located, was thoroughly searched. MAY BE BROTHER OF SEPTEMBER MORN!

Nude Man Found Wandering in Woods—May Be An Escaped Lunatic.

Somerville, Sept. 20.—If September Morn has lost her brother, we have him here.

He is in trouble and friendless—and she had better bring him some clothing, too.

County Detective George D. Totten found him wandering around in the woods near Franklin township, naked, half-starved and, after his sister, a little chilled. He was on his hands and knees when found and from abrasions in the palm of the hands and on knee joints this had been his favorite mode of progress.

Near where the man was found the officers discovered several large mounds of grass. He was in the act of pulling up grass blades and piling them up in mounds when found and indications were that he had put in several full days at this innocent but highly peculiar amusement.

Aside from the fact that the man was found in the cold woods in a nude condition there are many other reasons for believing him demented.

He has been seen several times within the past three days. Reports of a nude man in the neighborhood of the John D. Garretson farm have reached this city at frequent intervals and yesterday afternoon County Detective Totten was told that he was within a short distance of the Garretson home.

He found the nude hermit in a clump of woods within easy sight of the Garretson family. The man appeared to be thirty-five or forty years of age, and shows evidences of early education and refinement, although he talked incoherently. He said he was Edward Finke, of Trenton. During his mental wanderings he kept telling of a large, beautiful building with many windows in it, where he was well treated. It is believed from this that he recently escaped from an asylum. He will be held until his identity is established.

Leader Wilson, adding that "in a way he was led by Wilson and in a way he was not."

The Pillars made a great play on their right to freedom of speech and declared that their constitutional privileges were being interfered with by the authorities.

In summing up the prosecution Mr. Reed said in part:

"There is no greater advocate of free speech than I am but at the same time I know that right to free speech carries with it protection to the rights of the individual who is subject to attack and who is offended by free speech. The Pillars have the right to hire a hall and 'ride' the Roman Catholics or anyone else, but I personally do not believe that the Catholics need any protection from attacks of this kind. The Salvation Army, political meetings, or any other gatherings in the streets are not allowed to congest traffic and there is no reason why these people should be allowed to do it. The streets are not kept primarily for meeting purposes. I do not draw any line between the Pillars of Fire and other bodies for I have never heard or known anything detrimental to their character, except that they have been exceedingly foolish."

In passing sentence Judge DeMeza declared that the police department had been defied and that "the Pillars of Fire are no better than anyone else," and should be punished when they violate the law.

ELIZABETH MANGIONE.

Elizabeth Mangione, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Mangione, of 346 East Third street, died this morning, following a brief illness. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at the late home. Rev. Aurelio R. Mangione, pastor of the Italian Mission, West Third street, officiating. The interment will take place in Hillside cemetery.

IT'S A LONG, LONG WALK.

Edward Doughty and Julius Schmidt, both of the Bronx, New York, were arraigned before Judge DeMeza this morning charged with trespassing on the Central Railroad tracks. Both were given suspended sentences and ordered to finish the rest of their journey from Wilkes-Barre, Pa., to New York on foot.

MAY ARREST OTHERS.

Upon the request of Patrolman John Neylon, Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning postponed the trial of Mike VanDuren and Patrick Cauley, charged with gambling, until Saturday morning. The police believe that they have a line on at least a dozen others who were mixed up in the same affair. The two prisoners were held in $10 bail each.

TWO MORE POSTS BUMPED.

According to police blotter reports two more traffic posts were knocked from their moorings over the week-end and the lanterns broken. One, located at Central avenue and West Seventh street, the police say, was knocked down by an automobile bearing license No. 610 M., N. J. The other was situated at Park avenue and West Eighth street and was knocked down by a motorcycle.

CASE POSTPONED.

Frank Splick, of New Market, the automobile driver whose car crashed into the show window of Morris Abrams' shoe store on West Front street several weeks ago, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city police court for trial on a reckless driving charge this morning, but at the request of his counsel, George Bird, the hearing was put off until Monday, October 4.

GOT A GOOD HAUL.

Sometime during Saturday night a thief entered the tailoring establishment of Harry Robinson, at 132 Madison avenue, and stole eleven bolts of material for suits, the total being valued at $80.50. Patrolman Martin Welsh was detailed to the case but as yet no trace of the crook has been found.

SOUTH PLAINFIELD WINS.

In the first of a three game series the South Plainfield Sunday Baseball Club defeated the New Market team for the championship of Piscataway township by a score of 7 to 3. Sofield pitched gilt-edged ball for the locals and only allowed the opponents three scattered hits, and he secured ten strikeouts.

TWO CAMERAS STOLEN.

Paul R. Collier, the East Front street sporting goods' merchant, reported to the police Saturday night that two vest pocket cameras were stolen during the day from his show window. The missing articles were valued at $10 each.

Pleasant Affair Given at His Home in New Market Yesterday.

Surrounded by his children, grandchildren and other relatives, George Leibel, Sr., of New Market, was the guest of honor at a reception given him Sunday, the occasion being his seventieth natal day. Mr. Leibel, who is well known and high respected in the community in which he lives, was the recipient of congratulations and well wishes, many of his neighbors dropping in the home during the course of the day to convey their sentiments. During the afternoon musical selections were rendered by various guests, and the merrymakers continued the festivities until late in the evening. Mr. Leibel, who is enjoying good health, entered into the joy of the celebration with a vim, and those who actually do not know the man would never think him three score and ten years.

Among those present were the following: Mrs. Charles Myers and children, of Scotch Plains; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Scott and children, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. George Leibel and children, of Dunellen; Mr. and Mrs. August Leibel and children, of Port Reading; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Leibel, of Perth Amboy; Henry Leibel, of New Market; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Leibel, Lena Bonnell and Edwin Bonnell, of New York city.

MINISTERS ADDRESS SUFFRAGE MEETING

Effective Arguments Are Presented at Open-Air Gathering on Saturday.

The weekly street meeting of the Equal Suffrage League was held Saturday evening at the post office corner. Rev. C. S. Gillespie, of Grace M. E. Church, opened the meeting with a few short and forceful remarks. He compared the position of women in various countries; from some countries where women are beasts of burden to others where they are led by men and dependent upon them, and America, where they are a companion and an inspiration.

Rev. E. S. Ralston, of Netherwood Reformed Church, followed, and in the course of his spech said the woman's place was in the home but that home didn't mean the four walls but the State and city in which she lived and conditions which existed there.

These local clergymen were followed by Miss May Noonan, of New York, organizer from the Empire State Campaign Committee, who held a large and interested audience for the remainder of the evening. She emphasized the fact that women didn't want to take the vote from the men but to co-operate with them. The quesion was asked, would women have to serve on the jury; it would depend on the law in that particular state and in New Jersey a special law would have to be passed to allow women to serve on the jury.

SUFFRAGISTS WILL GIVE LARGE WHIST PARTY

The Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield will give a large bridge whist at the Park Club on Wednesday, October 6, at 2:30 o'clock. Last spring a card party was held in Columbus Hall and proved such a success that the committee were requested to have another in the early fall. Refreshments will be served and prizes given. Tickets for the affair can be secured at Suffrage Headquarters, 110 Depot avenue, from 9 to 12 and from 1 to 5, or will be mailed on request.

STARLINGS DISAPPEAR.

There is much rejoicing in North Plainfield over the success of the latest phase of the war waged upon the starling nuisance. Reports to Chief Marshal Weiss this morning were to the effect that no starlings were seen in the vicinity of Watchung and Jackson avenues, their old roosting place ,Saturday or Sunday nights. It is thought that they have been driven away at last.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. In the construction of this ordinance the term "itinerant vender" shall be taken and construed to mean and include any person or corporation engaged in or carrying on, whether as principal or agent, a transient retail business whether of the nature of those usually called bankrupt sales, fire sales, assignee's sales, damaged goods sales, retiring from business sales, or the like, where the seller gives out or pretends that the sale will last for a limited time only, or where in fact it is the intention of the seller to continue such sale only temporarily. The ordinance shall not affect any sale made by virtue of an order of any court nor any sale made by any person or corporation who or which has been actually engaged in business in the City of Plainfield for a period of at least six months immediately preceding such sale in case the same be only of merchandise, medicines or remedies theretofore carried in stock by such person or corporation.

Section 2. Hereafter no itinerant vender of merchandise, medicines or remedies shall begin, enter upon or carry on any sale of merchandise, medicines or remedies at any house, store, warehouse or other fixed place in the City of Plainfield without first obtaining a license so to do as hereinafter provided and paying therefor a license fee of Two Hundred Dollars for each month or fraction thereof covered by such license. Every such license shall state the period during which it shall be and remain in force and shall be void and of no effect both before the beginning and after the end of such period. The City Clerk shall keep a detailed record of every such license issued and shall attest the same. The license fee shall be received by him before the license is so attested by him and shall be by him paid over promptly to the City Treasurer.

The Mayor shall have power to revoke any such license at any time if he shall become satisfied that the licensee has been guilty of misrepresenting in any way the character of the sale or of the goods, wares or merchandise sold. Section 4. Any person violating any of the provisions of this ordinance whether such person be acting as principal, or as agent or employe of a natural person, or as agent, employe or office of a corporation, shall be liable upon conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ninety days.

FESTIVAL OF FEAST OF THE TABERNACLES

Jewish Celebration Begins Tomorrow Night and Continues Eight Days.

Judiasm all over the world will begin tomorrow night the festival of the Feast of Tabernacles, which covers eight days, beginning on the eve of September 22 and ending on October 1. Once a year Israel revives its love of the soil and makes public avowal of the fact that even an industrial civilization such as the present, depends primarily upon the elements of nature. This restatement of love for and confidence in Mother Earth is indeed a fact of Jewish religiousness.

Judiasm is a religion in the very midst of the passions, aspirations and and complications of life. Nowhere are these more insistent than in the economic interests of men. Here religion has a duty as well as an opportunity. Judiasm endeavors not merely to fortify men in their difficulties as to the daily bread but also to keep them moral, large hearted and just.

The Sukkoth festival is meant not as a season of self-congratulation on having garnered in the product of the farm or the gains of business, but as time for thought on the larger-scoped social interests of men in the national and international life. The Jews are the first to have recognized political economy as the field where religion and morality must operate for the good of men. In its modern form the suggestiveness of this truth for the Sukkoth festival is made more effective by the fact that it occurs at the beginning of the autumn, coincident with the increased activities of the economic agencies. It is, as it were, a timely lesson for each one to interpret his life as of larger scope, related to the national life and made possible in the fulness only within it.

The "Dwelling in Booths" as characteristic of the Biblical phase of the festival and observed as an archaic symbolism nowadays, is a suggestive domestic ritual which reaffirms the lessons of the "simple life" and the democracy of the Jewish household. The five symbolic plants, bundled together, hint that, as the gifts of God in nature vary and in their totality make human life sweet and satisfactory so the difference among men, as to service and character, may serve to make "society" an organization in which each one has a place and can make a helpful contribution. Some more effective, some less, some noble and some commonplace, some for the day and some for all time, according to what they do and what they are.

The Sukkoth festival is the culminating lesson of the series of holidays of the month. It addreses itself to the facts of life which might, otherwise, be sordid. It widens the horizon of individual interests. It approves vocations and labors not when they bring private satisfactions but when they vitalize common humanity and make everyone more efficient in the work upon which depend the weal, the peace and the joy of the community.

GIRL DINES WITH LION; GUEST WRECKS TABLE

Miss Isla Tudor, twelve years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Tudor, of 380 Rugby road, Brooklyn, yesterday entertained at dinner and renewed previous acquaintance with "Baltimore" a large African lion, which attacked his trainer, Captain Bonovita, while with Bostock's, in Coney Island, several years ago. Plainfielders who attended the Johnny Jones Carnival here last year will remember the animal, as well as his trainer, appearing here for one week. Captain Bonovita also gave a lecture a few years ago in the Plainfield High School, at which time he told of his experience with the lion that tore his rigt arm completely out of its socket.

The dinner in question was served at the cage of "Baltimore" in the Prospect Park menagerie, where the lion has been a captive since his purchase by the Brooklyn school children and presentation to the city. The dinner was not without its thrills and women among the spectators feared for the safety of the child, who sat calmly eating her food within paw's reach of the lion. The latter did not become demonstrative until the girl gave him a pigeon impaled on a long handled fork. In his eagerness to grasp the bird, he dashed his paws between the bars and wrecked the table.

SENTENCE IS PUT OFF.

Changing his plea from one of not guilty to that of guilty, William Fergurson, charged with disorderly conduct on a trolley car, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city police court this morning and through his counsel, Francis J. Blatz, entered a request for a postponement of sentence. This was granted and the case was set down for next Monday, the defendant in the meantime being held in bonds of $50.

NOTT ENGINE CO. INACTIVE

here on February 8 and was unloaded by the fire department and taken to the Netherwood station.

Plainfield had contracted to purchase for $8,000 an engine that would give satisfactory service and pump water at the rate of 700 gallons per minute. When the Nott engine was officially tested it was found that it lacked about 20 gallons of the capacity guaranteed for it, and the city was asked to give the manufacturing company time in which to remedy the defect.

After much correspondence the fire committee from the Council entered into a new agreement with the Nott Engine Company, which agreement was approved by the Council as a whole and by the Mayor on the night of July 26, 1915.

It was an agreement between the "inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, and the Nott Fire Engine Company," in which the manufacturing company confessed its failure to deliver the engine under its contract, also the failure of the engine to come up to its guarantee when finally delivered. This was explained and excused in the new agreement by the statement that many minor changes and modifications tending to improve the engine were made after it was ordered. The new agreement provided that the engine should be sold for $6,500, instead of $8,000.

It allowed the city of Plainfield two months in which to test the engine in actual service and no rental was to be paid for this two months of use. If, after this trial, the engine was found to be satisfactory in every way, the city was to pay to the Nott company $3,250 on September 8, 1915, after which the engine was to be kept on probation for two more months. If it showed defects that could not be repaired by the motor company the $3,250 was to be returned and the engine removed without cost to the city, but it was specified in the contract that the Nott firm were to be given still further opportunity to make good any defects in the apparatus. After two more months the city was to pay the balance, provided the engine still gave satisfactory service. The Nott people were to make a surety bond for $3,000 to guarantee the repayment of the bulk of the first $3,250 in case the engine was not taken.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Swimming classes were opened this afternoon, special hours having been arranged for High School boys and those of other institutions.

Gymnastic classes for the boys opened today. The girls' classes will be opened tomorrow.

Classes in elective subjects were opened today. Mechanical and freehand drawing are among the optional subjects.

THOROUGHFARE COMPLETED.

The upper end of Watchung avenue to Johnston's drive has been treated to a coating of gravel and last week was turned over to North Plainfield as a completed job by Borough Street Commissioner Uhrhahn. The improvement is one which is greatly appreciated by those who have occasion to use Watchung avenue in driving to town. Gravel taken from the sewer trenches was used in the grading and filling, and the cost of the work to the borough did not exceed $200.

AGREED TO PAY DAMAGE.

His agreement to pay for the damage done to a traffic post and lantern at East Front street and Watchung avenue which he knocked over with his automobile truck, earned a suspended sentence for Harry C. Smith, a Dunellen truckman, when he was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in police court this morning.

Plainfield, N. J., September 20, 1915.

ORDER A NEW MACHINE.

Plainfield people need not worry about the city's money being spent for a fire engine that is unsatisfactory. The men who form the fire and building committee have no desire to purchase a white elephant for the Netherwood fire house, and they are fully cognizant of the true situation regarding that piece of apparatus. In common with a large majority of citizens we have much faith in Mr. Edgar and his associates on the fire committee, and believe that their final determination in the matter will be pleasing to the whole public.

The Daily Press today presents in its news columns some information regarding the Nott Engine Company. There is no criticism intended, but the facts are presented so that Plainfield people may know some "reasons why," in case the engine is returned to the Nott Fire Engine Company, which we believe should be done.

The order for the engine was given on July 22, 1914. Delivery was expected within three months, but it did not reach here until February 9, of this year. The machine is still the property of the Nott Company, because of numerous accidents to the apparatus and its failure to deliver the specified number of gallons of water. The city may purchase it if found satisfactory after an extended test period, but does not have to do so.

We do not believe that the Plainfield Fire Department wants any more Nott engines in its service, if there is to be the slightest doubt about getting parts on the shortest possible notice. No one wants to see the machine tied up for a week or more, while waiting for a part to come from Minneapolis. And perhaps the one wanted might not be in stock and it would be necessary to delay until a special casting is made.

The fire committee was thoroughly justified in giving the Nott Company an extra month for trying the machine out, but the result of the experiment one day last week, when it broke down while on a trial run, should convince the most skeptical that the Council cannot advertise too soon for new bids.

NOT WANTED HERE.

There can be no excuse for expressing sympathy for the "Holy Jumpers," after their action on Saturday night. Many Plainfielders, not fully conversant with the facts about the trouble which they had with an unorganized mob last June, criticised the police department for its part in that trouble, but there is only one side to Saturday's escapade, at which time the police were working under definite orders from Mayor Calkins.

These people have proven that they are law defiers, and the time has come to run them out of town. There has been no interference with free speech, and the Mayor and police have tolerated them much longer than has been the case in other nearby municipalities. They can point to no good they have done here. Those who stop to listen to them do so out of idle curiosity, hoping that perhaps there will be another disturbance like that of June. They preach nothing new, and their speakers are of the most commonplace variety, with no real arguments. In fact they remind one of a lot of simple minded persons who have come under the control of a leader shrewd enough to use them.

When they were asked to move from the corner of Second street and Park avenue, near the Plainfield Theatre, to a spot across the street, they refused to do so, although the police were fully justified in so requesting, because of the presence of automobiles taking people to the theatre. There was no intimation that the "free speech" privilege, which they have at times strained to the libel point, would be interfered with. It was merely a matter of police necessity and regulation.

Plainfield has had enough of these people. If they will not behave themselves, and continue to defy the authorities, they should be brought up with a round turn. When some of them were given a jail sentence at Somerville, the others immediately left town, and the people of that borough have not been bothered since. A little of the same kind of medicine is needed here. Undesirable citizens are not wanted, whether they pose as confidence men, pickpockets or religious fanatics.

An historical, biographical and industrial review of Warren County, published as a supplement to the Belvidere Apollo, has been received in this office. The supplement is unusually attractive from a typographical standpoint and is rich in interesting facts about Warren county history and its people. The Belvidere Apollo is the oldest paper in Warren county. Its present editor and owner, J. Madison Drake, Jr., is from a family of newspaper men and is one of the brightest and most progressive of his profession in the state. The Apollo supplement will be a valuable addition to the library in the editor's office of the Press.

The result of the extreme heat in one day in New York was four deaths, a number of sunstrokes and the following from the pen of Don Marquis, of the "Evening Sun:"

"A solemn thought comes to my mind;
I put it up to you—
Suppose your eyeteeth all went blind,
How could you see to chew?"

Henry Ford now offers to manufacture an efficient gasoline propelled submarine at less than half the cost of those in use. Going out after that $10,000,000 he gave to the peace fund in a hurry.

Sending out warnings of a killing frost when the thermometer registers more than ninety may be some people's idea of humor, but it's over our heads.

If Carranza victories continue, General Villa will soon be one of the warmest advocates of American intervention for Mexico.

WANT FIELDER AND SAUNDERS AS COLUMBUS DAY GUESTS

Phillipsburg, Sept. 20.—Invitations have been extended to Governor James F. Fielder, Sheriff Eugene Kinkead, of Hudson county, and William L. Saunders, of Plainfield, president of the board of directors of the Ingersoll-Rand Company, of this place, to attend the banquet to be held here the night of October 12 in connection with the Columbus Day celebration, which is being arranged by the civic organizations of the town.

The general committee arranging for the affair will hold a dance October 12 in Ortyia Hall to help defray some of the parade expenses. The next meeting of the general committee will be held next Thursday night in the Reliance Hose house.

Incense

I have smelled the rose's attar from the spicy, ricy East;
I have smelled the low-swung censers 'mid the tinkling temple-bells;
I've inhaled the peevish odor of a certain fur-girt beast—
All of which, you must acknowledge, are considerable smells,
But the stench I most remember, which engulfs me most in gloom,
Is the smudge of burnt fried onion, drifting through my hotel room.

I have whiffed the whiffsome garlic of the spade-propelling wop;
I have sniffed the booze-and-cloves upon the breath of woozy friends.
I have smelled the beer aroma in the breathing of a cop—
And you've got to hand it to 'em—these I mention are SOME BLENDS.
But the king pin of all odors, that reminds me most of doom,
Is the incense of scorched onions floating through my hotel room!

Secretary McAdoo talks of letting down the trade bars to South America. Ohio is wondering whether her bar trade is to be let down (or put down) by the statewide vote.

Bathing-Time Ends

Not regular bathing, you understand, but surf-bathing.

That is, it ends pretty soon.

The young lady who has been at the seaside, with her "appealing eyes and a peeling nose" will put on some more clothes and come home.

She has been dressing in a bathing suit that barely hid her appendicitis scar and feeling perfectly respectable, while if anybody saw her in a night-gown that completely hid all but her face and hands, she would be incurably scandalized.

American police have required that women going in bathing should wear stockings. They figure unrhythmically, that there couldn't be stocking and shocking at the same time.

Men are permitted to go stockingless into the Neptunian bathtub.

Where are women's rights—send for Emmeline and Sylvia!

If you have a best girl with whom you are seriously contemplating matrimony, take her to a summer resort and see her in a bathing-suit after she has been out and met a few high combers.

If her face looks all right to you after the kalsomine has been washed out and she is her real color, and if her figure looks presentable in those truthful togs, you're in love. Might as well marry her, if she'll have you after seeing you in your dip-duds.

But most of the best-lookers put on their bathing-suits to walk in on the dry sand.

Don't marry a girl who shows she fears to let you see her real shape and color.

The Young Lady Across The Way

The young lady across the way says that all things considered she's rather glad that the war subject wasn't up in the days when Mr. Bryan was president.

Health Talks

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Twenty Years Behind The Times

HEIGH—OH! What do you think of this? Here we have been busily casting ridicule and invective upon the grandmothers, figurative and literal, and endeavoring to sit in judgment upon the status of affairs medical, and now along comes a judge of a higher court and pronounces us twenty years behind the times.

It was this way. While the office stenographer was out matching up some ribbons we scribbled off a short article entitled "Calomel, The Doctors' Obsession" and boldly mailed it to the editor of the greatest medical journal in this or any other world. A few days later, much to our horror, back came the contribution with a kindly letter from the famous editor, who explained that, while the manuscript contained much that was instructive, etc., etc., still it did not quite, etc., etc.—you know what we mean. Then the editor went on to say that the article would have been very appropriate twenty years ago, but did we not realize that calomel is almost tabooed by the younger generation of medical men to-day?

Well, sir, you could have knocked us over with a post-card message. Wonder if the editor could have been trying our own medicine on us? If so, it is mighty unpleasant medicine and we don't blame our victims for getting as mad as they oft-times do. We were mad ourself. We were real angry, and we sat down and pounded off a scathing rebuke to that editor—some one in his office had committed the unpardonable crime of mutilating the manuscript by punching pinholes through it, a thing no editorial office can do with our manuscripts without hearing from us.

But anyway it is pleasant to know that the younger generation of medical practitioners is able to keep house without calomel. The young men are the ones that count in modern medicine. Nowadays, doctors do what they think is right, not what their medical ancestors believed was right. Calomel is on the scrap-heap, alongside of castor oil, where we think it belongs. The world revolves. It will arrive somewhere after a while. Medicine is a progressive art, though you would never suspect it by reading the patent medicine advertisements.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Minim Means Drop

What is the meaning of the term minim?

Answer—A minim is approximately one drop.

The Brown Haired Lady Rises To Speak

Have a heart. What of the brown haired readers whose locks are turning gray—would you leave us alone with our sorrow? Are the raven haired ones to monopolize your interest? A husband's thatch may be scanty and white as Father Time's, but does he really admire silver threads among the brown? Nay, nay. Time was when the way to keep a husband was to feed the brute, but in these days of affinities, the first commandment for successful housekeeping is "Doll up." So, please, dear doctor, open your big Irish heart and help restore our brown crown of glory.

Answer—We have it direct from Ponce de Leon: Boil to the consistence of an ointment 2 ounces of corticis fructus juglandis, half an ounce of galla contus, half an ounce of sodium chlorate, one ounce of orange peel and a quart of water. To dye the hair brown, saturate a cloth and pull a few strands of hair at a time through the cloth. Try it where it won't show at first, before you plunge. You know, there are divers shades of brown.

Dr. Brady will answer all questions pertaining to Health. If your question is of general interest it will be answered through these columns; if not it will be answered personally if stamped, addressed envelope is enclosed. Dr. Brady will not prescribe for individual cases or make diagnoses. Address all letters to Dr. William Brady, care of this newspaper.

By GEORGE FITCH

MOUNTAIN CLIMBING

MOUNTAIN CLIMBING is a method of playing tag with gravitation which is very popular with men who are tired of keeping up life insurance payments.

It was invented as a sport in Switzerland and is more expensive than golf or Kelly Pool. Class A mountain climbing costs $50 a day exclusive of the undertaker's charges.

Mountain climbing is very difficult to learn, like aviation, because the man who makes a mistake does not often get a second chance. But when the pupil has become proficient he loves it beyond all other sports and is not happy unless he is holding a mountain peak in both arms and shinning his way slowly aloft regardless of icicles.

When a mountain climber feels the fit coming on, he selects a tall, morose peak which has not been tampered with for some time. He then engages half a dozen guides and ties himself to them with a stout rope. Then he arises at 2 A.M., and after a light breakfast of coffee, rolls and frost bite, he walks seven miles in the snow to a point where the mountain rises straight up.

Here the mountain climber begins to enjoy himself. Sticking a finger in one crack and a toe in another he works slowly aloft, now and then holding on with his neck and ears, and feasting on the scenery below.

There is always plenty of scenery for the mountain climber. He can stop at any time and look down a mile or two. It is a great comfort to him to know that if he drops his cigar all he has to do is to let go and he will land beside it in a few minutes.

After the mountain climber has crawled up 11,000 feet of snow and ice, has hung over Europe by a rope

Playing tag with gravitation

a few times and has worn off his finger ends scratching toeholds in the granite flanks of the peak, he reaches the summit. After this he has no interest in the mountain and leaves it right away. Some climbers thoughtlessly remove a hand from the mountain to scratch an ear and reach the bottom in almost no time, but this is considered bad form.

Mountain climbing is more fatal than aviation, but not as dangerous as deer hunting in Wisconsin. It is also a much fairer sport, because the mountain has some chance.

Views Of The Press

Turkish Atrocities

THE atrocities now committed in Turkey surpass anything that has ever preceded, even in the palmiest days of Abdul the Arch Assassin. They are carefully planned and diabolically executed, and include torture of the most revolting types, murder by the wholesale and a venomous method of deportation that separates families and sends large numbers of the victims to inevitable death.

In one prosperous city twelve of the leading Armenian men were taken out upon the road under great pretense of deportation. In a few hours the guards returned alone. A few days later 300 more men followed the same path to death. This method is being duplicated everywhere in the interior of Turkey.

Women and children, old men and invalids are driven from their homes at the point of the bayonet and sent along different routes covering many days, even weeks of travel. No preparations for the journey are made or permitted. Children born upon the road are strangled by the mother, who is forbidden to lag behind the caravan of death. Those too ill are left alone by the roadside to die. One German woman following a caravan picked up fifteen children in one day thus left by their parents who could not carry them.

The women who survive the journey are scattered among Moslem families in Mohammedan villages where the alternatives before them are Islam or death. This method of extermination is going on from Smyrna to Persia and from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean. Some entire Armenian towns have been depopulated and Moslems from Macedonia have been brought in to occupy the houses.

A German official recently told an American who was traveling in the country that they were out to eliminate the Christian races in Turkey. They are succeeding and there is none to raise a protest. Turkey is now free to satisfy her thirst for blood and destruction and to carry out the suggestions made by her masters in Europe. Never in Moslem history has there been such a riot of crime and carnival of murder aimed at the annihilation of the Armenian and Greek races, whose only fault is that they are not Moslems.

People's Legal Friend

By E. R. BRANSON

Held Reasonably Responsible

Q. If one person, at the request of another, assumes the care and custody of some goods and other articles belonging to the second person, and is paid nothing for doing this, will he be legally liable if the goods are damaged or lost?

A. He is legally bound to observe slight care. It follows from this that he will be liable if the damage or loss is occasioned by gross negligence on his part.

It Won't Work

Q. If a man makes a deed to his property for the purpose of defrauding his creditors, is the deed good or is it void? A. Void.

Different State Laws

Q. I have occasion to transact business in several states. How may it be determined whether men owing me money are entitled to exemptions?

A. You would have to know the statutory law on this subject in the several states. Different states have different statutory provisions.

No Universal Law For Contracts

Q. In the case of a written contract between two persons, does the contract have to be signed by both?

A. Not always. It depends upon the nature of the contract.

Employer's Liability

Q. Is there an employers' liability or workmen's compensation law in every state? A. No.

Between Two Stools

Q. I was recently offered a position as an agent to handle certain manufactured goods. I find that my own interests would conflict with a proper discharge of my duties toward my employer. Do you think the offer should be accepted, or could it be legally?

A. It is an agent's duty to act in the interests of his employer. He represents the employer and steps into the latter's shoes. It is therefore improper for a man to act as an agent for another where his own interests conflict or where there is any circumstance inconsistent with a faithful discharge of his duties.

When An Agent's Authority Ceases

Q. Several months ago I was employed as a man's agent. This man recently died. Have I any further authority in connection with the business I was employed to manage?

A. Your employer's death ended the contract of agence between you, unless you have what the law calls a "power coupled with an interest."

Bomb Manufacturing; Not Allowed

Q. Is it lawful to insert in a lease a provision forbidding a tenant to use the building for objectionable trades? A. Yes.

Bank Must Know Signature

Q. Is a bank required to know the signature of a depositor? A. Yes.

When Molly Feeds The Ducks

When sunshine paints the sky with gold,
And crimson streaks the west;
When every bird has settled down
Into its tiny nest—
When evening quiet fills the farm,
My sorrows from me fall;
For, as I watch, the ducks come home,
To answer Molly's call.

The barnyard noise has died away
Into a drowsy hum,
The cows and pigs and horses wait
For supper time to come.
Ah, somehow as I stand and watch,
Life seems serene and sweet;
When Molly calls her feathered flock,
And gives them food to eat.

Pepper Talks

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

One Thing

One of the happiest omens of our time is this—that people are getting out of the habit of becoming "Jack of all Trades." Common sense and reason are helping to make bigger men and women. So much so that the proportion of great men and women is much greater to-day than at any stage of the world's history. People hardly realize this fact.

This is the reason. There are more people doing One Thing well to-day than at any other time.

It is good to be versatile, to so train yourself, that no matter under what emergency you may be called to act, there will be no hesitation in acting. But the big thing to your daily life will always be just how well you can do One Thing at a time—WELL.

For it is the One Thing at a time, done in the best way you know, that makes Big the One Thing by which you become known and by which your place in Business and Society and in Life is established.

Sometimes, I wish that the enthusiasm for a phrase such as "Safety First" might become quite as great for such a phrase as this, tacked up in the offices of the land and in every heart chamber of the human—"One Thing at a time—but that One Thing well."

Snap Shots

By Jay E. House

Contrary to general opinion, the West entertains no prejudice against the silk hat. Such odium as the West has cast upon this accessory to polite dress was the result of failure to stage it properly.

Suggestion to men: If you tell a vulgar story, do not make it worse by attributing the story to Abraham Lincoln.

We have noticed that a good deal of the life insurance is invested in second husbands.

The silk hat falls too often into the hands of those who are strangers to the art of scenic investiture.

The reason a married man hates to wear his good clothes is because he hasn't any.

Buck Kilby says if he is ever crushed to death it will not be by a mob formed for the purpose of shaking the hand of a great man.

A woman often looks as well as the display in a shop window. But a man never does.

Still, Luther Simlick, whose wooing cost him a thousand dollars, got off easier than most. The girl finally refused to marry him.

In vaudeville nearly all of the monologists are men. In private life nearly all of the monologists are women.

After she is engaged, a girl can see but one man. But, thank goodness, a man's sight is good as long as he lives.

Most of the mysterious things are fairly easy of explanation, but the little man's desire to dance with large women has never been cleared up.

"Do you see the pole star?" asked daddy.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Little Bear Chases His Tail Around the Pole Star.

"WHO wants a star story?" asked daddy, taking the kiddies on his knees.

"I—I!" cried the kiddies.

"Well, it's Saturday night, and you may sit up a little later, late enough to see the Little Bear."

"Will he bite?" asked Evelyn.

"No; he is millions of miles away, and he is tied to the pole star and keeps going around and around it, hundreds and hundreds of years."

"Does he get very tired?" asked Jack.

"No. Do you see the pole star?" asked daddy, pointing it out to the kiddies so they could find it. "The pole star marks the true north for us. It is in the very tip of the Little Bear's tail. See the four stars that make a box?

"They make the skeleton of the Little Bear's body. Two are in his shoulders. The other two are in his hips, so that the Little Bear always seems to be chasing his tail around the North star as he swings around the sky.

"This beautiful group of seven stars can always be seen every clear night."

"Will he be there in the north sky tomorrow night?" Evelyn wanted to know.

"Always there, and we can see him unless clouds hide him or it storms. He keeps traveling west, you see, until he goes all the way around his stake, the pole star."

"We see," said the kiddies.

"Sailors at sea, people who camp in the wild woods and those who get lost should always know how to find the pole star, for when we know how to find the true north it is a great help toward finding our way home. Will both you kiddies try to always remember how to find the pole star?" asked daddy.

The kiddies looked again to be sure and said "Yes."

"Years and hundreds of years ago, before captains knew as much about the seas as they do now, they sailed their ships over dangerous, unknown waters by the North star. And now who would like to know the star name for the Little Bear?"

"I—I!" cried Evelyn and Jack.

"Arcas," said daddy.

"What a funny name for an animal!" said the kiddies, kissing daddy good night and hopskipping into the house, for it was almost an hour after their bedtime, and the next day they were going to visit their uncle's wonderful farm.

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Well, Jaynes, this is our tent city," exclaimed Dick as they climbed out of the big car.

"It looks good to me," was the hearty response as Jaynes deposited his coat and collar on the seat and rolled up his shirt sleeves, beaming broadly on the company assembled by the camp fire.

"If I had my way, I'd never get inside hot walls and high collars in hot weather."

"This is Mr. Brice, the new bookkeeper at the factory. Dick presented the stranger to all the ladies.

"What you got here, croquet?" asked Jaynes, wandering around camp.

"We call that our summer billiard room; see the pockets in front of the wickets? We owe that innovation to our ingenious doctor here."

"Let's have a game till the feed is ready. I believe I could score at this billiard game. Take a hand, Clyde?" Jaynes turned to his son, who was dusting his patent leather pumps with his handkerchief.

"Why, I might," he condescended, evidently willing to make sacrifice to be good company.

When supper was called he carefully spread his handkerchief over the campstool to protect his immaculate white flannels.

"Did I tell you the joke on me?" asked Jaynes, giving his leg a resounding slap. "I spent last Sunday with my wife and girls at the lakes. I had a car load of people in with me. Some way they found out I was going out that night and asked me to ride, as the train had gone. When we drove up to the hotel they piled out and left the suitcases. I wanted to put up the car, so I grabbed the plunder and followed the girls. Their father was standing around in patent leather pumps and white flannels, like Clyde here." He waved his hand toward his son. "Some folks haven't any better sense than to go on an outing in such togs," he chuckled. "I set the suitcases down by the door and started off, when the elegant guy called out, 'Here, my man,' and slipped this quarter in my hand." He held out the coin. "Took me for a chauffeur or expressman, I suppose. Style isn't my long suit, you may have discovered." He shook his ample frame in a hearty laugh. Clyde did not join in the general merriment, but looked humiliated to the last degree. The father was evidently taking great delight in wounding his silly vanity.

"Let me fill that water pitcher," exclaimed the boy, glad of an excuse to leave the table.

While he was gone, the father slyly lifted the corner of the handkerchief and dropped some grapes on the stool.

"I'll teach him to wear white flannels to camp," he said, winking at Dick. "He may be willing to borrow something appropriate," he added, setting his lips.

Young Jaynes seated himself, after handing the pitcher to Mrs. Parsons with a bow intended to be graceful.

"What you fighting around about; are you nervous?" asked the father as the boy rose to examine his stool.

How did grapes get here?" he asked, gazing in horror at the purple stains on the handkerchief.

"I thought you were too careful where you sat to do a careless trick like that. You are a nice looking specimen," Jaynes comforted. The distracted youth sat down precipitately, flushing angrily at his father's laughter.

"You can take my rain coat," suggested Dick.

"I'll lend you a pair of hunting trousers," volunteered Scott.

"Why bother about the stains? You can have the flannels cleaned when you go into town, and here it doesn't matter at all how you look. You made your mistake in wearing anything decent to a camp." Mrs. Scott smiled reassuringly.

Now young Jaynes had had it borne in on his mind that Mrs. Scott's opinion was worth while, for they were rich and leaders of fashion in New York, and for her sake he had dressed as for a garden party when invited to visit their camp, and now his white flannels were ridiculous."

"Really, it's too dreadful to ask you ladies to ——"

"Forget it my boy, no one else will think of the stains, you may be sure." The doctor laid a friendly hand on his shoulder. But the self-conscious youth could not believe that all eyes were not fixed on him, and sat glued to his campstool all the evening.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

Music and its charms will be the attraction at Proctor's Theatre for the next three days when the Italian Musketeers will appear in a high-class vocal and instrumental act. To those who have been privileged to see and hear the musical acts at this house since the opening on Labor Day, nothing need be said concerning this presentation, save that it is up to a high standard. With this act are Watson and Little, in a comedy singing and talking act. Mr. Watson is probably the best known yodler on the American vaudeville stage. Such acts as these could only be secured by Proctor and Sanderson because of the connection with the United Booking Office, which is furnishing over 400 theatres throughout the country with entertainment.

The Three Juggling Bannans, the extraordinary marvels of motion, and jugglers of clubs, make their initial appearance here today. Their act is unique, and has a reputation of a high order, having appeared at a number of the larger metropolitan houses.

Some comedy is introduced into the program by the presence of the Cliff Dean Players in a comedy dramatic sketch entitled "The Editor." A magnificent chance to rid yourselves of the blues, and laugh while the opportunity is here at popular prices.

The program is completed with Tom Waters and Hattie Lorraine in a musical comedy skit entitled "The Turk and the Widow," and Mack and Sangster, the kid comedians, a well balanced program of music and comedy for patrons of the theatre. Feature photo-plays are being shown each day, with a change of the picture program every day of the week.

CHAPTER VII.

The Great Campaign.

"I THOUGHT I'd like to borrow ten—say a few thousand dollars," said Rodney, gulping at Mr Smith.

"No, sir; not a cent," said Mr. Smith "Perhaps five thousand," amended Rodney.

"If it was for a new club or some tomfoolery, in a minute, but to put into your business, it'd be just throwing it away. Why don't you get your father to back you?"

"Father and I don't agree on the value of advertising."

"Oh, that's it, and you expect me to do what your father won't?"

"Well, I thought as a friend of the family," stuttered Rodney.

"You were wrong. Where is your father?" asked the friend of the family.

"In there I guess," said Rodney.

"I want to see him. I guess he'll think this is as funny as I do." Mr. Smith laughed, going out, leaving Rodney sunk dejectedly in a chair.

"Well?" asked Peale coming in again.

"He wouldn't give me a cent," said Rodney.

"He wouldn't? Well, he sounds like your father's oldest friend."

"What about the countess?" Rodney inquired.

"Oh, I got her," said Peale proudly.

"You did? Ten thousand dollars?"

"Fifteen thousand. Pretty good, what?"

"Good? Why, why, I'll have to raise your salary," said Rodney.

"Thanks; I supposed you would," said Peale complacently.

"Where's the money?" asked Rodney.

"We don't get it till next week," explained Peale.

"Oh!" said Rodney dejectedly. "But we must have some more cash to start with."

Peale meanwhile must have left the ladies in some suspense or else they missed his cheery company, for presently Mary came back and said the countess wanted to know how much longer she must wait.

"Coming now," said Peale. "Shall I sign for you?"

"Sure! Sign anything—sign it twice!" said Rodney.

"You know this has got the show business beat a mile," Peale chuckled as he disappeared.

Rodney turned to Mary fondly, wondering if there were not some way in which they could raise some immediate cash. But Mary failed him now for once. She hadn't an idea, she admited sadly. But in the meanwhile Mr. Smith had emerged from the inner office, and something must have come over the spirit of his dreams of good investment, for he greeted Rodney very genially and encouragingly this time. Rodney introduced Mary to him with great pride, catching her back as she turned to go.

"That's all right. You needn't go, Mary. Mr. Smith, this is the future Mrs. Rodney Martin."

"You don't say so!" cried Mr. Smith heartily.

"I suppose you and father had your laugh at me," said Rodney.

"No, I didn't tell him anything," replied Mr. Smith.

"Thanks for that anyhow," said Rodney.

"Of course it sounded funny to me at first," pursued Uncle William, "but when I thought things over after all why shouldn't you be a success in business?"

"What?" said Rodney, hardly able to believe his ears.

"You've been successful in everything else you've tried," said Mr. Smith without a hint of sarcasm.

"Yes, yes, certainly, sure," said Rodney.

"Of course you haven't tried much, but, as you said, I am an old friend, and I figured that if you gave me your word that you'd return the money within a year, perhaps, after all, it would only be the act of an old friend to take a chance. That's what friends are for," explained Mr. Smith. "How much was it you wanted?"

Behind his back the delighted Mary held up the fingers of both hands.

"Ten thousand dollars," said Rodney promptly.

"But didn't you say"— queried Mr. Smith.

"Oh, I'm sure I said $10,000!" Rodney declared. "That's the very least."

"Um! Well, I'll mail you a check tonight," said Mr. Smith.

"I'll never forget it. I tell you, friends do count. Thanks, thanks," said Rodney.

Mr. Smith seemed embarrassed.

"That's all right," he said. "Don't thank me. Good night, Miss Grayson, and I hope you'll be very happy."

Left alone Rodney grabbed Mary by her two hands and danced around excitedly.

"Ten thousand, and he lent it to me! Oh, isn't it great?" he shouted. He kissed her on the strength of it.

"Wait till I tell Peale!" he cried and slammed out.

In the meanwhile the countess came back, her shrill French voice sounding through the door long before she appeared. "Oh, c'est une affaire magnifique! Je vous remercie. Oh, les Americains!" etc., she rattled on as she was bowed out into the hall to the elevator.

"What did she say?" asked Mary of the French maid.

"She said the American men are splendid, but the women are crazy and they can go to the dickens."

Mary recalled at last that she was to report to Mr. Martin herself. She proceeded to the door of his private room and knocked discreetly three times. The old gentleman came in promptly in response to this concerted summons.

"Well, how goes it?" he asked.

"Oh, Mr. Martin, he's perfectly splendid!" said Mary enthusiastically. "So full of energy, hustle and ideas. He's a different man already. You were right—he only needed development."

"Good! Good!" said Mr. Martin. "You're not saying this to flatter an old man's vanity, are you?"

"Indeed I'm not," said Mary.

"Would you rather take a guarantee of $2,500 additional and give up that 10 per cent of his profits?" he asked shrewdly.

"I should say not!" said Mary.

"You know, Miss Grayson, you're making me believe we'll win that $30,000 from old John Clark."

"Oh, indeed we shall! You should have just seen Rodney borrow $10,000 from Mr. Smith without the least trouble."

"Oh, that was my money," said Martin, smiling. "When Smith told me

"When you fail don't come sniveling back here."

Rodney tried to touch him—well, I thought the least I could do was to back my own son, so I sent Smith out to make good with him."

"That was nice of you," said Mary, outwardly polite, but inwardly disappointed at the deception.

"Well, I owed the boy a chance anyhow," said Martin, softening a little, then suddenly talking very sternly again as he caught sight of Rodney through the open door.

"So you're still hanging around, are you?" he grumbled, facing his only son relentlessly.

"Yes, sir, but I came to see Miss Grayson," said Rodney, coming in to his father perkily. "Come, Mary," he added to the new secretary.

"Really going into business, eh?" scoffed his father. "Well, when you fail don't come sniveling back here. You can't count on a dollar from me. You're leaving my employ, of course, Miss Grayson?"

"I won't snivel—and I don't want your money," retorted Rodney. "I don't need it. Why, if I'd known how easy it is to raise $10,000 I'd have gone to work long ago."

Mr. Martin, Sr., grinned at Mary.

"You would, eh? Well, what soft, easy going business have you picked out?" he inquired sarcastically.

"The soap business," said Rodney.

Mr. Martin, Sr., was genuinely annoyed.

"What? Why, you can't make any money out of soap."

"Oh, yes, I can."

"I control all the important soap business in the country."

"I know you do, but I am going to take it away from you."

"What?" roared Mr. Martin.

"Yes, sir, I'm going to manufacture the 13 Soap," began Rodney, spouting his piece, "unlucky for dirt—the most expensive soap in the world. I'm going to break the trust. I'm going to attack monopoly. I'm going to appeal to the American people for fair play against the soap trust. You've always wanted me to go into business. Well, I'm in, and forgive me, father, but I'm going to put you out of business. I'm going to advertise all over the world."

"You can't fight the soap trust with advertising; we're established," said his father coldly.

"Yes, yes, we can," said Rodney "Think what advertising means—the power of suggestion, the psychology of print. Why, 97 per cent of the public believes what it's told, and what it's told is what the other chap's been told, and the fellow who told him read it somewhere. Advertising is responsible for everything."

Ambrose Peale came in during this tirade and stood listening, surprised and pleased with his pupil's aptitude.

"People are sheep and advertising is the way to make 'em follow your lead," went on Rodney, trying not to forget the speech. "Say, what makes you go to the theater? I'll tell you. It's what you've read of the play or what some fellow's told you, and the fellow that told him read it in a newspaper. And that, father, is the whole secret of it. You've got to be talked about. Get 'em praisin' or cussin', but don't let 'em be quiet. I want to tell you— Say, what kind of duck's eggs do you eat?"

"What?" cried Mr. Martin, aghast.

"Do you know anything against the duck?" shouted Rodney. "No, you don't. But when a duck lays an egg it's a fool and keeps quiet, but when a hen lays an egg—cluck, cluck, all over the place. Advertising!"

Peale joined the chorus on the old gentleman's off side, and together they talked such a blue streak that Mary put her fingers in her ears.

The offices of the soap company were located about halfway down Broadway. There was a waiting room and a private office—as private as could be expected with three people using it. It was a rather commonplace room, furnished comfortably, but not elaborately. The walls were hung with posters extolling the virtues of 13 Soap, such as—

> DO YOU BELIEVE IN SIGNS?
> 13 Soap is Unlucky for Dirt.

> BE CLEAN.
> Cheap Soap is for Cheap People.

> 13 Soap is the Most Expensive Soap in the World—
> one dollar a cake.

One particularly large stand on one wall bore the legend:

> The average cake of soap gives you 56 washes.
> A Cake of 13 Soap gives you only 24—
> BUT > WHAT WASHES!

There was a door on the left of the room and also two more on the right At the back were windows, through which the callers could see the building across the street literally covered with 13 Soap posters.

There was a desk in the middle, and there were chairs, cabinets, a hat rack a water cooler, a safe, etc., which completed the equipment. The water cooler was much appreciated by the various errand boys, who were its chief patrons.

In a month from the time Rodney had left his father's house and embarked on his business career with Ambrose Peale there was a very fair show of activity in the 13 Soap Company's office. There was a fairly large mail—mostly circulars—which the entire office staff read through every morning, for lack of more interesting reading matter in the way of orders. Discipline was not yet rigorously enforced by anybody. Next to the circulars the largest part of the mail was invitations forwarded to Rodney from the Fifth avenue address uptown. In her capacity as secretary Mary, with her woman's curiosity, ran her steel envelope slitter through these, too, and sighed sometimes as she opened up some especially attractive bit of cardboard to think of the joys that Rodney had turned his back on.

Household Hints

THINGS WORTH KNOWING

TO KEEP LIQUIDS FRESH—Grape juice, ginger ale, fruit juice or any kind of liquid of like nature may be kept for any period if laid upon its side or placed bottom up. This is vouched for by a physician. Thus if the liquid covers the cork, the moisture will keep the cork expanded and there will be no room for the air to find its way in and ruin.

TO MAKE LACE LIE FLAT and form a circle for an oval or round centerpiece, roll lace very tight, tie and dip edge in water to shrink; when dry it is ready to sew to material.

WHEN SEWING ON MACHINE with very thin goods, if there is a tendency to pull or pucker, just lay a piece of paper under the goods and stitch through both. The paper may be torn away and the seam will be perfectly flat.

TO CLEAN WILLOW FURNITURE—Provide a coarse brush, dip it in a strong solution of salt and water. Scrub each piece well and dry with a soft cloth. The salt cleans and prevents from turning yellow. Straw matting may be cleaned in the same manner.

TO USE MEN'S SHIRTS after they have been discarded—They make very nice afternoon aprons, using the back for the front of apron and the front of the shirt for the sides. Will wear a long time.

THE TABLE.

Ham Croquettes—One cup cold boiled ham chopped fine, one cup bread crumbs, two cups cold boiled potatoes chopped fine, one teaspoon butter, one egg. Season with a little pepper. Make into balls, roll in egg and crumbs, fry in hot fat.

Fine Luncheon Dish—Slice raw potatoes, as many as required, put in pan, sprinkle with a little flour, a dash of pepper and salt, cover about three-quarters with milk; on this lay a few pork or lamb chops, and bake until potatoes are tender. Pork sausages are also very tasty, but do not put in until potatoes have soaked a quarter of an hour, as they will be too well done.

Raisin Cake—This is fine and keeps good in hot weather as well as cold. Take one egg, beat thoroughly, add one tablespoon lard, one tablespoon butter and three-fourths cup sugar. Beat well. Take one-half cup of the water in which you have boiled one-half cups raisins; to this water add one teaspoon soda, one and one-half cups raisins and one and one-half cups flour. Bake in moderate oven.

Lemon Pie—For two pies take three eggs; separate yolks from whites. Beat the yolks, pour in two cups milk or water, two tablespoons cornstarch, two lemons. Boil the mixture. Bake the crust, then pour the custard into the brown crust. For meringue: Beat the whites and pour in half cup of sugar; flavor, then put in oven to brown.

Lily Cake—One-third cup butter, one cup sugar, half cup milk, 1¾ cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, whites three eggs, one teaspoon vanilla; mix and cover with chocolate frosting.

Sunshine Cake—Eight whites of eggs, four yolks of eggs, 1¼ cups granulated sugar sifted five times, one cup cake flour with one-third teaspoon cream of tartar in flour, sift five times. Sift, measure and set aside flour and sugar. Separate the eggs, putting whites in mixing bowl (or large crock) and yolks in small bowl; beat yolks to a very stiff froth. Add pinch of salt. Whip whites to froth, add cream of tartar and whip very stiff. Add sugar to whites and fold in the yolks. Fold in the flour with one-third teaspoon baking powder in flour, and, lastly, fold in one teaspon vanilla. Put in pan at once (not greased) and bake in moderate oven about forty minutes. Both very good cakes.

Cottage Cheese Salad—Take fresh cottage cheese, add a few broken nut meats and a sweet green pepper cut fine; make into balls and roll in finely chopped parsley till the balls are all green. Place the balls on a lettuce leaf and pour over a little salad dressing. Serve with saltine wafers.

KRAMER TO RETIRE AS BICYCLE CHAMPION

Has Held Title for Fourteen Years—Too Old to Race.

Frank L. Kramer will retire from active competition in cycling races at the close of this season. He has held the professional cycling title for fourteen years, and he now admits that he has been overtaken by Father Time.

Kramer was born in Evansville, Ind., November 21, 1880. At the age of 15 he developed tubercular trouble, and to get the air his father bought him a wheel. Within two years he was a contender for the amateur championship. He succeeded in winning it in 1898, holding the title for two years.

In 1900 Kramer made his debut as a professional and finished second to Major Taylor for the American professional championship. He won the title in the following year, and has since held it.

In 1912 he entered in his world's championship race and won. That was the only time he competed in a world's title race, although during the twelve or fourteen years he held the championship against all comers and was considered the best man awheel.

ALBERT B. BEERS WINS TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP

Albert B. Beers retained the tennis championship of the Plainfield Country Club, which he won last year, when on Saturday afternoon he defeated T. M. Day, 3d, in the finals, 6-2, 8-5, 8-6. The match was an interesting one throughout and both contenders for club honors displayed excellent skill in the exhibition.

H. E. BLAZIER WINS CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP

Defeats W. P. Taylor 1 up in 36 Holes at Park Golf Club.

Harold E. Blazier won the golf championship of the Park Golf Club Saturday afternoon, defeating William P. Taylor, winner of the fall championship, 1 up in 36 holes. The match was won on the last hole. On the 27th hole, Mr. Blazier was 5 up on his opponent, but the latter cut down this lead considerably and the champion just barely got the match by 1 up. Mr. Blazier was the winner of the spring championship.

These cards were returned for the President's cup:

W. H. Nischwitz, 91, 17-74; F. C. Collins, 97, 23-74; H. L. Moodey, 95, 20-75; Harold E. Blazier, 82, 7-75; J. V. Beekman, 102, 25-77; Dr. H. K. Carroll, 92, 12-80; William P. Taylor, 88, 7-81.

In the play for the Officers' Challenge Medal, F. C. Collins and William H. Nischwitz, challengers, defeated R. G. Morse and R. C. Blancke, Jr., holders, 4 up and 2 to play.

CLINTON AVENUE WINS OVER HOPES, 16 TO 6

Slugging and Fast Base Running Featured Victory of Saturday.

Clinton Avenue defeated the Hope team Saturday by a 16 to 6 score, but was unable to advance in the percentage column because the T. A. B. S. were winning at the same time. The aggressive playing of the Clinton Avenues is shown by the fact that they made their sixteen runs off the same number of hits.

KRAMER TAKES THE FIRST OF CHAMPIONSHIP RACES

Frank Kramer got the jump on Alf Goullet in the series of three match races which are being run at Newark Velodrome to decide the national cycling championship by taking the first event, a quarter-mile titular affair, yesterday afternoon. The match was arranged on the best two out of three heats plan. Kramer won the first, and in the second Goullet was the winner, but he was disqualified for "switching," and the heat, as well as the match was given to Kramer.

After the race Goullet admitted he had "switched," but explained it by saying that the offense was not at all intentional. When Kramer was swung up the track after the "switch" he made no attempt to put up a fight to the tape but raised his hand in protest.

SEE RECORD SMASHED.

Jersey folks, including a number of Plainfielders, were out in goodly numbers Saturday to see the formal opening of the new two-mile Sheepshead Bay auto speedway. They were furnished with much interesting entertainment, chief of which was the exhibition by Dario Resta, who, in a Peugeot automobile, drove ten miles at the rate of 108.17 miles an hour. This was a world's record for automobiles of 300 cubic inches piston displacement or less. The old mark was 104.35 miles an hour, made in the first ten miles of a special match of 100 miles recently at the Chicago Speedway. Resto drove the ten miles Saturday in 5 minutes 32 4-5 seconds.

TWENTY-FIVE CENT FOOTBALL.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 20.—Following the lead of the Federal League owners, popular prices will be in force during the football season at Franklin Field this fall.

The entire east stand will be the bleachers and will be given over to the general admission. This move of charging 25 cents will mean that the lovers of the game will have an opportunity of seeing the warriors of Penn battle for their alma mater without the necessity of digging deep in their jeans.

DENNY ALLOWS BUT 2 HITS, AND TABS WIN

First Baptist Team Proves Easy in Fight for Second Place.

The pitching of J. Denny enabled T. A. B. S. to win an easy victory over First Baptist, Saturday, and settle the fight over second place. Denny allowed the Baptist hitters but two safeties during the nine innings and they got but one runner home, while the T. A. B. S. touched Dilts and Patterson for thirteen hits, which netted them nine runs.

The Farmer A. C. shut out the Highlands again Saturday, winning by 6 to 0. Sims allowed the Highland hitters but two safe ones, while Stebor gave up 6. Sims did not allow a hit until the sixth inning. The hitting of Ryan and Wall featured the contest, while Friel handled 14 chances without a misplay. Grasser Ryan hit a home run over the center field fence but was called out for not touching first.

SPECIAL HORSE AWARDS.

Co-operating with the National Horse Show Association, several breeders' clubs and societies are this year going to offer special prizes at the November exhibition in Madison Square Garden, New York, and it is the purpose of the managers to set apart for each of the breeds a day on which all important classes for that breed may be judged. This, it is thought, will add to the interest in the show by making it possible for those who are especially concerned about hackneys, for example, to attend on "hackney day," and with the assurance that they will be able to see the cream of the show in this division. There will be another day for the trotters, and other special days for the other breeds and types of horses.

MOVE ON FOOT TO DROP BASKETBALL

Question to Be Discussed at Meeting of A. A. U. Tonight.

That the game of basketball be dropped as an A. A. U. sport is included in the suggestions of the Registration Committee to be laid before the annual convention of the Metropolitan Association tonight. Statistics show that only one game was sanctioned last year. For a number of years the A. A. U. vainly tried to popularize the game and to keep it clear of professionals, but in vain.

Other suggestions are aimed to help along the spirit of amateurism. The Registration Committee thinks a minimum value should be placed on competitive prizes, and that a specified prize should be given for novice events. It is thought that clubs giving road races in future should have the course accurately measured, and in cases where the finish takes place on an inclosed track the runners should be asked to cover one lap of the track to avoid confusion.

The attention of the convention will be called to the plan of holding examinations for officials before they are eligible to act at any of the big meets. It is also suggested that in future all officials be selected from the A. A. U. list.

There will be no contest for vice-president as Terence Farley, Irish-American A. C., will not run, so Jake Stumpf will get the office unopposed. The Irish-American A. C. will support five men for the Registration Committee as follows: J. McKenna, Ozanam A. A.; C. Ericksen, Scandanavian A. L.; J. J. O'Hara, Caldwell F. C., Newark, N. J., and Harold Dibblee, Seventy-first Regiment. The fifth man is said to be P. J. Walsh, New York A. C.; George Matthews, Long Island A. C., and C. E. Elbert, Anchor A. C., Jersey City, former members of the committee, will run as independents.

FEDS SAY WORLD'S SERIES IS A FARCE

Want "O. B." Clubs to Give Them a Whack at Big Plum.

In a challenge sent yesterday to organized baseball for a world's series James A. Gilmore, president of the Federal League, waives financial interests, and offers to turn the Federal League's entire share of the receipts, win or lose, over to a charity designated by a tentative committee composed of President Woodrow Wilson and Mayors William Hale Thompson, of Chicago, and John Purroy Mitchel, of New York. Letters inviting them to serve in the event of acceptance by the National Commission of the independent's challenge were sent last week.

Contending that the best interests of baseball can be preserved only through competition such as a three-cornered series embracing all the major leagues would provide, Mr. Gilmore directed the challenge to the National Commission, leaving all details to that body. Following is a copy of the challenge:

"To 'Garry' Herrmann, the Hon. John K. Tener, and B. B. Johnson, members of National Commission:

"Gentlemen: On behalf of the Federal League I hereby challenge the winner of the series between the National and American Leagues of 1915 for a series of as many games as you may suggest, for the baseball championship of the world. The Federal League's share of the receipts, win or lose, to be turned over to any charitable organization selected by a committee composed of the Hon. Woodrow Wilson, the Hon. William Hale Thompson, Mayor of Chicago, and the Hon. John Purroy Mitchel, Mayor of New York.

"In my unanswered challenge of 1914 to you I fully elaborated on why the world's championship in baseball could not properly be decided without the Federal League being represented. Therefore no necessity of again outlining our reasons.

"I am sure that the American public want an undisputed champion of the great national game and not an alleged world's championship team.

"Awaiting the courtesy of a reply, I remain, yours truly,

"JAMES A. GILMORE,
"President."

Thansportation and all other expenses incurred by the Federal League pennant winners in participating in such a series as Mr. Gilmore suggests would be borne by the independent league, he explained. He insists that any one of five teams now in the thick of the Federal League pennant fight is capable of defeating any team or teams in organized baseball.

"In every other branch of sport competition is encouraged," commented the Federal League president, "and every effort is made to have honorably installed in each division a champion meriting the title.

"In organized baseball the chief aim has been to stifle competition and check the natural growth of the game to a point where it can be controlled by a few.

"American and National League teams cannot be literally considered as rivals in the national game. They do not compete for public support in any city where there are two teams in organized baseball and are therefore only business partners in one company. Unless the Federal League is given a chance to enter such a series there can be no bona fide world's title decided by games between members of the same baseball firm."

President Gilmore stated last night that he would be greatly surprised if the two major leagues did not recognize the Federal League challenge. He also stated that if they ignored it, the Federal League would claim the championship. Last year, when the Federal League challenged, the officials of organized baseball pointed out that the Feds were looking for the loser's end of the receipts. President Gilmore says that his organization repudiates any motive of this kind by offering to give the money to charity and by offering to defray their own expenses.

In answer to the argument that the rules of the National Commission prohibit clubs from playing with teams outside of organized baseball, President Gilmore cited a number of cases where major league clubs had played factory teams and teams which were in no way connected with any league of organized baseball.

PACKEY M'FARLAND LIKE THE REST OF THE FIGHTERS

SPORT PAGE

Recently Packey McFarland, who was mixed up in a disorderly affair with Mike Gibbons a week or two ago, made a statement that seems to be the text of present day pugilism.

"If I had thought there was the remotest chance of Gibbons handing me the K. O.," said Packey, "you may be sure I would never have signed the papers."

Lots of other fighters seem to feel this way about it. Few enough champs or title-holders of today are willing to take on a challenger of promise, meet him under fair and reasonable conditions and give him half a chance at the crown. In fact the behavior of most of them has been far from liberal in this.

Of course it is prudent in a fighter to guard with care the belt that makes him his salt. It is more or less pardonable in him to get all he can out of the title he has worked so hard to cop. But when the last word has been said in the matter it is generally admitted that most of the title-holders are a pretty stingy bunch.

Youngsters who come forward with real class and promise to make a neat battle for the belt, to entertain fight fans in a way that they are seldom entertained, are usually treated to sneers and snickers and told to seek more class. Meanwhile the champ signs up and fights with every appearance of anxiety and desperation some high school lad the public never heard of before and never will again. The sad thing is that all the champs manage to get away with this song and dance. And then when the time comes that they must answer public indignation they enter the ring with a real opponent and are too old to put up a fight.

Prizes won in the Newark city championships were awarded. William H. Schooley, formerly of Plainfield, received three gold medals, having three wins out of the four titular events.

By defeating the First Baptist team Saturday the T. A. B. S. won second place in the standing of the city league for the 1915 season. Not enough games are yet to be played to permit any other club to dislodge them from the position they now hold.

Clinton Avenue made a brave fight for second honors. They won Saturday and by a good margin, which was all they could do, but the T. A. B. S. refused to lose and the fast Clinton Avenue team must be satisfied with third place. The Netherwood team finished its schedule Labor Day and retired with the pennant, leaving other teams in the league to fight it out for honors that remained.

If the First Baptist team shows a spurt and wins both of the games it is yet to play it can come out of last place, but the Hopes are determined to stay in fourth and they can do it with a single victory.

to the New York business man to open an account with us. Our reason for repeating it is a purely business one—

WE CAN MAKE IT PAY YOU

That is an argument that carries real weight with it and that is supported by the following proposition: the free collection of out of town checks; 3% interest on daily balances of $500.00 or more; and when an account warrants it, the privilege of having checks on this Company accepted at par in New York. We cordially invite you to open an account with us.

BONDING COMPANY TO FINISH WORK

Forfeited Contract on Harrison Avenue School to Be Made Good.

BOARD ACCEPTS OFFER

H. I. Cuff, Representing Bondsmen, Says There Will Be No Further Delay on the School—Creditors to Be Paid in Full.

At a special meeting of the Borough Board of Education last night, a representative from the New England Equitable Insurance Company, with which the New England Casualty Company has been merged, was present and offered to finish up the work on the Harrison Avenue School as bondsmen for L. Belluccio & Brother, the general contractors, who have thrown up the job. The company's proposition was formally accepted, and the work will be taken up again, possibly today, and pushed to an early completion.

There was a full attendance of the Board last night, the matter being of so much interest as to call out every member. President J. H. Cooley was in the chair. Owing to the absence of the clerk, Frank Rowley, Maurice McGrath was made clerk pro tempore. As a preliminary to the real business of the meeting, it was reported that personal service on L. Belluccio, to the effect that the Board had terminated his contract because of failure on his part to heed a three-day notice to continue the work when he stopped a month or so ago, had not been possible as Belluccio was out of the State. Service had been made upon his wife, at his home, however, and also at the contractor's office in Elizabeth.

H. I. Cuff, of New York, the attorney for the bonding company, entered the Board room a little late. His company bonded the contractors for the full amount of the contract and will see that the work is finished and all bills paid. A proposal to that effect was drawn up by Mr. Cuff, submitted to the Board, and formally accepted. The architects, John M. Pierson & Son, of Perth Amboy, will supervise the work.

Isaac P. Runyon, representing the Borough Board of Education, and Mr. Pierson, from the architect's office, were present last night. A little figuring on the part of Mr. Pierson showed that Belluccio left work undone which he had not awarded to sub-contractors, which will cost about $650 to finish. This the bonding company will have done. The company will also see that all the sub-contractors are paid any balance due them on their sub-contracts. Such a proposal had already been made to each of them individually and informally accepted. Mr. Cuff will seek formal acceptance of the proposal from each one but the lack of this will not hold up the work, Mr. Cuff declared.

It was stated at the meeting last night that the borough is losing thirteen or fourteen dollars a day actual cash because the school building is not ready for use. This loss is represented by the allowance made by the State and is based upon school attendance. As long as the children who will attend that school are out the State will not pay the allowance. There is also a charge made for a watchman there every day.

The Board is very anxious to have the building finished. Some last night were optimistic enough to predict that the school would be ready for use next week, but others were not so sanguine. A practical man said that two or three weeks would be needed to complete everything.

EIGHTEEN CASES LISTED FOR TRIAL

Somerset County Courts Opened for September Term Today.

PARKER ON THE BENCH

Charles Jensen and Frank Vitelli Apply for Wholesale Liquor Licenses in the Borough—Regular Applications Are Renewed.

Eighteen cases, a comparatively small number, are listed on the Somerset county court calendar for the September term which opened this morning, eight causes being assigned to the Supreme Court, nine to the Circuit Court and one to the Common Pleas Court. Justice Parker charged the jury this morning making reference to the two murder cases before the Somerset courts this term, laying particular stress on the right of a councilman or member of any municipal governing body to accept and consummate a contract for labor in his town or district. Just why this last point was dealt with is a matter of considerable interest to those attending court proceedings but the appropriateness of the justice's remarks were commented upon by many inasmuch as he neglected to qualify them.

The following cases of local interest are listed: Supreme Court, Henry Capes Brass Foundry Company, represented by Isaac P. Runyon, vs. William J. Cunningham; Circuit Court, Zeek Baking Company of Plainfield, vs. the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company; David Bust vs. Charles G. Westlecrast, represented by Winfield S. Angleman.

Included in the list of wholesale liquor licenses granted to dealers in Somerset county this morning were the following from North Plainfield: Henry Huarand, V. N. Hoerster and Morris Latzko. The applications of Frank Vitelli and Charles J. Jensen, of North Plainfield, for hotel licenses, will be considered on October 1 and 8, respectively.

JURY DISAGREES IN EXCISE TRIAL

Reported That the Final Vote Was 10 to 2 for Acquittal.

After deliberating on testimony during the entire night the jury in the trial of the members of the Elizabeth Board of Excise, charged with malfeasance of office, through Foreman Peter McDonough, of this city, at nine o'clock this morning reported that it could not reach an agreement. Union county authorities said this afternoon that it is not likely that the case will be retried.

Sensational developments, prompted primarily by questions put to witnesses yesterday by Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., of the local law firm of Reed and Hetfield, who with former Prosecutor C. Addison Swift, conducted the defense, featured the trial. Excise Commissioner William J. Dunn, one of the defendants, being responsible for the statement that Mayor Victor Mravlag, of Elizabeth, gave false testimony. Each of the other defendants reiterated Dunn's words when cross-examined by Prosecutor Alfred A. Stein, who had charge of the prosecution.

SOLD PAIR OF SHOES ON SUNDAY, FINED $2

Somerville, Sept. 21.—David Granetz was fined $2 and costs here today by Justice John Burns for the sale of a pair of shoes on Sunday, September 5. The fine was paid. Judge C. E. Case, who represented the defendant, in making a plea for his client, said that there was a trace of personal spite in the prosecution.

TYPEWRITER STOLEN.

The local police were last night requested to keep an eye pealed for a man who stole a typewriter from the law office of Paul Oliver in Westfield, yesterday. Mr. Oliver describes the culprit as being a smooth talker wearing a blue suit and blue hat and having light wavy hair. The suspect is about five feet, eleven inches in heighth and weighs about 150 pounds.

PLAINFIELD DELEGATES

Big Demonstration at Union Hill Thursday Night — Convention Opens Tomorrow—Locals Charter Autos.

Indications are that the Plainfield police department will be well represented at the annual convention of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association which will be held in Union Hill tomorrow and Thursday. Several automobiles have been chartered by the local coppers to take them to the affair and it is probable that the largest delegation will take in the elaborate program planned for Thursday night when the annual ball will be held.

More than 3,400 policemen, members of departments of forty-two New Jersey municipalities, will attend the convention. The business session will be held tomorrow morning, Patrolmen Cornelius McCarthy, Tobias Nolan and Arthur McGinley being the accredited delegates from the Plainfield branch of the association, of which Nolan is the president. Tomorrow morning's session will be held in Lafayette Hall, West Hoboken, and Thursday the affair will be transferred to Scheutzen Park, Union Hill.

Between 1,000 and 1,200 invitations to officials and other men of prominence in all parts of the State have been sent out, and the attendance on the two days is expected to

CLAIMS HE FAILED TO PAY ALIMONY

Mrs. Emma E. Orchard Seeks to Have Her Husband Adjudged in Contempt.

William A. Coddington, representing Mrs. Emma E. Orchard, of this city, who was granted a divorce from her husband, John E. Orchard, will make application on October 4, before a vice chancellor, in Paterson that Orchard be adjudged in contempt for failure to pay his wife the alimony as stipulated by the court.

The case was to have been heard before Vice Chancellor Lewis, in Jersey City, yesterday, but owing to the absence from the country of Judge Erwin, of Jersey City, Orchard's counsel, who is detained in the Panama Canal by a landslide, the case had to be postponed.

Orchard sued his wife for divorce two years ago, and Mr. Coddington, representing the wife, filed a cross bill and the divorce was granted to Mrs. Orchard. The decree carried alimony.

JEWISH RELIEF WORK NOW IN FULL SWING

The Jewish Relief Committee, representing every Hebrew organization in the city, is now in full swing and held an interesting meeting in the Y. M. H. A. rooms last night. Reports of the work conducted under its auspices were read and proved most gratifying to all interested in the work. Starting with a collection of about $12 weekly it now has reached almost $10 and quite a number have not as yet been reached.

Anyone may become a member of the committee by paying ten cents weekly up to as much as one desires to subscribe for himself, in weekly payments. This plan has been conducted throughout the country in an effort to raise funds for the needy ones in the warring countries. Already $250 has been sent to the Central Relief Committee in New York. The local committee is working in conjunction with the American Jewish committee in distributing this money throughout Europe and Palestine.

DRUNK, FINED $5.

Michael Gronz, 59 years old, of Dunellen, was arrested by Marshal Pope, of the borough police force, yesterday afternoon for being drunk and disorderly on Chatham street. A fine of five dollars was imposed by Recorder Hand this morning. He paid.

ITALIAN STEAMER ASHORE.

NEARLY DROWNED IN HIGH SCHOOL POOL

Herman Ransome, Victim of Prank, Rescued by Gustave Waglau.

Herman Ransome, colored, a freshman at the Plainfield High School, narrowly escaped being drowned in the High School swimming pool yesterday afternoon. He with several other boys were standing along the pool, when someone pushed him into the deepest part of the pool. Ransome was unable to swim and floundered about excitedly. He went down twice and was just about to go under the third time, when Gustave Waglau, who is an expert swimmer, jumped in and saved the lad.

Ransome was about exhausted and it was several minutes before he was fully resuscitated and able to go home. Waglau, his rescuer, is a Boy Scout, a member of the Y. M. C. A. and during the past summer was a member of a life-saving corps along the Jersey Coast.

BIG CONCERN READY TO OPEN NEW STORE

United Cigar Stores Company and United Drug Company to Occupy Building.

Construction work on the United Cigar Stores Company building being erected on the Gloekler property at West Front and Somerset streets is rapidly nearing completion and an official of the cencern in the New York office this morning stated that it would be ready for occupancy October 1. The floor space on the ground floor will be devoted to the United Cigar Stores Company's business and that of the United Drug Company, portions of the big store being set aside for each enterprise.

Huge plate glass windows have been installed on the two sides of the store and it presents an attractive appearance, forming a marked contrast to the old landmark which formerly adorned the site.

LOCAL MAN'S SUIT REVEALS CONDITIONS

Emerson E. Parvin Starts Action Against International Company.

How the European war has affected trans-Atlantic commerce is reflected in papers filed in the Trenton Court of Chancery in the suit brought against the International Mercantile Marine Company by Emerson E. Parvin, of this city, alleging insolvency. The company owns the American Line, which flies the American flag; the White Star Line, the Red Star Line and the White Star Dominion Line.

Phillip A. S. Franklin, of New York city, has been appointed receiver and in a statement made today he said: "As the business of the company is international in character the much disturbed situation abroad has naturally greatly complicated and considerably disturbed the ordinary business of property and steamers in the hands of the received.

"The European war made it necessary to discontinue the steamship services between the United States and the ports of Southampton and Antwerp, which the company had heretofore maintained."

S. EDWARD VANHOESEN WEDS MISS BELLE MELICK

Miss Belle Evelyn Melick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Melick, of Mt. Picasant, and S. Edward VanHoesen, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. G. VanHoesen, of Fanwood, were married at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the home of the bride's parents. The affair was a quiet one, the guests being limited to the members of the immediate families and a few intimate friends. Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, this city, performed the ceremony. There were no attendants.

An informal reception followed the ceremony and later in the afternoon the couple left for Atlantic City, where they will spend their honeymoon. They will live with the bride's parents upon their return. Mr. VanHoesen is an electrical engineer in the employ of the Public Service Corporation in this city.

BETTER LIFE OF SERVICE URGED

Judge Robert Carey Makes Eloquent Address Before Dutch Arms.

'WHAT FOR?' HIS TOPIC

Alfred C. Estes, Secretary of Y. M. C. A., and Eric Moralier Also Speak—Assemblyman W. N. Runyon Guest of Honor.

Judge Robert Carey, of Jersey City, and Assemblyman William N. Runyon were guests of honor at the meeting of the Dutch Arms (Men's Club) held last night in the basement of the Trinity Reformed church. The meeting was the first of the fall season and it was attended by more than 125 members of the club in addition to the band.

"What For?" was the subject of Judge Carey's address and he delivered a direct, eloquent, human appeal to the men present for better living—for a life of service. His talk was rich with personal experiences of five years spent on the bench of Hudson county by a man who really understands, or strives to understand, human nature.

"Do you know what I think is the most beautiful part of the Bible?" Judge Carey asked. "'I was a stranger and you took me in.' There it is men. 'I was a stranger and you took me in, I was a hungered and you fed me, I was naked and you clothed me.' It is the essence of Christianity. And remember, 'Even so much as ye have done it unto one, the least of these, my brethern, ye have done it unto Me.'"

BUTCHER WILL HAVE TO LIVE UP TO LAW

Abram Deutsh Fined $5 and Given a Severe Reprimand in City Police Court.

Abram Deutsh, a butcher doing business at 511 West Third street, was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city police court this morning on three complaints made against him by Inspector John J. Casey, of the local Board of Health. Martin Stutsman, who represented the defendant, entered a plea of guilty and asked for leniency. The prisoner was fined $5 and reprimanded by the court.

Deutsh has been arrested previously on similar charges and he was told that a reoccurrence of the trouble would mean the imposition of a heavy fine or jail sentence. President Davis, of the Health Board, and Health Officer Chandler explained to the court that it was not their intention to have the man heavily fined but that they wanted it made plain to him that he would have to live up to the regulations of the Health Board if he wanted to continue in the butcher business here.

Casey charged the defendant with allowing chickens to be killed between the houses located at 511-13 West Third street and spattering the buildings with blood and feathers, and cutting the head off a calf in his shop and leaving the refuse lying on the floor.

MISS ABBIE A. DORGAN BRIDE OF JAMES HURLEY

A quiet wedding took place yesterday at high noon in St. Mary's church, when Miss Abbie A. Dorgan, of Arlington place, became the bride of James C. Hurley, of North Plainfield. Rev. Bernard M. Bogan, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony. The bride, who was gowned in a traveling suit of London gray with hat to match, was attended by her cousin, Miss Kathryn O'Keefe. John Geary, a cousin of the groom, was the best man.

Immediately following the ceremony the young couple left for Buffalo and Niagara Falls, after which they will visit the groom's parents at Athens, Pennsylvania. On their return they will reside in the West End section of the city, where a newly furnished home awaits them.

WHEEL HAD NO LIGHT.

Levitt Bagley, who says he came here recently from Havana, Cuba, was arrested on East Front street, last night, charged with riding a bicycle without a light. Arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city police court this morning the man admitted the charge but pleaded ignorance of the law. Sentence was suspended upon his promise not to repeat the offense.

FATHER WEEPS AS CHILD TAKES DOLL

Pathetic Scene When Arthur Murphy Meets His Daughter Lydia in Court.

ACTION IN CHANCERY

Vice-Chancellor Lewis Re-affirms Previous Order That Parent Be Allowed to See His Child Alone at Frequent Intervals.

In the habeas corpus proceedings instituted by Arthur Murphy, of this city, against his wife, Lydia A. Murphy, for the purpose of compelling his wife and others to permit him to visit his six and one-half-year-old child, Lydia, Vice Chancellor Lewis, in Chancery Chambers at Jersey City, yesterday, emphasized the order granting Mr. Murphy that permission and issued in the early summer. In case the mandate of the vice chancellor is disobeyed, William A. Coddington, who represents Mr. Murphy, will proceed to have Mrs. Murphy and those aiding her in preventing the father from visiting his daughter, brought up on a contempt order on a rule to show cause why the injunction of the vice chancellor should not be carried ont.

Mr. Murphy, his wife, the child, the children's nurse, Miss Bessie Brodie, and Mrs. Murphy's brother, Marion S. Ackerman, were all in court when the case was called yesterday. Barrett & Barrett, of Newark, represented Mrs. Murphy.

Mr. Coddington presented the matter to the vice chancellor and told how all the previous court orders had been disobeyed by Mrs. Murphy. He said that Mr. Murphy had been prevented from seeing his child alone as the court had ordered. Mr. Coddington requested that the vice chancellor instruct Mrs. Murphy and all others concerned that Mr. Murphy be allowed to see the child alone at frequent intervals and also be allowed to take his mother with him on some of these visits.

Then Mr. Coddington asked the vice chancellor to go into his private room with the child and the counsel for both sides, to which he agreed. In reply to questions, the child said that the nurse did not like her father and had told her he was a bad man. Asked if the father had ever done anything to her, the child declared that he had not, only urged her to go away with him. In answer to another question, she denied ever seeing her father do anything around the house which she didn't like.

At this point Mr. Murphy was called in and a pathetic scene followed. He attempted to kiss the little girl, but she resisted his first efforts. Finally she consented to allow him to kiss her and accepted from him a doll which he had bought for her several weeks ago and had not been able to give her. In the conversation with her which followed, Mr. Murphy broke down and wept.

The visit over, the child went back to her mother. Resuming his seat, the vice chancellor ordered that Mr. Murphy be allowed to see his child alone at least once a week and also to take with him on such visits his mother and child's grandmother. Permission was granted the mother to place the child in school in New York and also to take her away from the city for a time. Mr. Murphy claimed that he had been denied seeing his child four times lately despite the order of the court made early in the summer.

POSTOFFICE CORNER-STONE TO BE LAID OCTOBER 9

The corner-stone of Plainfield's new Federal building on Watchung avenue will be laid Saturday afternoon, October 9, and will be in charge of the Grand Lodge of Masons of New Jersey. The principal address on that occasion will be made by former Congressman Charles N. Fowler, of Elizabeth. It is expected that a number of city and county officials will be present as guests.

LITTLE HOPE FOR RUSSIAN ARMY

German Circle of Steel is Drawing Tighter Each Day.

FRANCE TO RESCUE

Roads Which Feed German Front Shelled by Allied Artillery to Reduce Pressure in the East—Bulgaria Mobolizes Army.

London, Sept. 21.—On the entire front in France and Belgium the Allies are controlling by means of their superior artillery the roads which feed the German front and are preparing attacks on a large scale at several points, especially against the St. Mihiel salient. The success of these efforts, it is hoped, will result in lessening the pressure against the sorely tried Russians in the east.

Despite the rapidity of the German movements to close completely the ring about the Russians in the Vilna region, the latter have still kept open their line of retreat toward Lida. The Germans have narrowed this space, however, and the situation of the Russians is precarious, although it is believed that they still have a chance to escape capture or destruction.

For three weeks the French guns have been employed to shatter the German field works. The official reports have told of no special advance at any point, but it is now apparent that the bombardment has enabled the French to move their artillery to points where a rain of shells can be kept up on the roads well back of the German lines. This fire is particularly fierce on the roads within the St. Mihiel salient, on both sides of which the bombardment is being maintained incessantly.

U Boat Sinks Steamer.

The British steamer Linkmoor has been sunk by a German submarine. The crew took to the boats and were picked up later. The Linkmoor was the largest ship that has fallen victim to a U boat in the recent operations in the war zone. The steamer displaced 4,306 tons. Its home port was London.

War Orders For Shoes.

Brockton, Mass., Sept. 21.—The E. E. Taylor Co., of Bridgewater, and the J. M. Herman Co., of Millis, have taken contracts to supply the Russian government with 3,500,000 pairs of army shoes during the next six months.

Germans Tighten Wedge.

Berlin, Sept. 21.—German troops are now moving rapidly eastward toward Minsk to cut off the Vilna army of Russia from its only means of escape. The General Staff reported today that the right wing of General Eichorn's forces had reached the region east of Lida and northeast of Novo Grudok. These troops have apparently cut the Lida-Petrograd railway and are headed for the Vilna-Minsk line, over which the Russians are retreating from Vilna.

Bulgaria Is Mobilizing.

Bulgaria's army is being mobilized, according to a despatch from Sofia. All railroad lines have been taken over by the War Office for the transportation of troops.

Violent Fighting Near Arras.

Paris, Sept. 21.—The following communique was issued by the French War Office today:

"Last night saw a bombardment conducted by both sides and violent at all times to the north of Arras. To the east of Noulette and Lorette and in the sector of Neuville our batteries directed showers of shells in an efficacious manner upon the enemy's positions. To the east of the Bethune highway, a reconnaisance sortie from our trenches resulted in the capture of a few prisoners. On the canal between the Aisne and the Marne we gained a foothold on the right bank. On both sides of the post of Sapigneul the enemy made fruitless counter attacks and was forced to fall back, leaving on the ground a score of bodies and his supply of grenades. In the Vosges appreciable progress is reported. One of our dirigibles bombarded last night the branch line railway at Amage, Lucquy, to east of Rethel."

ANTI-SUFFRAGIST PRESENTS ARGUMENT

Enthusiastic Meeting is Held in the Whittier School, Dunellen.

A large audience in the Whittier school, Dunellen, heard an adress on "Woman Suffrage" by Mrs. Goodwin, of Westfield, last night. Mrs. Goodwin spoke in place of Dr. Oliphant, of Trenton, the Anti-Suffrage leader in New Jersey, who was unable to be present. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Dunellen Board of Trade. Early in the summer two advocates of Woman Suffrage presented their side of the question at the invitation of the Board of Trade, so the Board has made it possible for both sides to be heard.

Despite the fact that a large delegation from the Dunellen and New Market Equal Suffrage League were present; it was an enthusiastic anti-meeting. Mrs. Goodwin proved a fascinating speaker and presented her arguments in a forceful way.

She stated that if the pro-suffragists favored restricted voting by both sexes the measure would secure support from a large number of the antis. She showed that more than 50 per cent. of the working women are opposed to woman suffrage. Mrs. Goodwin stated that in the school election districts where women have the right of suffrage only two per cent. vote. At the cost to the State of $800,000, women are given a privilege which, after having gained, they immediately cast aside.

"Some people argue," Mrs. Goodwin said, "that women who pay taxes should have the right of suffrage, but only 10 per cent. of the women who would be eligible to vote own taxable property."

In answer to the argument of the suffragists that women voters would only need to take fifteen minutes from their home duties to permit them to cast their votes, Mrs. Goodwin said that the women of the State would have to take part in political fights also if their voting influence were to become of any benefit.

The local Equal Suffrage League distributed pro suffrage literature at the door of the schoolhouse prior to the opening of the meeting.

Following the address of Mrs. Goodwin, the Board of Trade discused the annual banquet.

A letter received from a shirt waist factory desiring to secure a location in the neighborhood was referred to the manufacturing committee.

One of the pleasant features of their visit in Jackson Center was a reunion of the Polan family with all the immediate relatives.

WILLIAM THORNTON SAID TO BE LOGICAL CANDIDATE

One of the leading Democrats of the township when interviewed yesterday as to the outcome of the contests on primary day said: "The only contest in our ranks is that of William H. Thornton, of South Plainfield, and John Evans, of this place, for tax collector. Mr. Evans entered the field after the Democratic leaders of this township had unanimously agreed upon William M. Thornton as the logical man in their ranks for the nomination. When Mr. Evans took this step he certainly made history. As far back as man's mind goes there has never been a contest in the township for a Democratic nomination and my personal opinion is that there will not be another one for a good many years as I look for Mr. Evans to be defeated on primary day."

PHTHISIS WEEK TO BE OBSERVED

Extensive Program of Education Planned by Anti-Tuberculosis Society.

THREE SPECIAL DAYS

Medical Examination, Children's Health Crusade and Tuberculosis Sunday—Interesting Report of Work From Clinic.

"Tuberculosis Week" instead of Tuberculosis Day, will be observed this year with renewed emphasis on the elasticity of the movement. Announcement of this fact was made at the meeting of the executive committee of the Anti-Tuberculosis League held in the Babcock building last night. The campaign against the disease is scheduled for December 6 to 12, inclusive, and the committee in charge of the work is planning at least three special days, namely: "Medical Examination Day," "Children's Health Crusade Day" and "Tuberculosis Sunday."

Medical Examination Day, probably on Wednesday, December 8, will be the initial effort on a national scale to induce every person to have an annual physical examination. The importance of such an examination in its relation to the detection of early tuberculosis need not be enlarged upon. Plans for this day would include arrangements whereby those not able to pay doctor's fees could obtain a free examination at a dispensary or otherwise; also that those who could not be examined on Wednesday make appointments for other days.

Children's Health Crusade Day on Friday, December 10, will be devoted to interesting school children in health plays, in compositions, essays and orations on matters of public health, especially tuberculosis, and in the sale of Red Cross seals.

The culmination of the week's campaign will be Tuberculosis Sunday, when it is hoped to interest the churches and religious organizations of every community in presenting the subject of tuberculosis either by sermon, a brief talk, an announcement or a printed message.

The report from the clinic and the nurse of the league was most interesting, 1,873 visits being recorded by the latter, from January 1 to August 30. During the year 40 tuberculosis cases were reported to the nurse from the following sources: 10 by physicians, 2 applicants to office for Glen Gardner, 7 discovered at tuberculosis clinic, 6 through relatives of patients, charity organization 3, 1 from hospital, and 11 were retained on the nurses' list after investigation for the Board of Health. Twenty were admitted to sanatoria; 12 are in sanatoria at present, 2 are on the waiting list, 7 have died since being registered and 4 have left the city. The total number of patients on nurses' record from 1906 to 1915 is 423. Of this number 173 have since died, and 88 left the city. From January to August 30, the nurses have visited 2,993 patients of the clinic.

In the medical report of the Open Air school, the figures showed a total gain of 67 pounds in weight, making an average gain of 3 3-10 pounds per child during the last session of the school. No child lost weight and but one remained stationary. Fourteen children went to the general clinic of the hospital, 13 to the dental clinic, 4 to the nose and throat clinic, 5 to the eye clinic, 1 to the skin clinic, 1 to circumcised clinic and 8 children had chicken-pox.

The outbreak of chicken-pox is presumably due to the fact that a boy, apparently recovered, had a second outbreak of the eruption a few days after his return to school, and scattered the infection about while undressing for his bath. There were, however, a considerable number of cases about town at that time, and it is quite possible that many of the cases were contracted outside the school.

Up to date 64 pupils have been enrolled, and out of this number it has been found necessary to re-admit 5. There has been an effort to assemble the old pupils and the Keep Well Club that was organized for this purpose has brought together 29 children. The remaining 13 have in part been looked up in other ways, and the rest will be during the next month. On the whole, these children have done remarkably well since leaving school.

The next meeting of the executive board of the league will be held on Monday, October 18.

TEETH LOST, THINKS HE SWALLOWED THEM

Dunellen Carpenter Victim of Peculiar Accident—Not Badly Hurt.

If you fell from a ladder and struck your mouth hard enough to break a set of false upper teeth, and after your friends had searched everywhere they could not find your lower ones, what would you think?

Wesley Gaskill, who was the victim of such an accident yesterday afternoon, thinks so too, and his friends are also afraid that he has swallowed them.

Mr. Gaskill is a carpenter. He was employed by the Apgar Construction Company, and while at work on a bungalow for George Law on Mountainview Terrace at Dunellen yesterday he fell a distance of several feet. In addition to the loss of his lower set of false teeth, he sustained a broken rib, an injured spine and a cut lip. First aid was extended Mr. Gaskill by Edward Pennock, the retired pharmacist, whose home adjoins the Law property. Later Dr. Platt appeared and he was taken to the home on Prospect avenue, where he boards. Gaskill is not seriously injured and will recover within a short time unless his teeth try to eat their way out.

FORMAL OPENING OF Y. M. C. A. TONIGHT

Reception and Entertainment by Adrian Plate Will Be Features of Affair.

The formal fall opening of the Y. M. C. A. takes place tonight. It was planned to have the exercises in the yard in the rear of the building, but the weather may make it necessary to hold them in the hall.

The affair will take the form of a reception, a sociable and an opening combined. Adrian Plate, a New York entertainer, will provide the entertainment of sleight-of-hand tricks and other features. The officers of the association and the members of the board of directors will be present and an opportunity will be given members and friends to meet the new boys' secretary, R. S. Lynn. The affair will be primarily for the senior members of the association, and these are urged to be present and to bring friends. It is the desire of General Secretary Estes to arouse a great deal of enthusiasm in the Y. M. C. A. this year, and this will be the opening shot in the campaign. Refreshments will be served during the evening.

Y. M. C. A. IN UNITED STATES HAS $100,000,000 PROPERTY

Chicago, Sept. 21.—Property totaling more than $100,000,000 is now owned by the Young Men's Christian Association in cities throughout the country, according to the annual report made public Saturday. The money is invested in 759 buildings, with their libraries and equipment.

The current expenses of the work in the United States totaled $13,000,000 last year. In foreign lands there was an expenditure of $433,100.

There was a gain of 40,000 men and boys enrolled in Bible classes, the total numbering 164,000. The total association membership is 620,789. Employment was found for 53,257. In physical training 474,000 were enrolled.

BORO PRIMARY FIGHT CONFINED TO G. O. P.

As there are no Democrats seeking office in North Plainfield, the primary election a week from today will be tantamount to election at the regular election in November. The only fight on in the borough is for the office of collector for one year, and the five candidates for that place are waging a vigorous campaign.

Each candidate thinks he has the nomination cinched, but some surprises are due after the primaries close. Of the five candidates, James K. Arnold is a well known borough merchant; Frederick A. Martin has held the office of borough clerk, Frank Rowley is the clerk of the school district; William J. Trembath has a political club behind him, whose express object is to bring about his nomination, while John V. E. Vanderhoef, the last man on the list, holds the office until January 1 next upon appointment of the Borough Council, which fact, his friends say, will work to his advantage in the coming primary.

U. S. ASTOR THEATRE

"The Main Trail," Essanay's six-act photoplay adapted from the recently published novel by Henry Ayen, the author, was shown in film form at the U. S. Astor Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening and will be repeated today. It deals with rough and rugged characters of the logging camp, men of primitive passions. The scenes were mostly taken at "The Pines," at the mouth of Dead River near Waukegan, Ill., an ideal wild spot for a setting.

"Bootle's Baby," a Paramount production, will be the attraction at the Astor Theatre tomorrow afternoon and evening. Emily Stevens, late star of "The Songs of Songs," and a favorite among Plainfield theatregoers, will appear on the Astor screen Thursday in "The Soul of a Woman," a Metro production.

SCOUT BUILDING PLANS COMPLETE

Erection of New Building Will Get Under Way This Week.

FUND REACHES $255

Statement From Commissioner Allen E. Beals—Outline of Work—Cost Will Be $300—Expect to Speed Work.

Work probably will begin this week on the construction of the boy scout headquarters building in charge of Alexander Milne, of the Boy Scout Council building committee, who has agreed to erect the building on the Coriell property in Terrill road at cost. It is hoped to have the structure completed for dedication exercises before the end of this month.

The original amount subscribed for this purpose was $245. This amount has been entirely paid in. The cost of the structure with fireplace, so that the building can be used for scout purposes all year around will be $300. This is the amount the scout council prescribed at its last meeting. But this sum does not allow for furnishing the rooms, painting and other incidentals necessary to make the place suitable for scout work on winter evenings. Therefore $100 additional is asked for.

Commissioner Allen E. Beals said this morning:

"The Boy Scout movement in this city is three years old. It has grown from an original membership of eight to almost 300 in three years. It would have been possible to have had a membership several times three hundred scouts had it been possible to provide suitable equipment for developing scout work in summer when the boys are on their vacations.

"However the scoutmasters in charge of the various troops have done wonderful, giving freely of their time and labor to help win the boys in their charge into practical exponents of better citizenship, better manhood and better Plainfielders. Their hikes have been beneficial but they have lacked that consecutiveness of purpose that would have been possible had they had a suitable camp in charge of a trained campmaster who could have taught them resourcefulness, manliness and many other virtues that go to make up a good American citizen.

"Camp Coriell, named in honor of the man who has given the Boy Scouts of Plainfield and vicinity the privilege of using his property in Terrill road for a permanent camp site, will take its place beside the camps maintained and conducted by the Boy Scout Councils of New Brunswick, Montclair, East Orange and other cities in this State, but we plan to go these one notch farther and maintain our camp all the year round.

"So we have asked the people of Plainfield to build us a headquarters for scout training. One friend of the movement gave $201 and others have contributed varying amounts until $245 was contributed. But bids from various builders showed that the lowest possible cost for which we could erect the headquarters building designed by Edward V. French, the architect, was $260, without a fireplace.

"What is a scout gathering without a camp fire? It is not practical to have out-of-doors camp fires in winter and in summer the law says that no camp fire shall be built without a special permit and a new permit has to be obtained from the fire warden for every fire built. So the fire-place in the new building is one of the chief essentials and Council has fixed upon a limit of $300 for the construction of the headquarters building equipped with a fire-place.

"In order that the boys may have the benefit of their new headquarters before frost comes, prompt action was necessary to proceed with the construction of the building. Accordingly the contractor was authorized to proceed with the work in full expectation that the needed $100 would be forthcoming in time to give the boys their building free and clear by the time it was completed."

These contributions have been made:

Previously reported	$245

J.," two rugs, cover for reading table, oil lamps, six window shades, 2 annual subscriptions to Popular Mechanics, 1 annual subscription to the Scientific American, 4 porch chairs, cooking utensils would also be welcome.

be between 4,500 and 4,700.

Chief among the guests will be Governor Fielder, Secretary of State Thomas F. Martin and Motor Vehicle Commisioner William L. Dill. They and the mayors and other officials of all the Hudson county municipalities, not excepting Commissioner of Public Safety Frank Hague, of Jersey City, who has waged a bitter fight against the organization, have been asked to attend and speak at a banquet, which will be held on Wednesday evening.

It is expected that Patrolman John J. Burke, of the Second precinct, of Newark, who is now the president of the Newark branch and of the State association, will be chosen for another term as the State head of New Jersey's police patrolmen. It is expected, too, that Patrolman George Leek, of Atlantic City, will be a candidate for the presidency, but that his opposition to Burke will not seriously interfere with the re-election of the latter.

Vice President James Conk, of Weehawken, who is chairman of the general committee of arrangements for the convention, will not be returned to that office. It is expected that his successor will be Patrolman William Calvin, of Perth Amboy. Patrolman Walter Murphy, of Union Hill, will be re-elected as secretary. There is a warm contest in prospect over the office of treasurer, now held by Patrolman Joseph Kehoe, of Edgewater. He will be strenuously opposed by Patrolman Cornelius McCarthy, of Plainfield, and a prediction has been made that the latter is likely to get the winning vote.

On Thursday there will be a parade of all the visiting locals and of the departments of the Hudson county cities and towns. There will be approximately 4,000 patrolmen and more than twenty bands and other musical organizations in the line. The march will be over a route between two and three miles long and will end in Scheutzen Park, where a banquet will be served late in the afternoon with the full seating capacity of 4,100 in the immense dining halls arranged for. After the banquet there will be a round of speechmaking, participated in by most of the guests of the Wednesday night banquet, and by Sheriff Eugene Kinkead, former Mayor H. Otto Wittpenn and others who are just now very much in the political limelight in Hudson county. In the evening there will be a big entertainment and a ball.

BETTER SERVICE URGED

Judge Carey recalled an incident of his early life when he was a struggling young attorney. He went out to lunch one day and left a note on his door saying he would be back in an hour. A friend across the hall who had been reading the funny papers wrote under it, "What For?" Since then he has asked himself that question many times, he says, and he has found that it enables him to live closer to his ideals, to be of better service to his world and his fellowman.

Among the experiences of his judicial career that he recalled was his knowledge of a man thirty-five years of age once before him for a criminal offense. This man had spent seventeen of his thirty-five years in prison and the first man who ever talked to him like a man, he told the judge, was the assistant prosecutor of Hudson county. It was decided by the judge and the prosecutor to give him the first chance that he ever had and instead of adding to his prison record they secured him a job with the Salvation Army and released him. After several months of straight living the former crook got a job in Montreal. He died within a year and his last words were a request that a letter be written to his old friends, the judge and prosecutor in Jersey City, telling them that he had lived straight until the end. Although he had lived in Montreal but a year it was found that he had given $1,800, all made honestly, to worthy charity, in addition to all the personal service that he could find time for. Today a monument has been erected by the citizens of Montreal to this man who had but one year of life in thirty-five spent on the world.

The strongest declaration of Judge Carey's and one that gave his hearers a better understanding of his character was his statement that he had tried 13,000 men during his term on the bench, many of them good men. "Some were better men than I ever hope to be," he said. "Some of the best characters that I have ever known have come to me as defendants of their liberty and their good name."

To illustrate his contention that there is little difference in men, that the good are so little better than the bad, he told of a sociologist who once visited his court and was invited to sit on the bench with him. He asked which were the prisoners and Judge Carey told him the ones in the first row, forgetting to tell him just those in the first row on one side of the court room.

"You can tell them, can't you?" the student of criminal nature said. "Look at that man there. I'll bet he is a thief. And that one next to him is a dangerous crook. You can read it in their faces."

Judge Carey looked and found him pointing to a Methodist clergyman and the prosecutor of the county.

In closing Judge Carey paid a glowing tribute to the character of Judge Wm. N. Runyon, saying that Plainfield should be proud of him—that the entire State should be proud of him, for he was of the type of men who made better cities, better communities and better States.

Director of Ceremonies Edgar F. Sheppard explained that Judge Runyon was the guest of honor and that he had been invited on condition that he would promise not to talk. The Judge was game, however, and kept his promise. Under the leadership of Mr. Sheppard the members gave three cheers for Judge Runyon, "the man who stands for what is best for the people."

Eric Moraller, for nine years in Y. M. C. A. work in Petrograd, Russia, was called upon for a short address. He expressed his appreciation of the privilege of being allowed to hear Judge Carey and of being with his friends again and called the attention of the Dutch Arms to the fact that his friend and their friend, William J. Trembath, was a candidate for tax collector.

General Secretary Estes, of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., was introduced to the members of the club. Mr. Estes said that the address of Judge Carey should carry added weight because of the fact that he was a man who lived as he had talked, who really sought to be of service to others. Mr. Estes asked the co-operation of the club in Y. M. C. A. work and promised to come to their meetings often—as often as he as invited.

At the close of the meeting the entire membership arose and sang "America" as proof of the fact that they were not hyphenated citizens, but true Americans.

NATIONAL DEFENSE LEAGUE PROGRAM

Conference Will Follow Grand Army Encampment at Washington.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 21.—Great preparations are being made for the Conference on National Defense, which will be held in Washington October 4-7, immediately following the Grand Army of the Republic Encampment. The Conference on National Defense, to be held under the auspices of the National Defense League, and in which the Navy League, National Rifle Association and affiliated defense organization will participate, promises to be as large a gathering as the G. A. R. encampment. Thousands of the Grand Army veterans have written to the National Defense League that they will remain in Washington after the encampment to attend the Conference on National Defense.

Announcement was made today of the appointment by Representative Julius Kahn, of California, chairman of the National Defense League, of a citizens' committee of prominent Washingtonians who will have charge of local arrangements for the conference. The press committee of the conference, announced today by Chairman Frank B. Lord, president of the National Press Club, includes practically the whole membership of the Congressional Press Gallery and all of the leading newspapermen of the National Capital.

The speakers' program, now being completed, will include the most prominent men in the country, and will be announced in a few days.

The Conference on National Defense, which will be the first national gathering ever held in the United States to consider the problem of defenses for the nation, will, it is expected, have an important bearing on the action to be taken by Congress at the next session regarding increases in the navy, army, coast defenses and National Guard. Every phase of the national defense is to be considered at the conference.

Letters have just been sent out by the National Defense League to one thousand mayors of cities throughout the country, asking these officials to head delegations from their cities to the conference, and thousands of individual invitations have been sent out by the National Defense League, the Navy League and the National Rifle Association to their members and citizens generally to attend the conference.

Any citizen of the United States, it was announced today at the National Defense League offices, is cordially invited to attend the Conference on National Defense, without any other invitation. Those who wish to participate in the conference are asked to send their names and addresses to the National Defense League, Riggs building, Washington, D. C., in order that they may be enrolled as delegates.

P. H. BENNETT UNOPPOSED FOR STATE LODGE OFFICE

A threatened contest for the position of grand keeper of the exchequer at the annual session of the Knights of the Golden Eagle in Trenton yesterday was averted by the withdrawal of Ernest Truman, of Trenton, in favor of P. H. Bennett, of this city, leaving the Plainfield man as the only candidate.

With sixty-five subordinate castles of the State represented by about 200 delegates, the gathering was an impressive and interesting one.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

The headliner of the present bill at the Proctor house are the Italian Musketeers, five in number, specialists in vocal and instrumental selections, brought down the house at the performances of yesterday. No need to fear the lack of melody while this act is here, for the music put forth by these musicians is certainly sweet and entertaining, and of a high calibre. No better act of its kind can be found at any point in the vaudeville world.

Then there are those kid comedians, Mack and Sangster, in harmony and song. This act is certainly out of the ordinary, unique in its makeup, clever in its production, and pleasing to the extreme. A compliment is due to the youngsters for the way in which they caught up the enthusiastic emotions of the audiences of yesterday.

Comedy prevails in the skit of Tom Waters and Hattie Lorraine, "The Turk and the Widow." The Juggling Bannans, the marvels of motion, club jugglers, also put a few things across in this direction, and drew applause after applause.

The feature photo-play scheduled for today is "Dora," basede on Tennyson's immortal poem, with Isabel Rea playing the title role. For tomorrow, "Caught," a three reel feature, with Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn, is scheduled to appear. The first episode of "Neal of the Navy," the new serial photo-play, will appear Friday.

Self-interest will induce hundreds of people to read and consider your "Business Opportunity" ad.

MERCHANTS IN CONVENTION

Dubuque, Ia., Sept. 21—A full thousand prominent business and professional men of Iowa were present this morning when the seventeenth annual convention of the Iowa State Retail Merchants' Association was opened. The reduction of the cost of living will have a prominent part in the discussion of the experts who make up the long list of speakers. The state university will furnish experts to discuss all phases of present day subjects. How to reduce operating expenses, improve service, and give the consumer the benefit of prices will be taken up. J. H. Schaeffer of Davenport is presiding at the convention, which will extend until Thursday.

RAILROAD INVESTIGATION.

Concord, N. H., Sept. 21—President Kimball of the Cord and Montreal R. R. will be the first witness to be heard today by the Public Service Commission, when the inquiry into the amounts spent by the railroads for influencing public opinion and for legislation expenditures is resumed. The first inquiry will be made into the expenditures by the Boston and Maine under the direction of the officials of the Concord and Montreal, its subsidiary.

SMOKE ANNOYS WHITE WAY.

Trenton, N. J. Sept. 21—A hearing is being held today at Edgewater, N. J., by the New Jersey State Board of Health, to thresh out the long-standing controversy between New York and New Jersey over the smoke nuisance alleged to be created by factories on the Jersey side of the river. The New Yorkers will be asked to prove that the smoke is injurious to public health. Acid fumes are said to emanate from the chimneys of some of the large factories.

It Pays to Secure a Tenant Who Pays.

The uncertain sort of tenant is easy to find. He is always answering the call of the window sign of "To Let." He is easy to please. Even a rather high rental does not frighten him away.

But the Stay-and-Pay tenant is not so easy to secure. He is surer of what he wants. He does not take the first house, or apartment, or store that he finds. He watches and answers "To Let" Ads.

And to secure him for your tenant is a good day's work—a good week's work.

Property that is advertised adequately in the Plainfield Daily Press is rarely rented injudiciously.

LITERARY

THE SANCTITY OF THE HOME.

"We still act as if the moral law were indeed the order solely of a divine commandment which mankind, by its anxious effort, must be schooled unwillingly to obey. We fear that 'the sanctity of the home' is threatened by divorce, by suffrage, by polygamy, by woman in industry, or by the new dances; and we crusade oratorically to protect it from destruction, although we must know that if the sanctity of the home depended on such protection it would long ago have gone the way of the sanctity of the temple at Ephesus. We are distressed by license in our books and our theaters, and we organize extra censorships and frantic societies for the suppression of vice, as if vice and license had not always fought a losing battle against civilization, being opposed by the economic laws that have made our morality what it is. We seem to know that by helping to better the economic conditions we can better the moral conditions of life, but we forget that we cannot greatly help by scolding. We hope that we can assist the sanctity of the home by not retarding the economic progress that has made possible the sanctity of the average home, but we forget that mankind can no more return to its ancient immoralities than its culture can return to its ancient barbarism."—From "Current Comment," in the October Century.

NEWS AND VIEWS
Conducted by
THE W. C. T. U.

Only a few years ago a member of Congress lamented that John Barleycorn had a strong hold upon our colleges and universities, and urged that his grip must be broken at any cost, for to the colleges the prohibition cause must look for its leaders.

That a radical change of sentiment in college circles has taken place since that statement was made is indicated by the action of the Associated College Newspaper Publishers, at its re*cent annual convention, in barring* from the columns of the leading college newspapers of this country and Canada all liquor advertising and *naming expulsion from the organiza*tion as punishment for violation of the rule.

It would help the temperance movement in our educational institutions if the editors and publishers of these college journals were to receive a shower of congratulation and commendation from the alumni and friends of the schools represented, accompanied by the expressed hope that this action may be the precursor of further anti-liquor agitation and legislation by the student body.

The argument that the closing of the saloons throws men out of work was ridiculed by John Cunneen, the Chicago labor leader, in a recent address in Minneapolis.

"To maintain the saloon simply because its closing will temporarily throw a few out of work is worse than preventing the introduction of machinery, for the closing of the saloon means the diminishing of vice and greater material prosperity for the people," said Mr. Cunneen. "The greatest fighters against the spread of Christianity were the idol makers, who said Christianity would put them out of business.

"Every improvement that has helped to better humanity has been fought by people who said it would throw some people out of work."

Mr. Cunneen said the same thing had been true of the introduction of farm machinery, the discovery of the electric light and many other things.

"The greater part of the money spent in supporting saloons will be spent in other ways when the saloons are voted out," he continued. "The United States Bureau of Census reports show that money spent for other things beside liquor will give more work to more working people. It will give more business to business men, and it will add to the wealth of the country."

One of Mr. Cunneen's chief arguments was that the saloons are responsible for putting many more men out of business during a year than the number of men they themselves actually employ.

Prohibition of alcoholic liquors is strictly enforced at the Plattsburg, N. Y., volunteer camp, and it is said that not only is the drink barred from the camp grounds but that the "personal liberty" of the men and officers in this respect is interfered with even to the extent of forbidding their drinking when away from the confines of the camp.

The fight on alcohol in Europe as a war measure is becoming more determined and severe. Every nation engaged in the conflict has adopted measures materially suppressing the liquor traffic. On August 28 an anti-alcohol bill was introduced into the French Chamber of Deputies by Minister of Finance M. Ribot. This bill, if carried, will abolish what is declared to be the worst feature of the drink evil, namely the privilege now enjoyed by individuals who are permitted to distill brandy from their own fruits. The agricultural districts of the Vosges and Normandy, where alcoholism is most rife, owe their alarming statistics to the flood of cheap spirits from these private stills. The proposed law also places a surtax on liquors and provides for higher licensing duties. M. Ribot says he intends to push the bill into a law if possible. Italy has also taken radical measures against the liquor traffic, and a telegram from Milan says that a vast number of the dealers will be compelled to go out of business. The nations are obeying this injunction: "Abhor that which is evil; cleave to that which is good." (Rom. 12:9.)

"Nobody need fear that Governor Hatfield will call an extra session of the West Virginia legislature for the purpose of resubmitting the question of prohibition to another vote in the State," Prohibition Commissioner Fred O. Blue is reported to have said to a newspaper reporter the other day when asked his opinion as to the possible effect of the petitions now being circulated in West Virginia with that end in view. He said further, "The scheme was hatched outside the state and has for its main purpose use by the liquor forces in the prohibition fight in Ohio this fall to create the impression that people in West Virginia are dissatisfied with prohibition."

La Galerie Wanamaker

COMPLETE PRESENTATION—BEGINNING WEDNESDAY,

THE NEW FASHIONS,

This presentation is held in the new Gallery of Fashion, enlarged to accommodate our growing clientele, and takes the place of our former exhibits in the Auditorium. It is our complete word on the fashions of the coming season. It is a demonstration of our preparedness to satisfy, now, the wants of women who are always first to take up the new things when they are practical. It includes:

1. Callot's Avant la Mode, the new Callot Pantalette gowns;
2. Original French models from the great fashion artists of Paris;
3. Exact American copies of Paris models at moderate prices;
4. Adaptations for practical wear for every occasion;
5. Original English models and adaptations for country wear.

The Young Prince

Drawn by Leon Bakst, the great artist who interpreted Russian art to the world of dress, and who is coming to America this Winter simultaneously with the Russian ballet.

AVANT LA MODE

(The Pantalette Gown)

The subtle art of les Callot Soeurs inspired by the genius of Leon Bakst has given us in this gown the most remarkable creation of the year:

Black broadcloth coat and skirt over one-piece chaudron charmeuse blouse and pantalettes and ribbon-backed velvet girdle; Russian fitch trimming on coat and pantalettes; color harmony maintained by chaudron stitching on coat and skirt, and alternate black and chaudron buttons on coat; mousquetaire sleeve; the new silhouette of the skirt; the flaring Russian skirt of the coat.

It is novel, yet modest; a costume for the street; with the coat off, for the afternoon indoors; with the skirt off, for the boudoir. It makes one think of the tinkling of the troika bells in the land of Never-Hurry. And yet it is of New York. Only Callot could have done it.

With this gown will be shown—also on a mannequin—Callot's evening gown of vieux rose net and gold lace with pale pink charmeuse pantalettes.

SIGNED PARIS ORIGINALS

WORTH—evening gown of cerise satin and ribbon velvet; papillon bow in back; wings on sides of skirt; square train.

CALLOT—evening dress for jeune fille; rainbow flounces of blue over pink and pink over blue, banded by silver galon; girdled by soft charmeuse ribbon.

CALLOT—evening gown of black velvet with decolletage of Venise; drapery of black lace; streamer of poppies.

GEORGETTE—ribbon dress, blue ciel, with cuirasse d'or.

PAQUIN—afternoon dress of plaid wool velour; sleeves capped at elbows.

BULLOZ—the Garibaldi red dress; velvet and broadcloth; large chess-board design on skirt.

GEORGETTE—the Gavotte dress of moive and net over Spanish lace; blue velvet ribbon shoulder straps.

BEER—the Picture dresses; (1) of embroidered taffeta, silver thread embroidery, silver lace bodice and sleeves, boquet of blue and pink roses; (2) dress of gros-de-Londres, with long-waisted blouse of silver lace and rose spangles.

DOUCET—ribbon dress combined with net with roses embroidered in spangles of white, gold, red and amber.

JENNY—dress of amber chiffon velvet and gold galon; tam-o'-Shanter cuff sleeves.

PAQUIN—gown of black net and spark blue charmeuse, with sphinx and jet spangles.

DRECOLL—gown of blue celeste chiffon panne; bodice of silver galon and lace; girdle of silvered pearls.

DRECOLL—tailored suit of blue soldat; new godet flare on skirt of coat.

JENNY—tailored suit of hunter green; godet flare.

GEORGETTE—tailored suit of soft blue velvet, trimmed with krimmer; gathered godet.

BERNARD—tailored suit in the new aubergine shade; flat back to coat, and side godets

CALLOT—sports suit of soft twilled cloth in a Narragansett green; pleats on coat and skirt; wide circular flounce set in skirt. This suit created wide interest in Paris, and whispers of it have already reached Piping Rock and Tuxedo.

PARIS COPIES

Worth, Paquin, Callot, Jenny, Georgette, Drecoll, Bulloz—are all represented in tailored suits and gowns which are faithful copies of the originals. The materials of which they are made were selected and matched in Paris—silks, woolens, embroidery, laces, nets. The needlework is very fine. The accuracy of reproduction of every detail of style and color is remarkable. Particularly at the reasonable prices.

THE ADAPTATIONS

Coats, suits, dresses, for all occasions, at an accommodating range of prices. Into each has gone some new touch from the Paris creations accepted for American wear.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Enrollment in the boys' gymnastic classes was held yesterday. Physical examinations were held under the supervision of Ralph S. Patch. No boy, unless physically unable or a senior in school, is exempt from "gym" work.

Classes in all elective subjects are open for registration during the whole week.

The girls of all the classes with the exception of the senior division will register for "gym" work today. As in the case of the boys, any girl whose physical condition does not warrant her taking the course is not compelled to do so.

The swimming pool was reopened yesterday, the High School pupils and those of other schools enjoying a "dip in the briny."

The football squad was rushed, tugged and pulled through another tedious practice on Parker Field yesterday. Thirty or more candidates reported and Coach Patch is pleased with their showing.

The swimming team is practically assured and a manager and captain will be chosen soon.

Nominations for senior class officers have been closed. The election will take place in a day or two.

T. A. B. S. AND CLINTON AVENUE ARE TIED UP

Must Play Extra Game to Decide Second Place for Season.

Through a revision of the club standing in the City Baseball League, which is official, the Clinton Avenue team gained one game and is now tied with the T. A. B. S. for second place. The standing, before corrected, gave T. A. B. S. this honor by a slight margin. This fact makes it necessary for the two teams to get together to decide which shall have second honors for the 1915 season and the contest will be scheduled for sometime in the near future.

RED SOXS LOOK LIKE BEST BET IN AMERICAN

The prospects of the Tigers participating in the World's Series next month received another jolt at Fenway Park in Boston, yesterday, when the Red Sox for the third consecutive time defeated Jennings' team. The score was 3 to 2.

The victory of the Sox puts them more than four full games in front of the Tigers, and with Carrigan's pitching staff hurling airtight ball it looks as if little short of a miracle can prevent the Boston team from winning the American League flag.

PHILLY STOCK GETS BIG BOOST IN THE NATIONAL

Philadelphia's chances of winning the National League flag took a jump as a result of yesterday's games. While Moran and his prospective champions were idle in St. Louis, the Robins were being beaten by the Pirates in Pittsburgh.

The Braves also suffered a setback, the Cincinnati Reds beating them by 4 runs to 1. The Phillies are now leading the Robins and Braves by five full games.

ATHLETE PLATT ADAMS INJURED

Platt Adams, the best all-around amateur jumper in the world, will be out of competition for about six months as the result of a pulled tendon in the left leg, which he received while playing baseball in Newark on Saturday. The injury to the Newark athlete will prevent him from competing in some of the biggest athletic events of the winter season. The loss of Adams is only one of the serious blows the Mercury Foot athletic contingent has received this year. First it was Homer Baker, then international half-mile champion, who was incapacitated through a motorcycle accident. Baker is still in such bad condition that it is difficult for him to walk, although this accident occurred several months ago. Then Kenneth Curtis, the pole vault champion, was laid up with an injured foot, and though he tried to get in shape for the national championships at San Francisco he is still on the hospital list.

STINE WILL APPEAR ON NEWFED GRIDIRON

Plainfield Boy Will Wear Springfield Football Togs Against Rutgers.

Eleventh hour negotiations between the manager of the Springfield Training School football team and the game booker of Rutgers College has resulted in a contest being agreed upon between these two elevens for October 30, to be played at the Federal League park in Newark.

This college combat has more than the usual interest for Plainfielders inasmuch as "Hub" Stine, of North Plainfield, will play left tackle for the training school combine. It is likely that a number of his friends from this city will make the trip to Newark and witness the engagement.

The Plainfield boy is one of two last year's football "letter men" who have reported to the Springfield coach and he is practically certain of making a regular berth at tackle. Last year he played guard but has been shifted to left tackle.

HARRY JENNINGS QUITS RUTGERS FOR A REST

Harry Jennings, former Plainfield pitcher and Rutgers' star hurler for the past three seasons, will not return to college at the opening this fall, having decided to take a year's rest because of poor health. He will return next year.

Jennings' decision to take a year's rest will leave Rutgers without a veteran pitcher next season. With the acquisition of Kelly, a star third baseman from Stamford High School, and several other fine players, Rutgers plans to put out a winning combination next year.

BIG FIELD OF SENIORS BEGIN PLAY AT RYE, N. Y.

No less than 270 golfers have entered that famous fixture, the annual tournament for the seniors at the course of the Apawamis Club, at Rye, N. Y. The competition started this morning and it will be continued for four days, the field this season having been divided into two divisions, the first starting today and the second Thursday. Each will play thirty-six holes.

It will be the eleventh time that the seniors have played together since the venerable Horace L. Hotchkiss conceived the idea of having a competition for players who are fifty-five years old or more.

NEWARK IS NOW AFTER THE TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP

Lawn tennis, according to plans in the making, will be one of the features of the athletic program for the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the founding of Newark next year. Frank E. Steppe, the president of the Northern New Jersey Tennis Association, which has in it a number of Newark tennis clubs, has drawn up a program of tournaments, at the request of the athletic sub-committee, which he will present at the next meeting.

The Northern New Jersey Tennis Association, with the backing of the Newark committee, will apply for the national tennis championships at a meeting of the national committee next year. Mr. Steppe proposes to conduct the affair, if it is obtained, on the grass courts at Weequahic Park. Spectators will be easily taken care of by the grandstands which are to be built for the A. A. U. championships.

WORLD'S SERIES STARTS OCT. 9.

Cincinnati, Sept. 21.—August Herrman, Chairman of the National Baseball Commission, in a statement yesterday, said that the world's series would probably start on Saturday, October 9. Mr. Herrmann said that the championship season in the east does not close until October 7 and it is the custom to give the contending teams a day to get ready for the big event.

ELIZABETH BOY WITH GIANTS.

Taylor ("Chick") Farrell, of Elizabeth, an outfielder who led the New England League this season with a batting average of .345, yesterday signed a two-year contract to play with the New York Giants.

POLISH ALLIANCE CONVENES.

Passaic, N. J., Sept. 21—The biennial national convention of the Polish National Alliance of America, a fraternal organization, opened here today. There are over 100 branches of the alliance in states east of the Mississippi, and delegates from each are attending. Bishop Francis Hudo of Scranton, Pa., head of the Polish National Church in America, is among the speakers.

POLITICAL NOTES.

September 22—Sample primary ballots mailed to voters.

September 28—Primary day and second registration day.

October 2—County committees meet for reorganization.

October 4—City committees meet for reorganization.

October 5—Republican and Democratic State conventions held in Trenton.

October 19—State referendum election, and third registration day in municipalities of more than 5,000 people.

October 26—Third and final registration day in municipalities of less than 5,000 inhabitants.

November 2—General Election Day.

The annual ratification meeting of the Elizabeth Democratic Club will be held October 11 in the clubrooms, 21 Broad street, Elizabeth. At that time, the candidates nominated in the Democratic primaries will be formally pledged the club's support. In the meantime, the club will adhere to its rule of "hands off." The regular meeting took place Friday night, when the date for the ratification rally was set.

Robert J. McNair is conducting an active campaign for the Republican nomination for tax assessor in the Tenth ward, Elizabeth. All the candidates are on the job, in fact, and each has assurances of support from many residents of the ward. The race is indeed an open one. John A. Cissel, by virtue of being the assessor now, has a good strategical position. Edward A. Leach, the former Progressive leader, is campaigning hard to wrest the honor from Mr. Cissel, and the other candidates, A. J. Bender and Charles L. Bauer, Jr., are not losing any time.

A determined effort is being made by George R. Wilhelm to prevent all five of the present excise commissioners in Elizabeth from securing renominations on the Democratic ticket. Mr. Wilhelm is having his first experience as a candidate for public office. He declares that he believes in bettering conditions. He is a foreman in the Plank Road shops of the Public Service Railway Company, and is a member of the North Jersey Railway Benevolent Association and of Myrtle Camp, No. 5, W. O. W. He was prominent as a ballplayer at one time, and resides at 878 Livingston street.

Challenges to debate from several Wittpenn candidates in Hudson county have been accepted by Secretary of State Thomas F. Martin. In a statement issued Friday at Union Hill the former Assembly leader asks that Harry Kuhlke and Alexander Simpson, Assembly candidates, and State Senator Charles M. Eagan meet him on the platform in St. Mary's Hall, Hoboken, next Friday night. He also suggests that Wittpenn himself attend and debate. He asks that the debate be upon the record of eight anti-Wittpenn Assembly candidates who served in the last Legislature and upon the record of the Wittpenn freeholders who are seeking renominations.

With Thomas W. DeKay as the candidate for State Senator, Sussex county Republicans are looking forward to a possible victory this year in that stronghold of Democracy and a hot campaign is being waged by the G. O. P. workers. The principal fight is over the State Senatorship and, for the Democrats, Samuel T. Munson is seeking re-election, but without united party support, it is said.

Secretary Tumulty denies that the President and Secretary Garrison are in disagreement on the subject of national defense. It is explained by Mr. Tumulty that a final agreement on the defense program has not been reached by the President and his advisers, and that reports of differences within the Administration on the question are in error. Secretary Garrison has on several occasions deprecated the publication of reports relative to his defense plans, taking the position that judgment should be withheld until he had given out the official version.

MASSACHUSETTS PRIMARIES.

Boston, Sept. 21.—The primary balloting for nominations for State offices is under way in Massachusetts today. The Republicans have furnished the keenest contest, with former Congressman Samuel W. McCall and Lieutenant-Governor Grafton D. Cushing the favorites. Former Governor Eugene N. Foss, who served several terms as a Democratic governor, is also seeking the Republican nomination. Just how his campaign will split up the vote is a matter of speculation, but it is expected that McCall will win out in the three-cornered contest. Hon. David I. Walsh, the present Democratic governor, is the hand-picked candidate of the Democratic machine to succeed himself. Former Congressman Frederick S. Dietrick has been stumping the State for the nomination, but is not expected to poll many votes.

BIG HELP TO TIGERS IN FIERCE BATTLE FOR A. L. PENNANT

George Burns.

If the Detroit Tigers do not cop the American league pennant it will not be the fault of George Burns, their star first baseman. He has been working steadily all season, and now that the pinch has arrived is doing better work than ever.

FEATURE OF RALLY WILL BE A REUNION

Original Boy Scout Class to Meet at First Presbyterian Church Sunday.

A feature of the rally day exercises at the First Presbyterian Sunday school next Sunday morning at 10 o'clock will be a reunion of all the members of Class 22. This is the class of boys, now young men, out of which the boy scout movement in this city originated. Some of the boys have scattered over the country, one of them, Charles E. Rice, Eagle scout, and the first patrol leader in this city, being now in Colorado. Other boys are in Connecticut, some are in Canada, another is in California. An invitation has been sent to every member of this class whether active now or not to be present on Sunday morning. About seventy boys are expected to be there. Boy scouts formerly identified with Troop 5, but now associated as leaders or members of other troops in this city, are invited to be present at this reunion.

The rally day exercises themselves will embody many new and novel features. When the primary class in charge of Mrs. Grove Hinman, comes forward all three departments will present for the first time in this city the memory verse chain system that Madam Montessori originally introduced in France, being one of the latest and most highly approved systems for the instruction of the young. Members of the primary union interested in this system are invited to be present to see it demonstrated, either on Sunday morning at 10 o'clock or at the First Presbyterian church chapel Wednesday afternoon.

Those who will take part in the allegory which will be another feature of rally day at this Sunday school will be Francis Kriney, who will be "Willing Heart"; the Rev. Dr. Charles E. Herring, as "God's General"; Allen E. Beals, "Captain"; Miss Ethel Hazel, "Light"; Howard W. W. Allegar, Jr., "Stoutheart." An original class song, composed by Grove Hinman, will be a feature of the primary exercises.

The election of a superintendent to succeed Henry W. Herrman, resigned, has been postponed until a week from tomorrow night.

RURAL CREDITS DAY.

San Francisco, Sept. 21—This is another big day for the farmers at the Exposition. It is "Rural Credits Day," and able speakers from many sections will take part in the exercises. Some will advocate the utilization of state or national aid to secure credits, others claiming the advantage to lie in private enterprise. Some of the subjects are: "Co-operative Organization of Farmers", "Rural Co-operative Banking", "Land Credit", and "Legislation Enacted and Proposed". Representatives of the Farmers' Union will illustrate the advantages secured for the farmers in various sections of the country by adequate co-operation.

SCOTTISH RITE, MEETS.

Boston, Sept. 21—A three day meeting, the 103d annual gathering of the grand inspectors general of the thirty-third degree, Ancient Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, opened this morning at Masonic Temple. The triennial election of officers will be held this year. Another important consideration is the charitable foundation to be established soon by the Supreme Council.

An Opportunity to Save Two Dollars

DURING THE WEEK commencing September 20th we will reduce the prices of all Cabinet Gas Ranges two dollars each.

SUCH A REDUCTION, coming at this time, doubtless will be welcomed by thousands of our customers who ordinarily would buy Cabinet Gas Ranges this fall.

IT SHOULD BE of timely interest also to those whose homes are heated by furnaces. Every fall we are called upon to replace kitchen coal ranges with Cabinet Gas Ranges by hundreds of patrons who realize that it involves unnecessary expense and useless labor to operate coal stoves in furnace-heated homes.

WE HANDLE only the most efficient and most economical types of Cabinet Gas Ranges, and the prices for the week of September 20 only will be actually $2 below the regular sale prices.

Public Service Gas Company

—Well, that is, almost everybody.

Of course, we except the man who uses smoked glasses to take all the brightness out of life—

And the old codger who believes that the theatres are very, very wicked—

And the gentleman who buttons his collar in the back because he hates to look forward—

And his neighbor who thinks railroad trains and newspapers should stop on Sunday.

These fellows hold up their hands in holy horror at Puck

Other folks, who get some real joy out of life, buy it every Tuesday morning at their nearest newsstand, and go about all the rest of the week with their faces wreathed in smiles.

WORLD IS BEING 'PURGED BY PAIN'

So Declares Rev. Dr. Eaton in Discourse on European Conflict.

WAR IS A BLESSING

Preacher Says He is Sure America Wants No "Shameful Ease"—American Citizenship a Sacred Thing Not to Be Violated.

Dr. Charles A. Eaton, of Watchung, preaching in the Madison Avenue Baptist church Sunday morning on the subject, "Are We Drifting Into War?" said:

"The real problem for the United States raised by the war is the place which we are to hold among the nations when peace returns. Three facts will largely determine the issue: First—We are now and must remain a world power. Second—As a people we do not want war either for ourselves or for our neighbors. Third—When peace comes there will be enthroned a world public opinion, and this public opinion, which will be part judgment and part conscience, will determine the influence of each nation over the others.

"This war is the greatest blessing that has fallen upon mankind since the German Reformation. The world was losing its soul. Germany, under the blight of militarism, had lost her moral sense, and her culture had become an efficient engine of destruction—a menace to herself and to all the world. Russia lay stupid, sodden and hopeless under an iron despotism. France had forgotten God and was smothering in the froth of a frivolous and immoral aestheticism.

"Britain, chief among democracies, had distilled within her veins the poison of class hatred and individual selfishness and was fast sinking into a kind of social coma. America, soaked in materialism, prosperous, shallow, restless, dissatisfied, was drifting toward spiritual anarchy. Everywhere the soul had died out of the bosom of man.

"We needed a cross, and God has laid this cross upon the world. We are being purged by pain. Suffering, the beautiful mother of greatness, is brooding the race back to nobility, to unselfishness to idealism—to real manhood.

"We alone of the greatest nations stand outside the struggle. And this constitutes at once our danger and our opportunity. While we are not fighting with arms, we are, nevertheless, in the war, and have been there since the first day. If as a people we live up to our history we shall win for ourselves a place of leadership among the nations. If, on the other hand, we temporize and shrink from accepting the burdens of our own greatness we shall be despised by the nations and shall lose our moral leadership, perhaps forever.

"This is where America stands today, at the parting of the ways. Our makers of opinion see the issue with remarkable clearness. Never has the newspaper press of America risen to such noble and worthy leadership as today. If the press has already found its soul, shall we not hope that politics, business and religion will catch the larger meaning of the age, and unite to make our beloved nation the real servant and friend of mankind?

"In view of these great considerations, what ought America to do?

"First—We must accept our own propositions without reserve. We are for men; for government of, for and by the people; for justice and liberty and humanity. We must protest clearly, officially and firmly against every violation of these ideals. And if our protest leads to loss, or even to war, we must be ready and prepared to pay the price. We cannot profess high principles without accepting full responsibility for our principles; and we cannot assume responsibility without paying the price.

"Second—We must let all the world know that American citizenship is a sacred thing, and its rights cannot be violated by any one anywhere without a reckoning to the last penny.

"We hate war, but we would rather perish fighting for right than rot in shameful and cowardly ease. God is calling us to lead mankind out of its failure and ruin into peace and progress. But if mankind loses its confidence in us and its respect for us we can neither lead nor serve."

COZUSNIC ARRIVED TO LATE FOR BORO COURT

Charged by Paul Hance with disorderly conduct, Louis Cozusnic, of Terrill road, was arrested Saturday by Chief Marshal Weiss, of the borough, and released upon his promise to appear in court for trial Monday. He kept his word, but he was just too late for the recorder, and he will therefore have to try it again.

Hance accuses Cozusnic with jumping into his wagon last Thursday, while he was driving along Watchung avenue; and besides calling him vile names, attempted to choke him.

The want ad way of tenant-finding is the accepted way—and means small expense and delay.

PILLARS "IN DUTCH" WITH ELIZABETHANS

County Seat Authorities Proceding Cautiously to Solve Problem.

City officials of Elizabeth are today pondering over the Pillar of Fire problem, the issue having come to their attention during the past two weeks when representatives of the cult have started a series of street revivals similar to those which have created so much criticism hereabouts. Considerable interest was attached to the outcome of the Holy Jumpers' trial in the city police court yesterday morning by the Elizabethans and many queries were received concerning the nature and disposition of the charges.

Mayor Victor Mravlag, of Elizabeth, intends to proceed cautiously in the matter and will probably shape his action on the results of Plainfield movements. Saturday night the revivalists were dispersed by the police of the county seat and the Jumpers were warned that another such gathering would result in arrest and prosecution. Mayor Mravlag now has in his possession data furnished by Mayor Leighton Calkins, of this city, and is contemplating offering a traffic ordinance similar to the one passed on two readings by the local Common Council last week to the Elizabeth Council at its next session for adoption.

STATE SECRETARY ACCEPTS THREE OFFERS TO DEBATE

Jersey City, Sept. 21. Secretary of State Thomas F. Martin Friday night accepted the challenges of Alexander Simpson, lawyer; former Assemblyman Harry Kuhlke and State Senator Charles M. Egan, to meet them in public debate upon the issues of the present Democratic primary campaign. He further asked Naval Officer H. Otto Wittpenn to meet him and settle their political differences in the same way.

It is proposed by Mr. Martin to hold all of the debates in St. Mary's Hall, Hoboken, next Friday evening, when the Secretary of State will address a meeting of voters there. The Wittpenn leaders are particularly delighted because he has accepted the challenge of Simpson, candidate for the Assembly, whom they regard as a most formidable opponent.

POLICE WILL EXPERIMENT WITH NEW TRAFFIC POSTS

With a view to bettering traffic conditions at Fifth street and Park avenue, an intersection that is much used by vehicles, Mayor Leighton Calkins has suggested that the traffic posts be installed to replace the one now in use and Chief of Police Kiely will experiment with the idea immediately. It is the opinion of the mayor that if one is placed in the center of the crossing on the easterly side of Fifth street and another in a similar position on the westerly side it will do away with the necessity of keeping one in the middle of the intersection and give large vehicles a better chance to negotiate the corner.

Under present conditions it is almost impossible for the larger types of automobiles and trucks to turn at right angles without doing considerable maneuvering, causing delay. It is also possible that the experiment will be tried at other street corners.

BIENNIAL CONVENTION OF POLISH NATIONAL ALLIANCE

The biennial national convention of the Polish National Alliance of America, a fraternal and death benefit organization, will be held in the parish house of St. Peter and Paul Polish National church, Passaic, today, tomorrow, Thursday and Friday. The convention opened today with a solemn high pontifical mass, at which Rt. Rev. Francis Hudor, of Scranton, head of the Polish national church, was the celebrant. He also preached the sermon.

Tonight a banquet will be tendered the delegates at Speer's Chateau, at which Mayor Seger and other city officials will be present. The church and parish house where the convention will be held are ancient landmarks of the city. The original parts of the church were erected 250 years ago by the First Reformed church of that city. Around the church is a burying ground in which interments were made in the early part of 1600. The edifice was remodeled when the Polish National congregation purchased it ten years ago.

IN JUSTICE TO JUDGE DEMEZA.

Following our custom of printing communications which are signed, the Daily Press on Saturday published a letter from Samuel W. Rushmore, in which City Judge DeMeza was made the target for criticism in handling a complaint against Mr. Rushmore. We were somewhat surprised at the statements made, and a thorough investigation of the case convinces us that Mr. Rushmore very much misinterpreted the court's action. There were several statements in his letter which could only have been the result of a misunderstanding of Judge DeMeza's words, for several spectators say the Judge was entirely civil to Mr. Rushmore while he was on the bench.

Judge DeMeza has held the office for nearly five years, and he has earned the support and praise of hundreds of our citizens who have come in contact with him. If anything he has erred only in being too lenient with some old offenders, and that comes as a result of the very human disposition of the magistrate. Time and time again he has let men go who have been found guilty of infractions, merely because he knew that their families would suffer if the bread winner were locked up. He has handled cases where wealthy residents have been in court for auto law violation, and the first complaint about the justice of his decisions comes from Mr. Rushmore. While we have the highest regard for the latter, we feel that if his letter went unchallenged in this column, it would appear that we approved of what he said. He is, of course, entitled to his opinion, but we cannot in the slightest endorse his criticism of Judge DeMeza.

GOV. HARRIS AND SUFFRAGE.

Governor Nat E. Harris, of Georgit, believes that suffrage for women will help cure ills to which his state is heir. He recently made public an interview in which he declared that equal suffrage would mean the death of such public opinion as led to the lynching of Leo M. Frank. Gov. Harris said:

"If a woman is a victim of crime a fury seizes upon our men. It is a feeling that will never pass away until we have woman suffrage, which I think we will soon have."

"Will woman suffrage do away with it?" was asked by the correspondent.

"Yes," said the governor. "It will not do away with the respect and admiration men have for women, but it will do away with the protective feeling that comes from their helplessness."

Which is about as logical a statement as one might expect from Georgia's present governor. If his promise for woman suffrage were true, if the women of Georgia or any other state believed it true, Gov. Harris could not force the ballot on them with the aid of Georgia militia.

Suffrage would bring about many reforms in Georgia, one of the first of which would be a cessation of mob violence, but it would be done through education and not through a change in the relationship of its men and women.

Suffrage would not give the women of Georgia strength to resist physical attacks of black and white brutes. They could not fight themselves free from the clutches of an assailant with the ballot as a club.

Suffrage would give the good women of Georgia a voice in the government of their state, however, and as a result there would be an end of child labor in cotton mills, a more complete educational system, statutes that would enable honest officials to enact prohibition laws and, what is more important, honest officials to enforce them. If the women had a vote Georgia would find its rightful respect among the other states of the union within a few years.

It would do for Georgia what it will do for New Jersey or any other state—put men into office who are honest and courageous enough to obey the will of the people, eliminate machine politics, guarantee a dollars worth of public improvement for every public dollar appropriated, and insure a better citizenship through proper education.

If Russia and Germany continue capturing prisoners at the rate now being announced in daily official bulletins, two more months of war will see the Russians entirely in the hands of Germans and all German soldiers held as hostages by Russia. Germany will have to use the Austrian army to guard the Russian prisoners, while Russia will have to ask the aid of France's fighting force to hold Germans that have been taken in battle. When this happens—and if we believe official claims it will be but a few weeks—England, Italy and Turkey can go on home and go to work.

If this works out it will prove a blessing to the American people because Bryan, Carnegie and Henry Ford can claim no credit for the work and we will not have to elect any one of them president to show our love for peace.

France is preparing to call its babes to war. A measure now before parliament calls to the colors 400,000 young men who in times of peace would go into military training in 1917. These boys will not be ready for the preliminary hardships of maneuvers for two years, and yet they are to be sent to the firing line to pile their bodies up as a barrier to the German invaders. Youth will be served to feed the insatiate greed of a few men for world power.

A recent census taken in England and France shows that 50,000 Americans are in the trenches of the Allies. The report does not state whether or not they were married men.

"War correspondent weds suffrage leader," says headline. Must be in love with his work.

A Tribute To Judge Robert Carey

Robert Ingersoll uttered the sweetest tribute ever paid to mortal man and recorded in the English language, when, in his oration over the grave of his brother, he said:

"If every man, woman or child for whom he had done a loving kindness would place a flower upon his grave today, he would sleep tonight beneath a wilderness of blossoms."

I unconsciously paid one almost as great to a man I do not know last night. I heard the humane talk of Judge Robert Carey, of Jersey City, before members of the Dutch Arms Club. I had never seen Judge Carey, nor even heard of him, until he was introduced to his audience. When he had finished I left the building and as I walked home I found myself thinking that if I am ever branded as a criminal and dragged into a court room where the Law and Society may wreck its vengeance upon me, of all the men I have ever known I would have Justice—my Justice—personified in Robert Carey, of Jersey City.

The Mystery

Up the tall stone steps he labors to the office of the post—
Seeking always for a letter, like some frail and halting ghost.
Crutch by crutch he struggles upward, but to hear the kind clerk say:
"Mighty sorry of it, brother, but there's nothing here to-day"—
Always in that tone he says it, helping hope that dreary hope,
Always with a smile the cripple hobbles down the terraced slope,
To return upon the morrow with his hope-light lit anew.
Years on years that human relic's done as thus we see him do!

None has ever asked the reason—ever asked what it could be
That the man with clumping crutches thinks, some joyous day, to see.
But we watch and hope as he does,
as we throng the busy mart,
Praying that whatever letter might appease his hungry heart
May arrive. But oft I marvel at the people I have known
Seeking always for some blessing they believed should be their own—
Going hungry through their lifetime, to delusive hope a slave—
Going hungry through their lifetime—aye, and hungry to their grave!

Dear Offagain.—I have a daughter seventeen years old who won't work at all about the house, and won't stay in at nights. She paints and powders her face, puts on pretty clothes that her father buys and I keep laundered for her, loafs about town evenings, reads and eats candy all her spare time, sasses me if I try to correct her or get her to work, and otherwise troubles me greatly. Health Talks
BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

The Germs On Your Hands

NO PERSON, says the Sanitary Code of the New York State Department of Health, than which none is than whicher, "no person who resides, boards or lodges in a household where he comes in contact with any persons affected with bacillary dysentery . . . or typhoid fever, shall handle food or food products intended for sale. No waitress—lamp this, little one—no waitress, cook or other employee of a boarding house, hotel, restaurant or other place where food is served, who lodges or visits in a household where he comes in contact with any person with bacillary dysentery . . . or typhoid fever, shall prepare, serve or handle food for others in any manner whatsoever."

The wherefore for which being that we are all fallible—sometimes the best of regulated families will suffer, because somebody has forgotten to wash his hands. Most epidemics of typhoid fever nowadays are ultimately traced to a single person, or it may be a married person, but anyway a careless person, who, either sick with the disease, sickening with it, convalescent from it, or acting as a chronic "carrier" of the germs, literally hands the infection to those who happen to be in contact with him.

But if typhoid and dysentery and cholera were the only diseases spread by unwashed hands we wouldn't say a word—we'd leave it to the health authorities. Unfortunately a lot of other diseases are peddled about in the same manner, such as diphtheria, pneumonia, sore throat, "cold" in the head—we always manage to ring in something about the "cold" microbes, don't we?—and with the exception of diphtheria these diseases do not interest the health authorities as yet.

There are families where children sit at table and say grace with unwashed hands. There are other families where parents take a squint at the children's hands, and, if they discover no microbes thereon, let the youngsters sit right down and shovel in whatever contamination may have been collected through the day. Is it any wonder grandma still has occasional seeming vindication of her delusion that "sugar makes worms"? Worms make worms, and children help the work along by transplanting the eggs from contaminated soil to food and from the food to their own innocent mouths.

Without holding any definite opinion about the dangers of the common drinking-cup, we firmly advocate a law requiring every person dispensing lunches or meals to furnish suitable lavatories where customers may wash their hands before partaking. Not all who say "Lord! Lord!" shall be saved, but cleanliness is as near to godliness as any virtue which is universally practicable.

STYLE

STYLE is something which looks so good this year that those who use it next year will be hopelessly out of date.

It is a sort of bacillus which afflicts clothes, furniture, houses, automobiles and the womanly form. When a thing is stylish, it is beautiful for a limited engagement, like an ancient actress with a talented press agent.

Style is the gas which causes the cost of living to soar. It makes a great deal of the difference between a happy, contented life on $12 a week and an unsuccessful effort to keep ahead of the wolf on $200 a month.

A well-built dining-room table will last for fifty years, but the style generally wears off in four seasons. This is why a great many families are growing fat off of golden oak tables which they have bought second-hand, at a great bargain, from other families who have had to sacrifice said tables in order to make the first payment on a new table with a darker complexion and 1915 model legs.

When a moth gets into a closet and raises a happy family in a flannel skirt the housewife shouts with despair and tries to call out the militia. Yet twice a year a new style gets into the show windows of the land and ruins $100,000,000 worth of perfectly good clothes—and nobody complains much.

Even women cannot be continuously beautiful because of styles. Today the thin woman may be a willowy dream of grace, but next year the designers will hang a new variety of clothes on her and she will have to buy twenty-three pounds of excelsior in order to bulge in the right places.

There are fifty-seven different levels of style, each one of which is being attained with great effort by families which can't afford it. Those who are devoting their harassed lives to being stylish should remember that just as soon as they are rich enough to maintain themselves comfortably in Style No. 22, Style No. 23 will move around just out of reach in front of them and make them perfectly miserable until they get it.

For this reason, American families should adopt "Let Swell Enough Alone" and live up to it, even though the family next door turns up its noses so high that they can't shed rain.

Views Of The Pr

Women In The News

AN INTERESTING investigation has just been conducted by the Christian Science Monitor of Boston, a daily paper that has taken high rank for excellence in the quality of the news it prints and the manner of its presentation, to ascertain what influence women have been exerting in the character of news printed in the secular daily press. The Monitor has discovered that not only the great daily papers of the country, but the Associated Press and other news agencies have felt the influence of women very decidedly in recent years. Each year sees the printing of more news of women's activities and news in which editors believe the women are interested and the sense of news values has been gradually changing among editors everywhere.

This investigation is valuable in that it has resulted in frank acknowledgment by many editors that they have their women readers constantly in mind in making up their papers nowadays, but it comes hardly as a surprise to editors who have spent any considerable time in newspaper making and have kept their eyes and ears open. Any news writer who has spent as much as twenty years in the profession can testify to the vastly different character of the important news then and now. There has been change along many lines, but the most marked change has been in two directions—the activities of women and business development.

It was not so long ago that a crime story was considered the big story in practically every newspaper office. If it was a murder it was sure of conspicuous display and a lengthy report. Even the petty offenses tried in police court were "played up" and reported with much detail. Now only the most unprogressive newspapers pay much attention to police court news and only when there is an unusual feature does a crime story get much space. In the better class of newspapers a story about some big business development or some plan of city betterment is considered a much better piece of news than a crime story. Articles dealing with what is sometimes cynically referred to as "the uplift" are far more welcome than those detailing the so-called interesting phases of counterfeiting or some other criminal activity. That women are largely responsible for this change in editors' ideas of news values is true, and the business success won by publications that were quick to recognize and respond to women's tastes is proof of their sagacity. There is nothing servile in this catering to the women; it is but a recognition on the part of the more enlightened press of the increasing importance of women in the world's activities. A glance at any live, progressive daily paper will disclose that despite the more modern trend the activities of men still dominate the news columns.—Topeka, Kans., Daily Capital.

People's Legal Friend

"Capital" And "Capital Stock"

Q. Please explain to me the difference between "capital" and "capital stock," as applied to corporations.

A. The terms are often used interchangeably. Strictly speaking, however, the word "capital" means the entire assets of the corporation, while the corporation's "capital stock" is the amount which is prescribed by the charter or by the articles of agreement and which is contributed by the stockholders or which they may contribute.

Married Women's Property Rights

Q. Are married women's rights as to property very much changed by legislative acts in different states?

A. Statutory enactments in the various states have made important changes in this respect.

A Change Of Front

Q. I recently bought some goods, paying for them in part. The goods were to be delivered the next day. The man now says I cannot have them until they are fully paid for. Has he any right to withhold them from me?

A. If credit was extended to you at the time, and if the seller did not reserve title until the goods were fully paid for, you were entitled to receive the goods at once.

Payment Of Taxes

Q. Is it legal for a landlord to put a clause in a lease providing that the tenant shall pay taxes?

A. Yes. It is simply a question whether the tenant, after reading a lease containing this provision, wishes to sign it.

Not For Storage

Q. Please tell me when a railroad passenger, after reaching his destination, is required to call for his baggage.

A. He should do so within a reasonable time after arriving at his destination.

When A Check Should Be Cashed

Q. When a check is given to me by a person residing in the same town, how soon must I present it to the bank for payment?

A. It should be presented for payment within a reasonable time. As a general rule, such reasonable time means the day you receive the check or the following day.

Put Them In Different Cells

Q. Where the members of a partnership engage in frequent quarrels and differences of opinion, what legal remedy is there, if any?

A. If the quarrels are so serious as to make a continuance of the partnership practically impossible, or if they are such as to defeat the common purposes and objects of the partnership, a court of equity will decree a dissolution.

Not A Legal Transaction

Q. If a man is occupying a public office, is it lawful for him to assign his salary before receiving it?

A. The courts, as a general rule, look upon such assignments as illegal and void.

The Employer's Claim

Q. I employed a man some time ago to act as my agent in a certain business. At the time I believed him to be intelligent and skillful, but have since found that he has been doing his work in a shiftless and incompetent manner. Have I any legal remedy?

A. It is the duty of the agent to exercise such care and skill as the circumstances and the business in hand demand and such as might ordinarily and reasonably be expected of an agent under the circumstances. If he fails to do so, and the employer sustains injury in consequence, the agent may be compelled to respond in damages.

The Life Line

The Woman Who "Stretches A Point"

She doesn't believe in risqué stories, yet, sometimes—say, when a wealthy hostess tells her one over a cup of tea, well, it would be pretty impolite not to laugh. So, for the sake of politeness, she stretches a point and laughs. "For the sake of politeness!" As if a reputation for politeness was dearer to her than a reputation for purity! And anyway, is the question one of politeness? Isn't it one of defence? What right has any woman to assume that her listener is coarse and not "particular"? "What do I owe you, that I should unguard my reputation for you?" should be her attitude toward those who essay to entertain her with ribaldry. But instead, she "stretches a point" and laughs! She is blind to the insult implied in the offer of such entertainment. She has put a higher estimate on a rule of conduct than on a principle. She's set up the wrong idol. She's for sale at the price of a coarse woman's good nature.

She's going cheap.

The Dentist

The dentist bowed me to a chair
In manner most delightful
He mauled me when he got me there.
His cruelty was frightful.

He jacked my teeth apart and tore
Off chunks of conversation.
I suffered on—an awful bore!—
In silent desperation.

His kind attentions never ceased.
The pain was something killing.
Though not what you would call a feast
His dope was somewhat filling.

I saw my poor wife wearing crêpe;
Myself a blessing martyr.
(The dentist's in an awful scrape:—
You see he's caught a Tartar!)

Of little tricks at bridge he's full:
He leads without permission.
I rather think he gets his pull
From some strong politician.

Oh, maybe some day I'll be glad
To get a job as preacher,
A laundryman, an errand lad,
A President, a teacher.

A soldier, artist, candy butch,
A Seventh Day Adventist—
But, ah, my heart's too tender—much!—
To let me be a dentist!

Daddy's Bedtime Story — How Billie Fed Squirrels on The Wishing Stone.

Like a Flash He Turned Into Mr. Gray Squirrel.

"THERE was once a little boy," began daddy, "who went to the woods to feed squirrels. He had done it so many times that they were almost as tame as park squirrels."

"What was his name?" Jack wanted to know.

"Billie," said daddy. "There was one very beautiful gray squirrel that had just got a new fall coat."

"Just like Jack!" cried Evelyn.

"Yes, and the edges of the arms and legs were red against the gray, and his splendid bushy tail was so new that it looked like a gray plume."

"Did he bite?" asked Evelyn.

"Squirrels will bite if you hold on to their nut, as so many children do, to tease them. They have sharp, clean, white little teeth that nip through flesh just like needles. So Billie sat down on a big flat rock, all mossy and bumpy, and peanut after peanut went into Mr. Gray Squirrel's stomach.

"'Oh, I wish I were a squirrel!' cried Billie in a burst of admiration.

"Presto! You see Billie did not know the stone he was sitting on was the wishing stone. Like a flash he turned into a Mr. Gray Squirrel with a beautiful fur coat and a plumy tail, and away he scampered to the hollow of an old oak for an acorn. He cracked it open skillfully, dug out the kernel with his sharp little teeth and swiftly ate it. Then he whisked up to the treetop and leaped from the oak to a chestnut, where he stopped to have a swift quarrel with another young gray even handsomer than he was."

"Who beat?" Jack asked.

"Our Billie Squirrel," said daddy. "Then he climbed to the tiptop of a young pine and hung there, head down, enjoying the fine view of the hills roundabout. He dug his sharp little claws into the rough bark and swung there as long as he wished without falling. Then a dog yelped, and he dashed from the pine to his hollow oak home and stayed in his soft nest.

"Then he ran down on the ground, sniffing for beechnuts the other squirrels had hid. Then he remembered something about a peanut and scampered back to the big flat rock.

"'Oh, I wish I were that little boy with a pocketful of nuts!' he said.

"Presto! You see Mr. Gray Squirrel did not know that he was standing on the wishing stone. Like a flash he turned into Billie."

"Is there a wishing stone on uncle's farm?" asked Jack.

"Look and find one," said daddy, kissing them good night.

Household Hints

MAT TO CLEAN SHOES

If you want a good mat to clean shoes on, take a rope one or two inches thick and lay it on a wide board, beginning in the center; lay it around and around till mat is big enough for use. Then nail rope fast to the board at beginning, and then every three or four inches, to keep it in place. Saw the board around the size of rug. Easy to keep clean.

SAVES TIME

When you wish to crochet an edge to handkerchief or other work, just stitch the edge all the way around on the machine, not using any thread. This will make the tiny holes the same distance apart, through which the crochet hook will slip easily without having to punch cloth every time.

IF SUIT GETS SHINY

If your blue serge suit becomes shiny, renovate in the following way: Make a strong "blue" water, sponge the material with it, allow to dry slightly, spread on ironing board, cover with piece of muslin, press with hot iron.

THE TABLE.

Marshmallow Icing—One cup sugar, add two-thirds cup water and boil till it spins a thread. Have one-half pound marshmallows cut in quarters, beat in the syrup while hot, add pulverized sugar to make the desired thickness.

Chocolate Marshmallow Cake—Melt in double boiler two squares of chocolate, half cup milk, one cup sugar; set aside to cool. When cool, beat in the yolk of one egg. Make a batter of half cup butter, one cup sugar, half cup milk, two eggs, two teaspoons baking powder and 2½ cups pastry flour. Beat chocolate mixture into batter. Bake in three round layer cake tins. Frosting and filling: Bring to the boiling point half cup water and one cup sugar. Stir in, one at a time, one-half pound marshmallows and soak until thick enough to spread. Add a little salt and one teaspoon of vanilla.

Fresh Pineapple Salad—Pare pineapple and remove the eyes; chip into thin, small slices, dress with honey dressing and let stand thirty minutes. Serve on lettuce hearts.

Apple Salad—Wash, pare and cut into cubes six large apples. To them add one cupful chopped celery, two cups English walnut kernels (save some halves for top of salad). Make a dressing of two eggs, half cup sugar, one-fourth cup vinegar, two tablespoons butter and one tablespoon flour. Cook all together in double boiler, stirring constantly. When it thickens remove from fire and beat five minutes. When cold stir into the apple mixture. Serve in salad bowl, using half kernels to decorate; garnish with celery leaves.

Tapioca Custard—Soak one cup tapioca over night in water. Cook until clear. Then beat two eggs light, add all together and bake till brown. When cool slice four large ripe bananas in it. Better still with whipped cream on top. Flavor with vanilla if desired.

Eggless Cookies—Two cups sugar, one-half cup lard, one cup sour milk, one teaspoon soda, flour enough to make a stiff dough; any flavor you like.

CHAPTER VIII.

Business and Love.

RODNEY'S back was turned on his old life now—there was no doubt of that. The boy was usually the first after Mary to reach the office. Peale was always late.

"I say, Peale," Rodney would say, "you're late again. It's got to stop. Here it is 10 o'clock."

"Don't scold, little boss," Peale would answer as he hung up his coat. "That blamed alarm clock—first time in my life it didn't go off."

"I'm afraid that's old stuff," Rodney would answer sternly.

One morning Peale looked at the little boss in great surprise.

"Holy Peter Piper, you've shaved off your mustache," he ejaculated.

"Yes," said Rodney, grinning, "I'm just beginning to get on to myself. By George, I certainly used to look like the deuce. Do you observe the clothes?" he added, rising and turning round.

"By George, I certainly used to look like the deuce."

"Why, you're getting to be a regular business man. My tuition," said Peale.

"You bet your life. Business is great fun," said Rodney. "I thought it would bore me, but it's immense; it's the best game I ever played. What's the news with you?"

"Well, I've been on father's trail," answered Peale. "We only just got back from Buffalo this morning."

"We?" queried Rodney.

"Yes, your father and I," Peale explained. "He went to the Intercolonial in Buffalo. I had all the billboards in the neighboard plastered thick and forty-eight street stands along the streets to the railroad station. From the time the old man got in until he got out he couldn't look anywhere without seeing 13 Soap. I even found out the number of his room and had a small balloon floating 13 Soap streamers right outside his window. I took a page in all the Buffalo papers, bribed the hat boy to keep putting circulars in his hat every time he checked it and sent him one of our new folders every mail. I came back with him on the train, and when he went into the washroom last night I had the porter say, 'Sorry, sir, we [illegible] got no 13 Soap, but you can't hardly keep any on hand—it's such grand, grand soap.'"

Another day Rodney calmly said to Peale, "I have plans for our new factory."

"Plans for what? Have you gone dippy?"

"Here they are," said Rodney, producing a large blue print. "Pretty real looking, aren't they?"

"You don't mean you've actually got some nut to build us a factory?" shouted Peale.

"No, no. They are to impress father. Don't you see?"

"Oh, yes. Well, that is an idea," admitted Peale.

"If he ever does drop in to make a deal," said Rodney, "I thought we ought to have something to make a front—something that looks like a plant. And by the way, if we can let it leak out that it's the Andover soap people who are backing us with unlimited capital," went on Rodney.

"The Andover soap people?" Peale inquired.

"Sure! Father's always hated 'em in business," explained Rodney. "His oldest friend, though, is John Clark, one of the big bugs in that company. Clark's got a son, Ellery, that father dislikes because he's such a success in business always held him up to me as a model son to pattern by. It would make father wild if he thought that old Clark was going to back us."

"Then that scheme ought to be good for a great rise out of father. Say, by the way, I put over a corner on him this morning," chattered Peale. "I arranged for a parade of sandwich men up and down in front of his house. When he got to his office there was another bunch there."

"Isn't it funny, though, that nobody's tried to buy any soap from us yet?" asked Rodney, with some anxiety.

This was a very tender point with the soap company. Mary and Rodney worried over it, and Rodney dreamed at night about it. An occasional small order that might filter in from some remote outlying district or some small merchant whose credit was doubtful, was gazed upon as parents gaze at their first baby.

"It takes time to create a demand," he would say, but admitted that the 200 cakes of pink castile they had bought looked swell in their old rose wrappers. It was a pity they hadn't got a couple of hundred thousand dollars to go after this advertising thing on the level, instead of just for father. Neither he nor Rodney knew how much money they had left.

"Don't ask me," said Peale. "I'm not a financier. Where's our worthy bookkeeper, Miss Grayson?" he added, looking at his watch. "It's nearly 11."

"I'll bet she was here before either of us; she always is. By George, isn't she a corker?" began Rodney lyrically.

"Oh, she's all right," agreed Peale indifferently.

"All right! Why, the girls you read about don't mean anything compared to Mary," began the ecstatic lover. "She's got Juliet beat a mile. Every time I think of her I want to yell or do some other darn fool thing, and every time I see her I just want to get down and kiss her shoes."

Rodney said all this and could have said much more, but Peale's mind was on other things.

"If we could only land one hard wallop on father after that Buffalo business," he reflected sadly, still on business.

"Didn't you hear what I said?" demanded Rodney indignantly.

"Not a word," said Peale.

"I was talking about Mary."

"I know you were. That's why I didn't listen," said Peale delicately.

"Speak of the goddess," he added, as Mary just then entered.

She was dressed neatly and appropriately to her new role, distinguishing between the tone of the old Martin offices and this new enterprise into which she had been drawn by such curious processes. To Rodney as always, this morning and every morning, she was a vision of loveliness, a refreshment for tired eyes.

"Ah, you're here!" he said joyfully. "Now everything's all right. It's a great world."

"Don't be silly," said Mary briskly. "This is a business office."

"By George, Mary," began Rodney, again.

"Miss Grayson!" corrected Mary.

"By George, Miss Grayson, you do look simply stunning. You're twice as pretty today as you were yesterday, and tomorrow you'll be"—

"Hey, hey, change the record, or put on a soft needle," put in Peale good naturedly. Mary rewarded him with her approval.

"Quite right—in business hours only business," she said.

"But you certainly are the prettiest thing," persisted Rodney.

"Am I?" said Mary.

"Well," said Peale, "it looks to me as if you two were going to play another love scene, so I shall attend to a little business. Exit advertising manager up stage," he laughed, going out.

"By George, Mary, it seems a hundred years since yesterday. I do love you," Rodney began again, when they were alone.

"Do you really?"

"Why, of course!"

"It isn't that you're just in love with love," suggested Mary with a thoughtful look, "and that I've been very blue eyed and baby faced?"

"I should say not," protested Rodney. "Why, you're not a bit like that."

"Oh! Why do you love me, then?"

"I don't know."

"You see?" said Mary accusingly.

"I mean, Why does anybody love anybody?" Rodney expounded. "I can't explain. It's just that you're you, I guess. I can't talk the way they do in books. I wish I could. All I know is that if you left here I'd quit too. I'd just want to walk around after you all the rest of my life and say, 'Are you comfortable, my love? Are you happy? If there is anything on the wide earth you want let me get it for you, Mary. What a wonderful name that is—just like you, simple and honest and beautiful. Mary!'"

"And you really love me like that?" asked Mary.

"No. A million times more."

"Oh, Rodney, Rodney," she said, almost crying.

"What's the matter?" asked her lover anxiously. "You love me too, don't you?"

"It means a lot to me to see you succeed," sighed Mary.

"But it isn't just the success, just the money, is it?" queried the boy.

Mary paused awhile and then answered, "No, I don't think it is."

"Then when will you marry me?" he began eagerly.

"Not in business hours"—

"Very well, we'll wait till after 6."

"No, you agreed not until you'd made good."

"I know, I know, but it's mighty hard to be engaged and not to be allowed to kiss you. You won't even let me come to see you—much. It's all just business. Do you love me?"

"Do you doubt that I do?"

"No, but I'd like to hear you say you do."

"I won't gratify your vanity. We must stick to soap and advertising. Is that understood?"

"I suppose so, for today anyhow," he agreed, then leaned over and kissed her suddenly.

"Oh, Rodney!" protested the secretary.

"They say stolen [illegible]es are sweetest, but I don't think [illegible]" he said, laughing. "They're so [illegible]ed short. Won't you give me a real [illegible]?"

Mary shook her head.

"No. Now to business."

Rodney sat down again with an air of resignation.

"Well, then if this is a business office what do you mean by not getting down here till nearly 11?" he demanded sternly. He did not really think she had been remiss. He was only teasing her, of course. He was the optimistic one and knew things were all right. Peale had hypnotized him with his advertising magic.

It had been great fun reading the ads. They had seemed so large and conspicuous and inescapable. You would have thought that every reader of the newspapers, every traveler in the cars or busses in the special section marked out by Peale for old Mr. Martin's benefit, would have ordered 13 Soap straightway next morning whether they needed more toilet soap or not. Rodney had positively a feeling of self consciousness as he walked downtown in the morning. There was a half formed thought in his head that he might even be pointed at in the streets as the president of the great 13 Soap company. Now Mary's grave face and her cool ways when he would have made love to her chased all such business reveries into thin air.

"I was here at 9," said Mary.

"I knew it. But where've you been?"

"That's what I've got to tell you. I'm sorry it's such bad news."

"It can't be very bad if it comes from you."

"But it is. I've been out trying to raise money."

"Why, Mary, are you in trouble?"

"No, but I am afraid you are."

"If you wanted money, why on earth didn't you come to me?" asked Rodney.

"Because you haven't any. This firm's broke. I was surprised, too, when I balanced the books this morning," said Mary, "but you've spent a lot these last two days. Here's a statement of assets and liabilities. You owe $22,818.09."

"Great Scott, what are our assets?"

"One hundred and thirty-three dollars and thirteen cents."

Rodney shook his head courageously.

"That's quite a showing for a month," he chaffed.

"And Mr. Jones, the advertising man, was here this morning too. He won't wait any longer for his money," went on Mary.

"But we paid him $5,000 not long ago."

"And we still owe him $9,400," said Mary. "Unless he gets $2,500 of it today he says he will put you out of business."

"You didn't manage to raise any money while you were out, did you?" Rodney asked, pocketing his qualms about the source of Mary's capital.

"Not a cent," said Mary. "And you haven't heard from the countess since that day she signed the contract?"

"Not a word," said Rodney, and added hopefully, "But maybe we shall soon."

"I don't know what we're going to do," said Mary, sighing.

But Rodney was still hopeful and inclined to cheer up.

"The important thing is I've got you anyhow," he said happily just as Ambrose Peale came in again.

"Well, well, well! Still spooning, eh?" said Peale. "Say, son, I've just learned a lot from that advertising agent downstairs. Great little guy; full of facts and figures. He gets paid $50,000 a year for writing ads."

"What's the 9 cents for?"

Peale was incorrigible, and today his talk in the face of their actual condition got on Mary's nerves a little. She interrupted impatiently.

"Never mind him," she said to Rodney. "We're broke."

"Nonsense! Some mistake in the books," said Peale.

"Is it? Here's a statement of our liabilities," she said, holding up a paper—$22,808.09."

"What's the 9 cents for?" Peale wanted to know, reading. "Assets $133.13. That's a lucky hunch, thirteen. Well, why not change the headings? Make the liabilities the assets and the assets the liabilities. See, like this," and he scribbled on a pink pad that he carried with him: "Liabilities, $133.13; assets, $22,818.09. Merely a matter of bookkeeping," he added cheerfully, jabbing the pink paper on a hook."

Glimpses of Married Life

By Mrs. Eva Lichard.

"It's the Scotts' night to entertain," said Parsons. "I crave amusement."

"Sorry, old man, but our stage properties have been derailed; you'll have to look elsewhere for entertainment tonight."

"Get Brice to tell you a story; he's a cracker-jack at that," suggested Jaynes.

"Do," chorused the campers.

"I am afraid to try after that send - off." A pleased smile lit up the thin face. "But if I can be of any service I shall be most happy."

"Pile up the firewood," called the doctor, rolling up a log for a seat. "The smoke will help keep the mosquitoes away, and a fire light is always a pretty background for a story."

Mr. Brice sat down on the grass, his queer little figure outlined against the red glow of the fire. As Nell said afterward, "he looked like a gnome with his humped back, head covered with bushy hair, and large nose." This was his story:

"When I was a boy I lived in the mountains of West Virginia, and our nearest town was in a narrow valley on a brawling stream. There were four boys of about the same age who lived on adjoining farms. They proposed that we walk over to this town on Saturday night. I was not allowed to go to town with the boys, as it was considered wild and wicked by my parents. However, I went early to bed and crept out over the woodshed roof, and across the back lot to the road where they had agreed to wait for me. We enjoyed the walk in the fresh mountain air and hung around the railroad station to watch the [illegible] and I enjoyed the sensation of being deliciously wicked, when I thought how my father would look at me over his glasses if he could see me then.

"It was after ten when we started home, and we beguiled the way with stories of ghosts and deeds of daring. There was a lonely graveyard on the edge of a pine grove that bordered a short cut over the hills. We often used this path in daylight, but it never occurred to me to shorten our midnight walk by taking that route home. Joe Fitz lived a mile farther than any of us and he proposed that we go that way home, arguing that ghosts couldn't hurt four boys in a bunch anyway.

"'I don't much believe in ghosts,' he added as the others turned down his plan.

"'You're afraid,' he twitted.

"'If you're not afraid of ghosts, you go that way by yourself,' challenged Dave Rogers, the biggest daredevil in the country.

"'Oh, that's too lonesome,' Joe objected.

"'You're afraid,' rejoined Dave. 'I dare you to go.'

"'I never take a dare,' Joe said, throwing his head back. 'I'll be at Jackson's corners before you get there, and I'll wait for you.'

"He started bravely up the steep path. We watched him, expecting him to turn. I almost called to him to come back. As he never turned, we hurried along the road and half ran as we neared the corners. There was no sign of him. We started down toward the graveyard and hung around the bend in the road till it began to grow light. Finally Dave said: 'He's probably gone home; he got tired of waiting. You know it's lots shorter that way. Let's go home.'

"So we stole off and crept into our several beds. About nine the next morning Mr. Fitz drove up.

"'Seen anything of Joe?' he called.

"'No, he's not been here; have you lost him?'

"'He went to town with the boys last night and I thought he might have stopped here for the night.'

"'Billy wasn't along. Maybe he stayed with Dave or John,' answered father.

"Mr. Fitz slapped the reins on the horse's back and drove off without another word.

"I felt a deadly sinking of the heart and must have been very pale, for when father came over to me he said:

"'You know something of this; tell me about it.' I told him.

"He never said a word, but went to the barn and saddled the mare and trotted off down the road to Dave's house. Here he overtook Mr. Fitz and told him what he had learned. Together they went to the graveyard. They found poor Joe lying dead across a grave, his feet tangled up in a rope. An old white horse was peacefully cropping grass near him. They figured it out that he had reached the graveyard in a state of high nervous tension and had caught a glimpse of the old horse among the trees and taken it for a ghost. Probably his step started the horse to running and the rope was across the path. His feet were caught and he was violently thrown to the ground. The shock was too much for him. He died of heart failure, the doctor said."

A shudder ran around the group as Mr. Brice stopped speaking.

Word has been received from the members of the Princeton Club, of this city, that the annual interscholastic tennis tournament will commence on the courts of the Plainfield Country Club on Saturday. This yearly event is always looked forward to by the racquet wielders of the borough and city schools. TELLS WHY SHE IS FOR SUFFRAGE

Mrs. Everett Colby Believes That Women Should Have A Say.

SAYS IT IS A DUTY

Former Plainfield Woman is Not Only Devoting Time to the Cause, But Has Persuaded Others to Join Movement.

Mrs. Everett Colby, of Oldstead Lodge, Llewellyn Park, Orange, one of the best known women in New Jersey society, is giving up the greater part of her time to work for the suffrage amendment. Mrs. Colby is not alone in her work for suffrage, but has persauded many of her friends to join her. They have formed a committee of one hundred for this purpose.

Among the members secured for the committee of one hundred there are names prominent in social, diplomatic, business and financial circles throughout the country, including John Franklin Fort, Mrs. Otto Wittpenn, Mrs. Ogden Hammond and William L. Saunders.

"With my home, my husband and children, some might argue that I do not need the ballot," said Mrs. Colby when interviewed in her beautiful home recently. "Scores of women are working for the ballot who appear to have everything that life can give them, but many feel it their duty to be interested in public affairs, while others, realizing the disadvantages under which thousands of women are earning their livelihood today, earnestly believe the working woman should have a say in making the laws which govern the hours and conditions of employment. This is why women of the leisure class are not only contributing in money to the campaign, but are giving their time as well.

"There are many thousands of women employed in factories in New Jersey, and over one-fourth of them receive less than $6 a week. This can scarcely be called a living wage, can it? In many states where woman suffrage exists there are eight hour laws. For years we have worked for an eight hour law in New Jersey and finally were able to reduce the outrageously long hours by a ten hour law. Canneries, however, are exempt.

"I believe suffrage will do much for women of all classes. There are many women who have little interest beyond those of bridge and the matinee. They should be made to feel that it is their duty to take part in civic affairs. The pampered woman of this country is an international joke. The thousands of these idle women add to the unrest of the country."

Mrs. Colby, who was Miss Edith Hyde, formerly of this city, married a New Jersey man of well known family, who has served the State as a Senator. He is at present working hard for suffrage. When making a suffrage speech recently he was asked by a man in the audience if many married women were engaged in the campaign, and the heckler added that they ought not to be. Mr. Colby promptly answered that his wife was very active and that quite without detriment to her family.

An interview with Mrs. Colby and an introduction to her three beautiful young children would amply convince any one that Mrs. Colby has been an unusually intelligent mother and has not sacrificed the comfort and welfare of her children in her efforts to win the vote for other women who are not as well favored by the gods.

"THE BOOK OF LIFE."

Rev. Dr. Charles R. Erdman, of Princeton, will deliver an address in the parlor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church tomorrow night, at 8 o'clock, on "The Book of Life." This is especially intended for parents and teachers. The public is cordially invited to be present.

"A. B." CLUB ENTERTAINED.

Members of the "A. B." club were entertained last evening at the home of Miss Mabel E. Farlee, 234 Watchung avenue. The evening was spent in playing games and rendering musical selections. At a late hour refreshments were served.

JAMES C. WHITTAKER.

James C. Whittaker, aged 22 years, died on Sunday, September 12, at his home in Middletown, New York. The funeral was held from the late home, Friday, September 17, and interment was made in the family plot at Middletown.

ATTEND CONVENTION.

Guy Thomas, Isaac Wyckoff and Fred Walsh, representing Royal Council, Sr. O. U. A. M., of this city, are today attending the annual State convention of the order at Glassboro. They are making the trip by automobile.

MAJ. MARTIN SLATED TO BE LIEUT. COLONEL

Former Captain of Company K in Line for Honorable Promotion.

It is believed that Maj. William B. Martin, formerly captain of Company K, the local branch of the Second New Jersey regiment, will be elected to succeed Lieut. Col. Forman. Maj. Martin is the ranking major of the regiment, and while seniority of rank does not always govern such promotions, it is a large factor. So far no opposition to Maj. Martin has developed and as he is popular in the regiment his election seems assured.

Maj. Martin first enlisted in the national guard as a private in December, 1884. He was commissary sergeant of the regiment when it was disbanded in 1899. He served in the Spanish-American war and was honorably discharged as a 1st lieutenant in 1899.

In 1901 he re-enlisted as a private in the national guard and has worked himself up to his present position by efficiency and service. He has been a major since 1907. He is one of the best rifle shots in the entire State guard and was captain of the New Jersey State rifle team last year, making the highest score.

Mrs. E. F. Feickert, president of the New Jersey Woman's Suffrage Association, is optimistic over the prospect of victory in New Jersey this fall. She declares that the outlook grows brighter. Sheriff Eugene Kinkead is quoted as saying that the women will carry Hudson county.

Mrs. Feickert says that over one hundred newspapers are friendly toward the movement, four are opposed and the rest are preserving a strict neutrality, but publishing whatever the association sends them. The State president says that for many months the association has been concentrating its money and workers upon the personal canvass, following the advice of Mrs. Carrie Catt Chapman, who urges quiet, persistent and thorough canvassing.

Street meetings are held every night in some places and once or twice a week in most of the cities and towns of more than a few hundred people. During the final month of the campaign auto tours for almost every county and several auto parades, which will embrace ten or a dozen cities lying close together, have been arranged. Several such parades will be held the Saturday before election. The New York association has promised to send one or two squads into New Jersey and among the prominent men and women who are to speak during the closing days of the campaign are the following:

YOUTH ARRESTED ON SOMERSET WARRANT

Local Court Had No Jurisdiction but Hamilton Was Recommitted by Police.

Edward Hamilton, an eighteen-year-old local boy, was arrested by the local police Monday afternoon on the strength of a serious charge preferred against him by sixteen-year-old Louise O. O'Keefe, of South Bound Brook. He was liberated Monday night on bail furnished by his mother and was arraigned this morning before City Judge William G. DeMeza. In court today Chief of Police Kiely explained that an investigation of the case revealed the fact that the alleged crime had been committed in Somerset county and accordingly moved for the dismissal of the complaint.

As Hamilton was leaving the courtroom with his counsel, Robert Newton Crane, he was arrested by Lieut. Maurice Higgins, of the local police force, who had a warrant from Somerset county setting forth the same charges. The prisoner was, accordingly, recommitted and held to await the arrival of Detective George Totten, of the Somerset county prosecutor's staff.

Hamilton was arraigned before Judge Sutphen in Somerville this afternoon and held in $1,000 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury. His mother furnished the necessary bonds.

FALL AND WINTER ACTIVITIES RESUMED

Program of Unusual Interest Enjoyed at the Y. M. C. A. Last Night.

An enthusiastic group of members and their friends attended the opening of the fall and winter activities at the Y. M. C. A. last night, where a program of unusual interest was provided. Owing to weather conditions the plan of holding the exer*cises in the gymnasium yard had to* be abandoned, the auditorium and the social rooms being used instead.

Adrian Plate, a New York entertainer, gave some unusually good exhibitions of mystical work. His sleight-of-hand tricks were clever, and it was the opinion of those who witnessed the exhibition that he was a little above the average in his line of work.

H. Benjamin Berse sang a number of solos which were enthusiastically received. He was accompanied on the piano by Leo Hirsch. The program was concluded with a social hour, at which refreshments were served by the Ladies' Auxiliary.

F. O. Dunning, chairman of the social committee, in announcing the coming events of his department for the fall and winter, stated that plans were being made for a number of "open nights" to which men of the various city churches were to be invited as guests, extending to them the privileges of the association, making them better acquainted with the purposes of the Y. M. C. A. On Thursday evening, October 21, another membership sociable will be held when it is hoped that the young people of Trinity Reformed church will provide the entertainment. Special plans are also being made for Hallowe'en, Thanksgiving Day and New Year's.

All eyes are on Rumania. Dispatches from reliable sources in Rome state she will join the Allies. She has been quietly mobilizing for months.

WESTFIELD POLICE IN MORE TROUBLE

Acting-Chief Caulfield Suspended Pending Hearing on Charges.

Additional developments in the Westfield police department's troubles and shakeups came to light at a meeting of the Common Council of that town Monday night when serious charges were preferred against Acting-Chief Martin Caulfield by Police Commissioner Charles M. Affleck, and pending a hearing on September 27, the accused has been temporarily suspended. Sergeant John Rosencrans was named to succeed Caulfield to the position he assumed when Chief O'Neill was deposed several months ago following the bringing of charges against him.

Commissioner Affleck alleges that Caulfield violated the criminal laws of the State and also the Westfield ordinances regulating the police department by uttering four forged notes, with intent to defraud the Westfield National Bank, by affixing the names of Ella Caulfield (his wife) to the instruments. The notes were as follows: March 31, 1915, $50; April 1, 1915, $100; May 3, 1915, $25, and June 4, 1915, $150. The information upon which the charges were filed was brought to Commissioner Affleck by the National Bank directors, it is said.

FIFTEEN DEAD, HUNDREDS INJURED IN N. Y. SUBWAY EXPLOSION

SEVENTH AVENUE, FROM 23RD TO 25TH STREET, CAVED IN FROM CURB TO CURB, BURYING MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN.

FIVE BODIES REMOVED IN TWENTY MINUTES

Deadly Gas Fumes Make Rescue Work Dangerous at First—Dying Victims Are Cut Free With Axes and Bars by Policemen and Firemen—Workmen Have Miraculous Escape—Near-by Stores Turned Into Temporary Hospitals—Dead Not Identified—Partial List of Those Most Seriously Injured Who Have Been Sent to Hospitals.

New York, Sept. 22.—More than fifteen persons are believed to be dead and 200 injured as the result of a terrific explosion that occurred prematurely in the new subway beneath Seventh avenue here this morning. The entire surface of the street, from curb to curb, was blown up for a distance of two complete blocks, from 23rd street to 27th.

The list of dead and injured includes men, women and children who were on street cars and busses in the two blocks when the explosion came, workmen and pedestrians.

The explosion occurred at 8:05 a. m. For hours it was impossible to secure a coherent story of its cause or effect because of the intense excitement that prevailed in the wrecked area.

One thousand policemen, half as many firemen, thirty ambulances, and emergency crews from the railway company and construction company were at rescue work within a few minutes.

3 Cars Drop Into Abyss.

The blast shattered the big gas and water mains and made a chasm of the wrecked area. Three surface cars filled with passengers were caught in the blow-out and were dropped fifteen feet into the abyss, where the new subway is being built.

Several automobiles and a big brewery truck were also caught in the explosion and buried beneath the debris.

One of the street cars was almost completely buried by dirt, rock and other street paving which fell on it.

The United Electric Light and Power Company sent every emergency crew it has to the scene of the disaster, each equipped with pulmotors.

The work of getting the bodies out of the wreck was begun at once by police, firemen and civilians. Men and women pinned under heavy timbers were dug out by means of axes. Many were dying.

The rescue work was held up until the deadly gas fumes were shut off by the Consolidated Company's wrecking crews. Flames burst from many parts of the debris and the blaze imperiled the men and women caught beneath the timbers and rock until the rising flood from the broken water mains covered the fire area.

Workers Live By Miracle.

Penned under the debris were probably fifty subway workmen, mostly ironworkers, who were to begin the laying of rails and erection of iron and steel supports. The lives of many of these men were saved by the falling of the heavy plan shoring which formed a sort of roof over their heads and prevented heavier objects from above going through and crushing the men to death.

An area from Twenty-seventh street and east and west for half a block on each side of the saved in section was roped off by the police. All the houses in the immediate vicinity were emptied of tenants.

Five Bodies Recovered.

Within twenty minutes after the accident occurred five bodies had been taken out. Seventy-five injured were taken into the factory of the National Suit and Cloak Company at 207 West Twenty-fourth street, fifty into the offices of the Seymour Paper Company at the corner of Twenty-fourth street, and twelve into the drug store of Paulo Kraus at the corner of Twenty-fifth street. Still others were taken directly from the scene of the accident to the various hospitals.

Three bodies were taken to the West Twentieth street police station, two men and an elderly woman.

One of the men was evidently a laborer, and on the person of the other man was found a business card with the name "Krugman."

LIST OF THE INJURED.

At St. Vincent's Hospital:
Unknown woman, dying.
Barrow, Rae.
Borick, Fannie.

CAPSTICK FAVORS PREPAREDNESS

Congressman Believes That Country Should Be Ready for Any Emergency.

NO TIME FOR THEORIES

Says That Experts of Navy and Army Should Be Given Opportunity to Submit Their Plans and Ideas.

"I believe that this country should be prepared for every and any emergency that is likely to arise," said Congressman John H. Capstick, who dropped into the city today for a visit, "but I also believe that all plans for preparedness should be carried out along practical lines. It is the men in the army and navy who have had years of experience that should be able to put the country in a position to meet any condition that is likely to confront it now or in the future.

"It is only through practical experience that we can learn what is the best thing to do and this is no time for theories. This country wants to be able to take its proper place among the other nations of the world and should not be compelled to take a back seat for anyone. And yet a state of preparedness cannot be secured at a moment's notice. It must be planned and thought out carefully so that no mistakes may be made."

When questioned as to what he thought of the President's Naval Advisory Board, the Congressman said that he was not altogether in favor of it. He expressed the opinion that some of the members of that Board might be inclined to advance personal interests in suggesting ways and means for putting the country in a so-called state of preparedness.

"Let us hear from the experts of our navy and army," said the Congressman. "After they have submitted thir ideas and plans we will then be in a position to do something."

The Congressman clearly indicated that he believed in spending any reasonable amount to bring the country in the front rank, but was strongly opposed to any unnecessary expense which would tend to place a heavy burden on the taxpayers of this country. He favors such measures as will lighten this burden and therefore is against any scheme that will ultimately impose a heavier tax on the people.

Mr. Capstick is now getting ready to go to Washington. He and his secretary, John H. Nicol, will be at the Capitol at the time of the G. A. R. Encampment, it being their purpose to welcome the veterans from this district and see that they are given a cordial reception during their stay in Washington.

YOUTHS ARRESTED.

Julius Richards and Joseph Vitelli, two juvenile trouble makers, were arrested by Patrolman John Fritts yesterday afternoon on a charge of fighting on West Second street. The youngsters were at it hot and heavy when the patrolman happened on the scene and when he told them to "beat it" they both exhibited an inclination to "get fresh." Both have caused more or less trouble in the business section and when arraigned before Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning they were very penitent after spending the night in a cell. Mothers of both prisoners were on hand and upon their promise to administer a dose of corporal punishment the court suspended sentence.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature report from The State Trust Company for today is as follows: 9 a. m., 60 degrees; 11 a. m., 65 degrees; 1 p. m., 70 degrees.

DUNELLEN

All the Happenings of the Day In Plainfield's Hustling Suburb.

ALLEGES HE CAUSED DOG MUCH SUFFERING

S. P. C. A. to Press Complaint Against Marshal Harry Shugars, of Dunellen.

The case of the S. P. C. A. vs. Marshal Harry Srugars, of the local police, which was to have been tried in Judge David S. Campbell's court, yesterday, was adjourned for two weeks. The automobile of Louis C. Teed, the State agent for the society, broke down at Springfield while on the way from Newark to the borough for the hearing and over the telephone he requested an adjournment. The witnesses, Henry Wiedenhaupt, Abram Van Arsdale, Richard Sullivan, Mrs. Sophia Munn and Harry Delmar, who had been subpoenaed by the society, was instructed to appear in court for the hearing on October 4, without an additional summons.

The society in its complaint against Marshal Shugars alleges that he caused an aged dog owned by John Logan, of Washington avenue, undue suffering as the result of an endeavor to kill it with a pistol.

The incident happened on the night of Wednesday, September 8. Mr. Logan had requested the marshal to execute the animal as it was getting old and cross and he was afraid it might bite somebody.

Mr. Logan had expressly told the marshal, however, that he wanted him to use chloroform in killing the dog as he did not want the animal, which had been a faithful guardian of his home, to suffer.

Marshal Shugars first attempted to do this, but, it is said, the dog escaped from the recepticle in which it had been placed with a liberal supply of the deadly anesthetic before the marshal could set on the lid.

The marshal managed to recapture the animal later in the evening and, it is alleged, took it to the tennis court of the Crescent Tennis Club, tied it to the wire which surrounds the court, and then proceeded to use his pistol. The animal would not stand still and although the marshal fired four shots he failed to locate a vital spot. The howls of the animal brought a number of people residing in the neighborhood to the scene and, it is said, they made Marshal Shugars desist in his endeavors.

The marshal, it is said, felt as badly over the suffering that he had caused the animal as any of the assembly, and taking the dog under his arms, he carried it to police headquarters, where he put it out of the way as quickly as possible with chloroform.

LLOYD KNOX MAY BE RELEASED SOON

Being Held in $500 Bail in Somerset County Jail for Bigamy.

Lloyd Knox, colored, who is held in the Somerset County Jail charged with bigamy, will probably be released in the near future. Knox was arraigned before Recorder R. L. Reed at Bound Brook and after a hearing was held in $500 bail.

Knox claims that he married a woman by the name of Harris in New York State and that she deserted him several years later. Knox further states that he went to Red Bank and there married Mary Haines, but only entered upon the second matrimonial sea with information that his first wife was dead.

Owing to the alleged illegal marriage having taken place in Monmouth county there is some talk that Recorder Reed, of Bound Brook, had no authority in the matter.

A WOMAN'S BACK.

The Advice of This Plainfield Woman Is of Certain Value.

Many a woman's back has many aches and pains.

Ofttimes 'tis the kidneys' fault.

That's why Doan's Kidney Pills are so effective.

Many Plainfield women know this.

Read what one has to say about it:

Mrs. O. C. Moore, 57 Manning avenue, Plainfield, says: "I endured much misery from backache, caused by my kidneys. Many nights I was unable to rest at all and in the morning my limbs were so stiff and sore that I could hardly get out of bed. Whenever I caught the least cold it settled on my kidneys and any strain on my back made the aches and pains worse. I was treated by physicians, but their medicine didn't help me and it was not until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Randolph's drug store that I had any hope of getting rid of the trouble. They made me feel like a different person and I have never had any serious trouble since."

Price 50 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Moore had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. Adv.

COLLEGE STUDENTS APPEAR AS WAITERS

In Return for Services Princeton University Will Remit Full Board Bills.

Princeton, Sept. 22.—A new step toward democracy in American colleges was taken today when, with the opening of Princeton University, student waiters appeared at work in the University dining halls. The number of college boys at work in the Commons as head waiters and waiters is about seventy and in return for their services the university will remit the full board bills of these boys. The schedule of work is planned so as not to conflict with the university courses.

The daily routine of the new student waiters is so arranged that each man will serve two meals a day and eat the third meal with his classmates, thus maintaining his identity with his fellows. Some days the third meal will be breakfast, some days lunch and at other times dinner. The work of setting table and cleaning up afterwards will be left in the hands of professional help. From present indications the university is trying to make the work of the waiters as light as possible. In the kitchen various mechanical devices have been installed for dishwashing and other needs. L. A. Hillyer, a graduate of Princeton last year, will act as headwaiter in charge of the entire staff.

The innovation of student waiters is viewed with enthusiasm by the returning students, those in need of financial help being glad for obvious reasons and the others regarding it as another step toward true democracy on the campus. Some of the authorities are of the belief that the method has solved the whole question of student employment in Princeton.

FINAL ARRANGEMENTS FOR ENCAMPMENT

49th Annual Gathering of the G. A. R. Begins September 27.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—Final arrangements for the reception and entertainment of the Grand Army veterans at their 49th Annual Encampment during the week of September 27th have now been completed. To correct any impression which might be gained by the association of ideas, it should be stated that the encampment is not to be a tented affair. The reunion will not be held under canvas as has been the case with these affairs in many cities. Instead, the Washington Citizens' Committee has provided for the use of the veterans a building adequately adapted for the purposes of the encampment and having, with the exception of the capitol itself, the largest ground floor space of any structure in the city. This building is the one in which the last census was compiled and stands on First street, adjoining the Capital Plaza. The main floor is divided into two mammoth auditoriums in one of which the big reception on Tuesday night and the regular business session of the encampment will be held. The other has been set aside for campfires and the dog-watch of the naval veterans. On the floor above there is a row of twenty or more rooms wherein the various corps and departments will have their individual headquarters throughout the reunion. Rooms have also been assigned to be used as headquarters by the military and semi-military organizations allied with the Grand Army, so that all of the proceedings held in connection with the encampment will be under one roof.

A feature of the arrangements never heretofore provided will be a branch post office established in the encampment building, to which will be assigned by the postmaster of Washington, a force of clerks who will handle all incoming and outgoing mail for the veterans, and all correspondence intended for the visitors should be addressed to the encampment headquarters. Rest room, restaurant, hospital and other appointments and equipments necessary for the comfort and convenience of the old soldiers have been installed in the building.

The interior of the structure has been made to present a most attractive appearance by a force of decorators which the Washington Committee has brought from New York to give an artistic touch to the encampment.

At this writing, the Weather Bureau officials, judging the future by the past, have given it as their opinion that ideal climatic conditions will prevail in Washington during encampment week, and in view of all the preparations and arrangements which have been made, this is all that is needed to make the forthcoming encampment the most memorable one in the history of the Grand Army.

ANTHONY COMSTOCK DIES IN SUMMIT

For Forty Years Was Head of New York Society for Prevention of Vice.

Anthony Comstock, for forty-two years secretary and virtual head of the New York Society for the Prevention of Vice, and who in that time prosecuted more than four thousand persons and confiscated 175 tons of obscene literature and pictures, died last night in his home, at Summit. He was seventy-two years old, and had been ill several weeks.

Mr. Comstock was born in New Canaan, Conn., March 7, 1844, and when his brother was killed at Gettysburg he volunteered to take his place. He served throughout the rest of the war under General Gilmore, being mustered out in July, 1865.

He came to New York after the war and became a clerk and then a bookkeeper in a store. He was interested in religious work and spoke at many street meetings. In this missionary work he became interested in the suppression of obscene pictures and literature, which then were quite common.

He formed the New York Society for the Prevention of Vice in 1873, obtained a State charter for it and caused himself to be appointed a United States postoffice inspector without pay. Under his commission he was a free lance and did not report to any one.

This commission as a postoffice inspector clothed him with the right to make raids and arrests, and for more than forty years his activities in that line were such that he gained national fame. The Society for the Prevention of Vice came to be commonly known as the Comstock Society.

The society was supported by voluntary contributions and under the State charter by a percentage of the fines imposed upon the persons found guilty.

POLICYHOLDERS WILL VOTE FOR DIRECTORS

Part of the Mutualization Plan of the Prudential Insurance Company.

As a result of the mutualization of The Prudential Insurance Company of America on December 6th next, the millions of Prudential policyholders will be privileged for the first time to select the company's directors. The meeting will be held at the home office of the company, Newark, New Jersey, and the personal or proxy vote of each policyholder is earnestly solicited and urged by President Forrest F. Dryden.

The policyholders as the owners of substantially all of the company's stock, are represented by a trustee, Hon. Austen Colgate, who will be required to vote the policyholders' stock in accordance with the selection made at the policyholders' meeting at the meeting of stockholders held at the same place on January 10, 1916.

By the policyholders' purchase of the Prudential stock and power to select directors is placed directly in their hands and they therefore now own and control the big institution and will also share to the full in its profits.

Letters announcing the meeting referred to and urging every policyholder either to be present or vote by proxy have been sent out. There are more than thirteen million Prudential policies outstanding and every holder of one of these, who is over the age of 20 and whose policy has been in force for at least one year, will be entitled to vote at this meeting. It is the desire of the company that every policyholder should have full notification of the meeting, and to this end advertisements will run for five months in the newspapers of the leading centers of the country, and, in addition, all the company's agents have been instructed to personally notify the policyholders.

Accompanying the letters of announcement to the policyholders are proxies to enable the policyholders to express their individual choice for directors, and they are asked to forward them as quickly as possible to a committee selected to represent them by the board of directors. The committee comprises former Chancellor William J. Magie, former Supreme Court Justice Bennet Van-Syckel and John K. Gore, first vice-president of The Prudential. The proxies may be handed to representatives of the company.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

"It Pays to Advertise" is one of the brightest, best acted, and most enjoyable plays that Cohan and Harris have produced in the past ten years. Written by Roi Cooper Megrue and Walter Hackett, this farce ran for fifty-two solid weeks at the George M. Cohan Theatre, New York, where it made an enviable reputation as a laughing success.

In "It Pays to Advertise" the authors have dramatized a phrase that is known to every one who reads the newspapers or magazines, and have done it cleverly. They have written crispily and wittily of things that might happen to everyday persons and in a way that everyone can understand. There is nothing high brow about "It Pays to Advertise"; neither is there anything low brow. But just the same it is a very human and most interesting farce that keeps its audiences in a state of nearly constant laughter all the time the curtain is up. That's what farces are built for—to make you laugh—and "It Pays to Advertise" fulfills its mission to the letter and last line. It is to be seen at the Plainfield Theatre on Monday evening, September 27.

PROCTOR'S THEATRE

To the lovers of the silent drama of the screen, a word may be said relative to the photo-plays now being presented at the Proctor Theatre. These motion pictures are all features, entertaining, with recognized stars, and produced by companies that are well aware of the likes and dislikes of the general public in regards to the photo-play.

The pictures as now being shown at the Proctor house are of such a length that those who witness the plays are not tired out by a single picture. The cast in each case is such that justifies the presentation before Plainfield audiences.

A number of excellent motion dramas are scheduled for the remainder of the present week. "Caught," a three-part production, with Edna Mayo and Bryant Washburn playing the leading parts, is to appear this evening. For tomorrow, Ruth Stonehouse is booked to appear in that pleasing play entitled "When My Lady Smiles," a play that is sure to interest as well as please Proctor patrons.

Announcement is made that the first episode of the new serial photoplay, "Neal of the Navy," will appear on Friday, both afternoon and evening. Together with this, "The Man With an Iron Heart," a Selig industrial drama in three parts, will be presented. Both of these will prove to be of more than passing interest to those who regularly attend Proctor's Theatre.

For Saturday, Patrick O'Malley, the daredevil thrillmaker, will appear in "The King of the Wire." Current events are shown in picture form every day, and are proving to be of great interest.

PLAINFIELD PUBLIC LIBRARY TAKES PROMINENT RANK

That the Babcock Scientific Department of the Plainfield Public Library is taking rank with the important technical libraries of New York is shown by the recent publication of a "Catalogue of Technical Periodicals in the Libraries in the City of New York and Vicinity," published by the Library Board of the United Engineering Society of New York City.

The libraries included in the catalogue are Columbia University Library, The Chemists' Club Library, Library of the American Society of Civil Engineers, Library of the Engineering Societies, The New York Public Library, all in New York City; Library of Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, N. J., and the Plainfield Public Library.

This should be of no little interest to the people of Plainfield, and through the circulation of this catalogue the Babcock Scientific Library will, without doubt, have wider consultation than in the past.

You can't, even though a "For Sale" ad, sell that used article for its original cost, nor near it; but you can get its cash value at the present time for it.

OVER 435,000 RATS CAUGHT IN TRAPS

What New Orleans Has Done to Rid City of Disease-Carrying Rodents.

After a lapse of nearly a year a case of human plague occurred in the city of New Orleans on the 27th of August. This case was confirmed as true bubonic plague on September 8th. The epidemiological investigations as to the exact source of the infection have not yet been completed but it is believed that it was probably received in the city of New Orleans. Up to date over 91,000 buildings in that city have been ratproofed and over 435,000 rodents have been captured in traps alone. The occurrence of this case demonstrates the difficulties surrounding the eradication of the disease and indicate that had it not been for the active co-operative efforts of the United States Public Health Service and of the Departments of Health of the State of Louisiana and the city of New Orleans, the outbreak would have reached greater proportions and would have been longer continued.

It also points out to other cities the necessity for ridding themselves of the rodent carriers of the disease and of thoroughly rat-proofing all of their buildings. No fear is felt that this case will be followed by an outbreak. Officers and men of the public health service, well trained in the control of the disease, are on the ground and with the health authorities of the city of New Orleans are taking every precaution to prevent the spread of the disease from the city and within it.

At that meeting officers will be elected and other matters pertaining to permanent organization will be attended to.

The physical department will be open to them, there will be tournament games, and they will be invited to take a swim in the pool, but the star feature of the morning's program will be a moving picture depicting a day in a Y. M. C. A. camp. The picture will probably be put on the screen about 11 o'clock.

Y. M. C. A. WILL FEATURE SUNDAY AFTERNOON SERVICES

Sunday afternoon services for boys will be featured at the Y. M. C. A. this year. For awhile meetings once a month will be tried, but later it may be found advisable to hold them twice a month.

Boys' Work Secretary Lynn will be the speaker at the first meeting. Good lively hymns, which are favorites with boys, will be sung and it is likely that there will be music by an orchestra. All boys over twelve years of age, whether members of the association or not, will be invited to these Sunday afternoon services.

Mr. Close impersonates John Carlyle, an attorney, who has recently become profoundly convicted of a duty to battle against the corrupt influence of liquor in politics and having entered the race for State Senator, calls upon his friend Pierpont in his office to enlist his interest in and support of his candidacy.

MISS DELAND TELLS OF WORK AMONG ITALIANS

The first fall meeting of the Women's Missionary Societies, of the First Baptist church, was held at the church yesterday afternoon, and was largely attended by members and friends. Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, president of the organization, was in charge of the meeting. The department chairmen were present and outlined their work for the coming year. A feature of the meeting was the singing by members of the Judson Juniors.

The address of the afternoon was made by Miss Grace Leland, who is a missionary among the Italians of New York, and she told an impressive and pathetic story of her experience with these people, describing their earnestness and devotion to religious work after being converted. Her story was listened to with the greatest of interest.

After the meeting tea was served, the social part of the program being in charge of Mrs. Samuel P. Case, assisted by some of the young people who acted as waitresses. At the next meeting of the missionary societies in October it is expected that a missionary from Mexico will speak.

STARS OF OPERA WILL BE HEARD IN CONCERT

Metropolitan opera stars will sing and play for Plainfield people at a concert to be given November 8 under the auspices of the Musical Club of Plainfield. Mme. Rappold, of the Metropolitan Opera House; Hugh Allen, baritone; Mlle. Orrell, violoncellist, and Clarence Bird, pianist, have been engaged.

The Musical Club hopes that the people of Plainfield will appreciate this rare opportunity to hear these renowned artists and give their support to this enterprise which the Musical Club has undertaken for their entertainment. The program is now in preparation and further particulars will be given in the near future. The concert will be given at the Plainfield Theatre.

GRANTED A DIVORCE.

Through his counsel, V. W. Nash, Jr., Thomas Burton, colored, of West Third street, has been granted a decree nisi in divorce from his wife, Elizabeth Burton. He alleges desertion in the petition and has been given control of his two infant children, Thomas Sidney and William. The couple were married on November 3, 1877.

INJURED HIS FOOT.

George Smith, of Sumner avenue, while alighting from a train at the North Avenue station early this morning, sustained an injury to his foot. The man was removed to Muhlenberg Hospital, where his condition was reported as favorable for early recovery.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES.

Registration in swimming classes is being held in conjunction with the registration in the "gym" work. Miss Ruth I. Wean has charge of the girls and Ralph S. Patch, supervisor of the boys.

Football practice still continues. Each day one more "find" is discovered and, according to reports, P. H. S. is not going to have such a poor eleven after all.

The class in elective subjects registration is still being held.

Nominations for senior officers have been filed and the list posted. Herbert Peacock, president of the class of 1916 last year, when the class was a junior one, is expected to call a meeting for the purpose of electing officers in the near future. An almost equal proportion of girls and boys were nominated.

"The raid on the lunch counter" still continues. This phase of High School life seems to be the most popular with the pupils.

Nominations for senior class officers have closed. The election will possibly take place Thursday. Officers of the other three classes will be elected at the same time.

BIBLE SCHOOL RALLY.

The Bible school rally day services of the First Baptist church will be held Sunday morning at the church. Tomorrow night there will be a motion picture show given at the Y. M. C. A. auditorium under the auspices of the Bible class. Admission to the entertainment will be by ticket only.

How to Keep Our City Moving

We must keep moving. A city booms only so long as its manufacturers and merchants keep moving. The wheels of every line of endeavor must be kept turning if the city is going to develop, and what is of deeper concern than the wheels of Plainfield kept turning?

Should every one who has the interest of Plainfield close at heart buy goods from our merchants, the benefits all around can easily be seen. Thousands of dollars that would otherwise go out of the city will be kept circulating here and contribute a big share towards making a bigger and busier Plainfield.

A dollar spent at home will keep that dollar at home and all will share in the profits.

ASSEMBLYMAN RUNYON MAKES PRESENTATION

Commemorating the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization, members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen held a banquet in the Grand Union Hotel, Elizabeth, last night, the affair being largely attended and thoroughly enjoyed. Included in the gathering were men who had seen many years of service in various railroad capacities and legislators of past and present fame, many of whom delivered stirring orations during the evening.

One of the notable events was the awarding of four twenty-five year buttons, the presentation being made by Assemblyman William N. Runyon, of this city. With a few appropriate and well chosen remarks Assemblyman Runyon gave the emblems to Messrs. Durling, Dunn and Thompson, the three who were present, and a fourth was sent to Mr. Murphy, who was unable to attend.

EDUCATOR'S NOTEBOOK

New York—An industrial education convention of experts in every branch of industrial and vocational training throughout the United States and Canada will be opened here tomorrow and extend until October 2. To demonstrate shop work and manual training as taught in all grades from the kindergarten to the high school continuation trade schools, an exposition will be held at the Twelfth Regiment Armory. The exhibits are drawn from all parts of the country.

This conference, said to be one of the most extensive educational projects ever held, will be under the auspices of a joint committee, of which John Martin, of the local board of education, is chairman. Other members are Miss Martha Draper and Mrs. Christine Towns, of the board of education; Mrs. Clarence Burns, Miss Florence Guernsey, president of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, and others.

Exhibits from the public schools of Gary, Ind., Cincinnati, Cleveland, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and other cities will be shown. The chief value of the exhibit is expected to be in the education of the general public to an appreciation of the whole subject of proper industrial education.

Chicago—Never did the schools figure so prominently in politics in the Windy City as they do now. Mayor Thompson next month will name seven trustees to succeed those whose terms have expired. The union labor leaders who are backing the Chicago Teachers' Federation in the fight against the Loeb law, which is aimed at the annihilation of unionism among the school teachers, will exert pressure on the aldermen not to confirm any appointments that will weaken the case of the unionism of teachers. The teachers have been given three months in which to withdraw from the union. Meanwhile there is a running political battle, in which the school system trembles in the balance. Threats to call a strike of the school children have been made, and all of the slogans of labor wars have been turned loose in Chicago school matters. The teachers claim a conspiracy of "vested interests" is opposing their union organization, the school board claims the organization breeds suspicion and discontent, and conducts lobbying operations to control legislation affecting the schools.

Lawrence, Kas.—Indian students at Haskell Institute have completed a new gymnasium for the school by their own labor. They have demonstrated the practical use of their knowledge of manual arts and crafts learned in the regular term of school. The building provides adequate facilities for the training of 700 students enrolled from all states. The government makes an annual expenditure of over $240,000 for the maintenance of Haskell Institute.

JURIST AGAINST WOMAN SUFFRAGE

Chancellor W. J. Magie Discusses "Votes For Women."

NO BENEFIT TO STATE.

Declares Majority of Women Do Not Want the Vote—Also Asserts Mother's Place Is at Home, and Ballot Means Jury Duty and Other Tasks.

William J. Magie, former chancellor of New Jersey and recognized as one of the leading jurists of the country, is decidedly opposed to woman suffrage.

In a statement issued by the Men's Anti-suffrage League of New Jersey, of which he is an active member, the eminent jurist discusses votes for women. The attitude of Chancellor Magie on the much mooted question will have great weight with the voters of New Jersey by reason of the fact that he is conceded to be particularly well qualified to give an opinion on the subject, due to his long and distinguished career as a jurist.

Women Against Suffrage.

Here is what Chancellor Magie says:

"I am satisfied that a vast majority of the sensible women of the state do not desire to be burdened with the responsibilities of the franchise.

"If the majority of the women of the state really desire the franchise it would still be necessary, before acceding to their desire, to be satisfied that the possession of the franchise would be a benefit to the state and not an injury to the home and family, for it must not be forgotten that a grant of the franchise is practically incapable of being withdrawn even if it works injury.

"No one can deny that up to this date legislatures elected by male suffrage have been willing to accede to any legislation claimed to be a benefit to women. They have sometimes yielded to woman's demand and enacted legislation that in practice may be injurious rather than beneficial.

No Benefit to State.

"What are the reasonable probabilities of improving conditions by reason of women's voting? I have not been able to discover in the action of states where women vote any reasonable legislation that would not have been passed at the demand of women before the franchise was granted them. Whether the experiment in those states is a success or not is affirmed and denied with equal vehemence, and the period elapsed is too short to afford a fair proof of the result. For this reason I am not convinced that there is any benefit to the state by extending the franchise to the women.

"If I could perceive plain benefit to the government by admitting women to the franchise I think that I should still oppose it because I believe that it will be injurious to the race.

"Our civilization is based upon the family and the home—by that I mean a home provided for by a father and presided over by a mother—in which children are born and reared to be citizens of the state.

Mother's Place Is Home.

"I am not thinking of the homes of the people of vast wealth whose children are turned over too often to hirelings and miss a mother's care, nor of the homes of those, alas too many, oppressed by poverty where the mother's care is often thwarted by the stress of circumstances. My vision takes in the countless number of quiet homes on farms, around our factories, in the suburbs of large cities where fathers and mothers are raising children to be useful. To that task the father has but little time to devote. It must devolve upon the mother. To perform that duty properly she must maintain the family hearth as a place where her children can come for sympathy and encouragement and love. It is her influence which stamps the character of the child.

What Ballot Means.

"To grant to such a mother the franchise involves a duty on her part which will not be satisfied by merely casting the ballot. At first it is possible that men will silently acquiesce and permit the women of the kind I am thinking of to confine themselves to the duty of casting a ballot. But it is by the ballot that the state and municipal policies of government are ordained. Statutes and ordinances do not execute themselves. They must be enforced or they will be of no value. Their enforcement by means of courts and officers may for awhile leave women out of the account. But men will not submit to this for long. If they are to be compelled to enforce the policies settled by women's votes they will sooner or later (and very soon, I predict) insist that all the duties of a citizen must be performed by women as well as men; that they serve on juries, act as constables and policemen, be called out to serve on sheriff's posse—in short, to do all the duties of a citizen precisely as men are required to do.

"It is impossible to deny that when these duties are cast upon the mothers of the race they cannot be performed by her without interfering in the most serious manner with her duties to her family and the children she is raising and educating by her motherly devotion.

"For these reasons I shall cast my vote on Oct. 19 against the proposed amendment to the constitution.

"W. J. MAGIE."

NO CAUSE FOR ACTION IN CASE OF ACCIDENT VICTIM

In the District Court this morning Judge Walter L. Hetfield rendered a verdict of no cause for action in the case of Frank Schafer against James Long, to recover $200 damages as the result of a crash between the plaintiff's bicycle and defendant's motorcycle in Dunellen some time ago.

Vincent W. Nash, Jr., counsel for Long, explained to the satisfaction of the court the nature of the accident, laying special emphasis on the fact that both men were traveling at a slow rate of speed and were on the right side of the street, drawing the conclusion that the collision was unavoidable. The court ruled in this same way, despite the fact that Irving Kunzman, counsel for the plaintiff, during his summing up endeavored to show that Long could have prevented the mishap and that he was liable for the value of the bicycle and also for a pecuniary reimbursement of Schafer for results.

NOT TO BE OVERLOOKED.

While the vote on woman suffrage is the most vital question to come before voters of New Jersey at the special election of Tuesday, October 19, they should not overlook the fact that there are two more amendments to the State Constitution to be decided on that day.

The campaign being waged for suffrage by the good women of the State, and the indignation of some of our men at organized efforts to prevent them from having a voice in the government of New Jersey, has overshadowed the other two amendments. Both are changes which tend to improve the handling of the affairs of the people and one, at least, brings the government much closer to the people.

The latter is the amendment which changes the statutory requirements as to procedure in amending the constitution of New Jersey. In the past it has been provided that no amendment could be submitted to the people of the State, except a period of five years had been allowed to pass since the submission of the last amendment. This was clearly a mistake on the part of the framers of the constitution. What they really intended was to prevent the useless voting, year after year, on a single amendment.

If the need for a constitutional amendment should arise there is no cause for holding off a vote on it for five years because the voters pass on woman suffrage this year for instance. If suffrage is rejected it should not be brought up again in the State for five years and cannot be, no matter whether the second amendment is passed or not. This new part of the constitution which the people are asked to vote on simply permits a vote on any amendment, after it has been approved by a majority of two successive legislatures, provided that when any amendment has been submitted to the people and by them rejected, no similar amendment shall be submitted again within five years after such rejection. It will greatly facilitate reforms that may be badly needed in the future.

The third amendment gives to the State and to counties, cities, towns or other municipalities, the right to realize a part of the profits when they improve property for public purposes. It permits such corporations to condemn more land and property than is needed in the laying out, widening, extending or relocating parks, public places, highways, or streets, so that the additional lands may be used as building sites, abutting on such parks, public places, highways or streets. It means that if the city condemns certain property in your neighborhood for public purposes, and adds to the value of adjoining property by improving that condemned, it has the right to share in the added values by holding a part of the adjoining property.

Europe is not the only war zone. As a result of the political campaign which closed yesterday in Wilkes Barre, Pa., the Record and Times-Leader have been indulging in personalities that may call for the good efforts of a peace commission.

Here is a sample answer from the Times-Leader.

The Record says the anti-gang contest in the Republican party has scared the Times-Leader out of its wits. Bless your poor simple soul, if we had made it to order we could not have things breaking better for the Democrats. * * No, dear neighbor, we are not scared. The paper wads fired from the Record sanctum never frighten anyone. * * "Scared out of our wits." Why, you poor simps, we can scarcely refrain from imprinting a kiss of appreciation on the careworn brow of Grandmother. Go to it, Sweet One, but please do not forget that chickens come home to roost, and the only scared one will be The Record when the returns come in and it sees its pap and influence gone forever.

Boy! Page Mr. Bryan and Henry Ford. They're needed here.

A "wooden kimono" as a "night cap" is the shortest route back to the "straight and narrow," according to Mayor William Riddle, of Atlantic City. He has had samples of wood sent in from different coffin builders, that he may select the material from which his "kimono" is to be fashioned. "I am not joking about this," said the mayor. He exhibited the sample woods to prove it. "When a fellow gets out with the boys and kind of gets by his limit he should have something the next morning to remind him, aside from a headache. I'm going to have this coffin made and placed in my apartment. When I get home after 1 o'clock in the morning from some banquet it will be my sleeping place." The mayor of Atlantic City continually lives up to his name, and as an exchange says, he is a perpetual Riddle, for he manages to keep his constituents guessing most of the time.

Warning—If you cannot resist the temptation to bust straw lids, use a cane. A man who is still hanging on to his summer Kelly at this late day is hard-headed enough to injure the naked hand.

The Saddest Sight

When we wore out shoes reporting,
We observed some grisly things—
Oft with Death were we consorting,
As he came on sable wings.
We have seen some brides so ugly
That it broke our heart to say
They were "lovely"—yet quite snugly
Were our scruples tucked away.

We have witnessed things revolting,
Day and night, along life's trail,
Things heart-wrenching, spirit-jolting,
Things that made us dumbly quail.
We have raked the wicked city
Seeking things that might appal,
But The-Man-Who-Thinks-He's-Pretty
Is the saddest sight of all!

All we heard, as the train stood stewing at a little station that smelled of dog-fennel, while the local ticket-agent-telegraph-operator-express-agent-freight-hustler-baggage-master attended to all the work—all we heard, we say, was this:

"My, I never saw anyone eat as much as she's been eating since she got over the typhoid fever! And she seems to be all going to face!"

"No, some of her's going to bust!"

A Born Diplomat

The colored man given to agitating race matters entered the office of the man who had advertised for "three white musicians."

"Do you mean to say that black people have no equal chance to earn their living, no matter how competent they may be?" he asked, with an argument in his eye.

"No, indeed," soothed the man; "I simply mean that I don't want any green hands."

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

Subsidized Motherhood

ONE reason why we are unanimously in favor of full and unlimited woman suffrage is that we want to see motherhood subsidized by the government.

When a woman becomes a mother she is making a priceless gift to the state. As an expression of its appreciation the state should present the mother an honorarium. This would be our idea of subsidized motherhood. It would be a good investment of state funds, the very best investment the state could possibly make.

Thousands of mothers suffer prolonged invalidism, loss of efficiency and even death, because they do not receive proper care at the time of childbirth and in the following weeks. Far too often this is attributable to the poverty of the family. Indeed, comparatively few families can afford the best kind of medical attention and nursing for such cases. It is the duty of the state, purely from a selfish interest, to supply such care or the means of obtaining it.

If there is one thing that fills a doctor's heart with hatred of his race it is the sight of a woman suffering for want of adequate care at this vital moment of her life. Graft, extravagance, luxury, capitalistic exploitation of the workingman, the working-woman and the working-child on the one hand; misery, pain, disease, death, on the other hand. And then these moneyed hypocrites talk of "uplifting" and "improving" humanity and organize charity under businesslike methods for improving the condition of the poor. If the poor victims come to them and say, 'Give us a fair wage," the philanthropists call out the militia and shoot them up.

In Germany, where old age is already pensioned, motherhood is also assisted by the state. American mothers and children are worth as much to the state as any others. Our laws should be so fixed that the filing of a birth certificate by the physician would entitle the mother to a definite weekly contribution from the government, sufficient to assure her the best obtainable care and attention for the six weeks every mother should be prepared to devote to her baby. It is a sad fact that many an expectant mother looks forward with misgiving to the arrival of the baby, simply because of the financial outlay she fears the family can ill afford. Here is a debt the state owes and should be glad to pay motherhood.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Now We Are Shouting

I gather, confides a clergyman, that you do not recommend the use of alcoholic beverages, even medicinally. Is that from principle or from training? That is, are you expressing your personal views or the views of the medical profession in general?

Answer—We are stating the consensus of medical opinion. In these talks we endeavor to speak with due regard to scientific facts, and not merely give our personal opinions. When our opinion is given we invariably specify that it is our opinion. In this instance, however, the verdict is unanimous.

Infantile Paralysis

Please tell me what is considered the most effective treatment for the weakness of muscles following infantile paralysis.

Answer—Massage applied intelligently—not just rubbing. The art must be learned by taking lessons from an expert. Galvanic electricity and "muscle training" are important adjuncts.

THE AUTOMOBILE FIRE ENGINE

THE automobile fire engine is the result of a successful effort to make something useful out of the joy rider.

It is the only machine which can roar through a city street faster than twenty miles an hour without causing the fool killer to get ready for an emergency call.

Automobile fire engines weigh four tons and sound like a runaway house with a machine-gun annex. They are not as beautiful as a team of leaping fire horses, but they do not get out of wind on a hill. An automobile fire engine can cover twenty miles and attend four fires while three horses are getting their respiration adjusted after hauling an engine forty blocks.

Because of this fact, the fire department horse is following sadly in the wake of the buffalo, the cottage organ, the plug hat and the good old double-fisted political caucus.

Having a fire nowadays is a positive luxury compared with thirty years ago. In the last century when a householder dropped a match in a wastepaper basket and subsequently discovered that his residence was getting red hot he had to run thirty blocks to the engine house, and help pull on the bell rope.

Then he had to tack onto a long rope with the brave fire laddies, pull a hose cart back, borrow four cisterns and help pass water in buckets all evening in order to get the ruins cool enough to begin digging in the cellar for his wife's gold breast pin.

How different it is to-day! The proprietor of a conflagration steps to the telephone and calls up the department in two minutes and three cuss words. He then hurries down to the corner drug store in order to get cigars for the company and returns just as the head chauffeur is cranking up to go on to the next fire.

To get the ruins cool enough to begin digging in the cellar for his wife's gold breast pin

And yet fire losses seem to be increasing instead of decreasing. This is because having a fire is getting to be too comfortable. The automobile fire engine should be equipped with a taxicab dial and the householder should be charged $1 a mile for all runs. This would make the average citizen as afraid of a fire as he is of a taxicab and the insurance companies would produce unlimited millionaires.

Views Of The Press

Who Is To Blame?

PRESS WRITERS the nation through are deploring the slipshod speech of the young men and women of the present day and generation. Some of the writers on the subject blame the schools, others the home surroundings, but none apparently have reached a solution of the problem of how to remedy it and cure the ever-increasing evil. That the use of slang, the incorrect tenses of verbs, the attempt to use big words that are meaningless when combined with simple sentences is increasing is most certain.

It is a deplorable situation. It is something that when the average business man stops and considers, actually exists. How many business men have stenographers that can spell and punctuate properly? Are we teaching our young people too much of the "fine arts" and neglecting the old-fashioned three "R's"? The Cincinnati Times-Star is aghast at the situation and the atrocious English of young folks who have every opportunity to acquire the habit of using correct language. It illuminates its views by the following experience, which might be true of almost any community:

"Four young girls and four young boys, all of them neatly dressed and presumably in the high schools, were riding down-town on a street car. One of the girls, visibly intelligent, observed to a companion, 'I ain't seen George since Monday. I guess he's went away.' To which the girl with the pink waist replied, 'Oh, he's workin' and ain't got no time to his-self.' One of the boys chimed in with, 'I seen him on the street yisterday.' To judge by their ages, each of these young people must have had not less than eight or ten years' schooling. They probably had received elementary, intermediate and a year or two of high school training in proper speech. They had been more or less intimately associated with people who speak correctly. There was no good reason why they should not adapt their own speech to the same form. But for a distance of a mile or more they emitted one horrible error after another, careless, indifferent and unashamed."

Listening to the talk of school teachers one often is astonished at their employment of slang and their frequent inattention to grammar. As for colleges, they are hot-beds of linguistic improprieties. If there is not in the temples of learning respect for good English and a degree of taste sufficient to condemn blundering mispronunciations and gross violations of grammatical rules and a continual preference for slang to simple straightforward speech—even when the slang borders upon the vulgar—how can it be expected that correct conversational standards will prevail? There has been of late a disposition to predict that a time will come when there will be two English languages—one of books and the other of daily speech. This is not convincing, as many writers of books of the day are slip-shod in their language, and the number of people who buy and read books seems to be rapidly decreasing.—The Janesville Gazette.

The Second Husband's Rights

Q. Montana widow, owing farm, wills all to a little son, and a few years later marries a Michigan man, in Minnesota. Should she die, what claim has the husband on the property? He has never been in Montana, nor handled any of her business, and if he had, would it change the situation in any way, or would the will stand good as made before her second marriage?

A. It would be advisable to re-execute your will. The Montana law provides: "A married woman may make a will in the same manner and with the same effect as if she were sole, except that such will shall not, without the written consent of her husband, operate to deprive him of more than two-thirds of her real estate or more than two-thirds of her personal estate."

An Illegal Partnership

Q. Is a partnership valid when formed for a purpose not sanctioned by the law? A. No.

Testamentary Disposition Of Property

Q. Can a man in South Dakota will his whole property to whom he pleases, without the consent of his wife?

A. A man may will his property as he pleases, subject only to such restrictions and limitations as are imposed by law. Ordinarily, a man cannot deprive his wife of dower, but in the State of South Dakota, both dower and courtesy have been abolished. The statutes of South Dakota provide: "A testamentary disposition (that is, a disposition of property by will) may be made to any person capable by law of taking the property so disposed of, except that no corporation can take under a will, unless expressly authorized by its charter or by statute so to take." The statutes provide, further: "Subject to the rights of the surviving husband or wife, as declared by law, the homestead may be devised like other real property of the testator."

With Reasonable Restrictions

Q. May one lawfully enter into a bond not to carry on a certain business within a designated territory?

A. Yes, if the restrictions as to time and place are what the law regards as reasonable.

Agent Must Get Permit

Q. Is it necessary for a salesman or agent to have state permission to sell stock of a corporation incorporated in South Dakota?

A. Yes. You must make application in proper form to the State Securities Commission.

Hunters

Expectancy rules the world. If it were not for what a Man expected to receive for his Thinking, his Working, and his Sacrificing, how little would be the impetus for results.

To the sportsman, Hunting would be void of all its charms were it not for the fact that he expected to "bag" Game.

The Human Throng is a Hunting Throng. You are a Hunter. I am a Hunter.

The important Thing, however, as well as the thrilling Thing, is—What Are You Hunting? Are you Hunting for mere money that is liable to melt away in a day or disappear in a flash as though you never had it? Are you Hunting for a lot of empty honors, perhaps selfish and maybe pompous? Are you Hunting for trouble? Or, are you hunting for the Big Things that make for fine Character and wide Happiness and extensive Smiles—the things that endure even after your age has naturally wended its way as a part of the past?

It's great to be a Hunter and expect that you are going to be a mighty one. But it is highly important that the game you gather be not dead game, but game of Service to those who weren't with you when you hunted, both for now and time yet to be.

The Epicure

I've sipped a rich man's sparkling wine,
His silverware I've handled,
I've placed these battered legs of mine
'Neath tables gayly candled.
I dine on rare and costly fare
Whene'er good fortune lets me,
But there's no meal that can compare
With those the missus gets me.

I've had your steaks three inches thick
With all your Sam Ward trimming,
I've had the breast of milk-fed chick
In luscious gravy swimming.
To dine in swell café or club
But irritates and frets me.
Give me the plain and wholesome grub—
The grub the missus gets me.

Two kiddies smiling at the board,
The cook right at the table,
The four of us, a hungry horde,
To beat that none is able.
A big meat pie, with flaky crust!
'Tis then that joy besets me;
Oh, I could eat, until I "bust,"
Those meals the missus gets me.

Bibbley Wah Crept Noiselessly Up to the Sparrow.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—— Bibbley Wah Catches Birds With A Pinch of Salt.

"IS it Bibbley Wah night?" the kiddies wanted to know.

Daddy smiled. "Bibbley Wah's uncle, who owned the wonderful farm, was a joker. He thought it the greatest fun to play pranks on his niece. So one day he said, 'Bibbley Wah, you can catch a young robin if you'll only put a pinch of salt on his tail.'

"Now, Bibbley Wah was rather a trusting child, and, loving her uncle very much, she believed what he told her. So she ran into the kitchen, filled her apron pocket with salt and set off across the lawn.

"Her uncle sat down on the porch to watch her, for she was very good to look at when she played and ran. But of course whenever she got very near a robin he would hop, hop away across the grass, and when Bibbley Wah followed him and came too close he would chirp, spread his pretty wings and fly up into a tree. Here he would sit on a twig and cock his head at Bibbley Wah as much as to say, 'You can't catch me; you can't catch me.'

"'He won't stand still till I put the salt on his tail!' cried Bibbley Wah.

"'Never mind; try that sparrow,' her uncle encouraged her.

"So poor Bibbley Wah took another pinch of salt from her little apron pocket, and, oh, so still this time, crept noiselessly up to the sparrow, who was greedily swallowing a fat worm. He was so near that Bibbley Wah almost had her small hand on him. 'Cheep!' he called, flying off.

"So she went back to the kitchen and got a bread crust from the cook, hoping he would stay still while he ate it. Then she crept up back of him, her little hand outstretched, when flash! away he would go into the snowball bush.

"But Bibbley Wah was not easily discouraged. Sparrow after sparrow she would go up to, calling 'Birdie, birdie!' in her sweet voice, holding out her salt invitingly, and soon she got so interested she ran—ran over a flower bed, into a stump and across a nail that tore a hole in her little apron. Once a croquet arch nearly nipped her, but she did not cry.

"When she was all hot and tired and disappointed she almost ran into Bobbie, who was coming around a corner of the house.

"'Why the salt?' he asked, watching it fall. And she told him why.

"'If you could get near enough to put salt on his tail you could pick him up' cried the wise Bobbie.

"Was her uncle unkind?" asked Evelyn.

"No. He gave Bibbley Wah 5 cents for being such a good runner, and she bought peppermint sticks for the boys," said daddy.

Household Hints

TEA-WAGON NURSERY TABLE

We converted a wicker tea-wagon into a nursery table most successfully.

The lower shelf held fresh supplies of clothing, the side shelves, being easily washed, held bottles of vaseline, oil and the like, and the trimmed basket stood on top. This was removed at night, when the glass tray top held thermos bottle, watch and matches for mother's use, and everything needed for the babe.

The table was wheeled close for bed time or bath time and pushed aside when not in use.

CAKES

Cocoanut Loaf Cake—Two eggs beaten separately, one cup sugar, half cup butter, one rounding teaspoon baking powder, one cup grated cocoanut, pinch of salt, half cup sweet milk, flour enough to make as stiff a batter as for any other cake.

Spice Chocolate Cake—Two cups sugar, half cup butter, one cup milk, one teaspoon baking powder, half cake chocolate or one cup cocoa dissolved in half cup strong coffee; add three eggs, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon cloves, pinch of salt. Frosting: Beat the whites of two eggs to a frost; boil two cups sugar into a syrup, beat into the whites and spread over top of cake.

Devil's Food Cake—Two cups brown sugar, scant three-fourths cup butter and lard, two eggs; beat well together, then add three tablespoons cocoa, one teaspoon vanilla; beat all together, add one cup sweet or sour milk with one level teaspoon soda dissolved in the milk, then add two and one-half cups flour and beat till nice and light. This makes two nice layers. Fudge Filling: Two cups brown sugar, one cup water, boil till it threads, then take off stove and add butter size of a hickorynut, one teaspoon vanilla, three tablespoons cream or milk and beat till it can be spread nicely.

Apple Sauce Cake—Two and one-half cups hot apple sauce, two cups brown sugar (or one cup granulated), one cup lard and butter mixed, one teaspoon cloves, one teaspoon cinnamon, one teaspoon allspice, one teaspoon nutmeg, two teaspoons soda dissolved in a little water, four cups sifted flour. Bake in slow oven. A cup of raisins can be added.

Loaf Cake—One cup brown sugar, one cup sour milk, one small cup raisins, piece of butter size of an egg, one teaspoon soda, one-fourth teaspoon salt, a little nutmeg or any spice to suit taste, enough flour to make a thick batter. Bake in moderate oven. Try with a broom straw or knitting needle; if the batter sticks it needs longer baking. This cake is improved by being kept in a stone jar for a week.

Orange Cake—One-fourth cup butter, one cup sugar, two eggs, half cup sweet milk, one and two-thirds cups flour, one and one-half teaspoons baking powder, grated rind of one orange. Bake in layers. Use juice of an orange mixed with powdered sugar for frosting.

Jam Cake (makes two cakes)—Two cups sugar, two cups jam (blackberry is fine), three cups flour, one teaspoon cinnamon, five eggs, one teaspoon baking powder, one teaspoon vanilla, one teaspoon soda, one nutmeg, one cup butter, one cup sour milk.

Marble Cake—White part: One cup sugar, half cup butter, half cup milk, whites of three eggs, one and one-half teaspoons baking powder, two cups flour. Dark part: One cup sugar, one-fourth cup butter, one-fourth cup milk, one teaspoon cinnamon, half teaspoon allspice, half teaspoon cloves, one and one-half teaspoons baking powder, one cup flour, yolks of three eggs.

This makes two loaves. Bake in slow oven about one hour. Will keep a long time.

AND THE WORST IS YET TO COME--

If "To Let" advertisements did not, in the great majority of cases, bring results, there would be no such advertisements printed. They would become obsolete.

CHAPTER IX.

Sowing the Wind.

ONE day, sure enough, not long afterward, Miss Burke tripped into Rodney's office and handed him something which had not yet become common in the company's routine—namely, a letter with a foreign stamp and postmark. The three partners were standing about as usual when this dramatic little incident occurred. Mary was willing to bet it was another bill, and Peale asked what odds she was giving—would they be as high as 100 to 1? Rodney in the meantime, who had opened the epistle and been reading it, shouted out:

"Hurrah, hurrah! It's from the countess!"

They had pinned their hopes to the countess' Parisian skirts, and here she was coming back again in the nick of time. Luck was with them.

"What does she say?" asked Mary, much excited, while Peale grabbed the letter and exclaimed in disgust, when he had glanced at it. "Oh, French stuff."

"She says she was delayed abroad, but that she's due on the Northumberland this morning and that she's coming to see us at 11."

"It's half past 11 now," Mary sighed. "Oh, dear. She's late."

"Fear not," said Peale. "Remember, though a countess, she is still a woman. Give her time."

"Does she say anything about the $15,000?" asked Mary, to which Rodney was obliged to answer, "No."

Peale, however, had a hunch everything was going to be all right. Unluckily Miss Burke punctured it by entering and saying Mr. Jones, the ad. man, was here to see him and seemed very angry.

"My hunch is wrong," said Peale. "Here's where we take an aeroplane and dig a hole right through the ceiling."

"Keep a stiff upper lip," Rodney counseled.

"Oh, sure, I'm full of starch," Peale retorted.

"Good luck, Rodney," said Mary.

"Don't worry—I've got a way to square him," Rodney answered.

They looked forward to the countess and her $10,000, and instead here was Jones again with his advertising bill. Such were the ways of business life. A colorless, unpropossessing person enough was Jones, but in truth the soap trio would have been poor judges of any man's personal magnetism who came on Jones' errand. To them he was just the man with the advertising bill.

He entered quite boldly, allowing he'd come right in and not wait to be

"Oh, dear!" she said. "You've only got us into more difficulty."

told they were all out. He was an experienced bill collector.

There was nothing to do but receive him bravely.

"Why, hello, Mr. Jones," said Rodney genially, pretending to be quite glad and surprised to see him.

"How are you, Jack?" began Peale. He even tried to shake Jones' hand, but was thrown off roughly.

"You may be in the soap business, but cut out the soft soap with me," was his unsympathetic comment. "Where's my money? Have you got it?"

"Why—er—the fact is"— Rodney began.

"That means you haven't."

"Well, you see"—

"Bury the stall, bury it," said Jones brutally. "Do you think you can put me off? You can bet your blooming liabilities you can't. I'm going after you good. I think this whole concern is bunk, and I'm on my way to the sheriff now."

Rodney grew provoked.

"I don't care for that kind of loud talk. Drop it," he said sternly.

"Drop it," repeated Peale.

"What?" exclaimed Jones in surprise.

"He said drop it," repeated Peale.

Rodney stumbled on:

"It's simply that I haven't had time to examine your bill in detail. This afternoon, however, I"—

"Old stuff, old stuff," Jones scoffed.

But something gave Rodney a new resolve.

"Meanwhile," he went on, "I'll give you a check for $2,500 on account," he said. "I presume that will be satisfactory, won't it?"

"Why—yes—sure—but"— Jones stammered, taken aback, and Rodney turned to Peale and added:

"You understand, Mr. Peale, that not a cent of that $50,000 we appropriated for our October advertising campaign is to go to him?"

"Absolutely," said Peale. This was a great word with Ambrose, pronounced always with a strong accent on the "loot."

Jones was impressed.

"Now, Mr. Martin, I'll admit I'm hasty tempered. I'm sorry I made a mistake, but a contract is a contract, and"— he began.

"Here's your check. Good day," said Rodney.

"But, Mr. Martin"—

"Show Mr. Jones out," Rodney went on to Peale, who obeyed with glee.

"Come on, Jack. This way to the elevator," he said.

Poor Mary had observed this scene with renewed dismay.

"Oh, dear!" she said. "You've only got us into more difficulty. You know there's no money in the bank."

"But the check won't go through the clearing house until tomorrow morning, and by then we'll have the $10,000 from the countess," protested Rodney.

Peale looked at his watch and wondered where the countess was.

"I'll bet she sank in midocean," he predicted dolefully. Wasn't that just the way with money when you wanted it? So things always went, it seemed, when they needed cash. They had looked forward so eagerly and so long to that 50,000 francs, and instead they had entertained a dun, a very vulgar and demonstrative dun at that.

Rodney could not pretend he liked such scenes and said so with some vigor. Even Peale looked a little sympathetic and forgot to spout his advertising gospel.

It was adding injury to misfortune when a card was presently handed to the president of the 13 Soap company bearing the name of Ellery Clark. How Rodney hated that fellow! He must admit that Ellery had never done anything to him, but he could not bear him, just the same. He said as much to Peale, whose curiosity seemed to be aroused:

"Let's have a peek at him," he said.

"Take a good look at him," said Rodney as Miss Burke went after Ellery, "and see what father wanted me to be like. Ellery went into business—so must I. Ellery loved work—so must I."

"But it was only his pride in you," said Mary. "Your father didn't want old John Clark constantly rubbing it in about Ellery's success."

"I didn't want it rubbed into me either," said Rodney.

"Well, this is our chance to impress Ellery," said Peale. "Who knows too? He may have some money."

"Meanwhile I'll go call up the steamship office again," said Mary. "Oh, Rodney," she called back, "find out how Ellery's doing in business, will you?"

Rodney watched her as she disappeared and was brought to presently by Peale.

"You're spoiling that girl—she used to be a good business woman. Now half the time instead of using her brains she sits and looks at you as if you were some marvelous antique work of art."

Rodney laughed and, as a matter of fact, liked this teasing. Above all, it was delicious to his heart to hear Peale say that Mary was in love with him. He did think Mary was beginning to show a little more love for him lately despite their troubles, and Peale's testimony made him glad. He looked up quite good naturedly, only forcing a frown on his face as Ellery Clark came in. Ellery bored him awfully at most times.

The truth is John Clark's Ellery was a real pinhead and always would be, overdressed in the latest style, affected, aping the English when he remembered to do so, but oftener than not forgetting.

"Hello, Rodney. Mind if I come in?" he called out cheerfully.

"I'm very busy today, Mr. Clark," said Rodney coolly.

"Oh, I suppose you are," Ellery agreed. "Must take a lot of time to get up your advertisements."

Peale pricked up his ears at this.

"You like 'em? I write 'em. My name's Peale," he rattled off, coming over to Ellery, who, however, looked right through him as if he were empty air. That sort of treatment was lost on Ambrose, who only walked back to his chair, comically rebuffed, and settled down to the role of listener.

"What is it, Mr. Clark?" Rodney went on.

"You see, it's like this, old top," said Ellery. "I've been having rather a time with father lately. Silly old man. Of course with a dad like yours, who's perfectly satisfied with you, you can't understand that."

"No, of course not," said Rodney dryly.

"You see, my old man's out of date," Ellery went on, encouraged. "Insisted on the absurd idea of my going into business—beastly bore."

"But you wanted to, didn't you?" asked Rodney.

"I should say not."

"But I thought you loved work."

"Work? It's preposterous except for the lower classes. Men of intelligence go in for the professions. I paint."

"You look it," said Peale in a half aside.

"I'd heard you were a model son," said Rodney.

At this Ellery opened his eyes and stared.

"Why, that's just what father says about you," he exclaimed. "He says you're a great executive."

"Well, I must admit that business life is very congenial to me," said Rodney, mussing up some papers on his desk and employing his rubber stamp vigorously.

"Oh, I don't consider it a compliment to be a success in business! Think of all the blighters who are," declared Ellery.

"Yes, the bally rotters," Peale interjected, unable to keep still. He had been observing Ellery all this time as if fascinated by this new specimen. Unconsciously he began to mimic him. If Ellery crossed his legs he crossed his. He even took his handkerchief and stuffed it in his cuffs like Ellery.

"Father keeps reminding me of your success every day," said Ellery plaintively. "Most irritating. Of course he's sore because I haven't bothered much about business. Oh, I've tackled a thing or two, but luck was against me—just didn't happen to work out. Not my fault, you understand."

"I should say not. You couldn't be to blame," came from Peale, who must talk.

"Of course if I'd really devoted myself to business," Ellery went on, "but when you know you can do a thing if you want to why bother to do it if it bores you?"

"Good idea that," echoed Peale.

Ellery proceeded to explain that his father had been particularly offensive lately, so that he had decided to give a little time to business and make a success of it. He could, you know. It was really all figured out. Oh, quite. He had things all figured out. For the scheme he had in mind he had got to raise $7,500, and he wanted to talk about it. Peale and Rodney exchanged looks.

"I'm very sorry, Ellery," Rodney answered, "but money's tight just now."

"But not with you," said Ellery. "The way you're working you must be pretty rich. Heaven knows you ought to be—manufacturing soap."

"But all my capital is invested already," explained Rodney. "I can't undertake any outside ventures. Can I, Peale?"

"Not with my consent," Peale agreed. "You ought to see our assets and liabilities."

But Ellery went right on:

"This idea of mine is an automobile proposition. I really need $10,000, and I've only got $2,500."

At the mention of this latter sum Rodney and Peale walked over to Ellery at once and stood one on each side of him like a state coat-of-arms. Money! They took a good look at him.

"Ellery, why do you want to go into the automobile business?" began Rodney genially. "It's dangerous—unsafe"—

"The risk's tremendous," Peale corroborated.

"Ellery, our families are old friends," said Rodney. "Now, if you really want to show your father you're a money maker why don't you buy some shares in our company?"

"I don't care much about the idea of being in the soap business," Ellery protested; "rather vulgar."

"But you don't have to be in the business," said Rodney eagerly.

"Absolutely not," said Peale.

"It's a very simple proposition," Rodney began again. "All you do is invest and then sit still and deposit your checks when we pay dividends."

At the word dividend Ellery gave a pleased smile.

"I say, that sounds a bit better," Ellery agreed.

"We're going to offer the general public in," Rodney explained. "But it would be such a joke on your father for you to make money."

"Yes, wouldn't it?" said Ellery, with a vacuous laugh.

"I fancy he'd be mighty glad I had sense enough to go in with you," added Ellery. "But is it a safe investment?"

"Why, we'd guarantee you against loss, wouldn't we, Peale?" said Rodney.

"Absolutely," said Peale, with a strong accent on the "loot."

Glimpses of Married Life

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Sorry we couldn't pull off our stunt for your entertainment before we went," said Scott amiably as he climbed into the automobile that was to take them to the train, "but we have forsworn ourselves; that stunt is coming; we'll not forget it. Goodby!"

"Goodby! We will not forget our pleasant outing," called the group on the camping ground.

After watching the machine wind through the trees around the bend in the road, the women turned to clear the table and make preparations for breaking camp the following morning.

"I'll venture to say that's the last we'll ever hear of that stunt," said Nell. "They are not eager to do anything undignified."

"I'll wager they'll redeem their word all right in the end," chimed in Dick, "but I'm a little disappointed in him for letting this go over to another season, I'll confess."

All the packing that could be done over night was finished, supper was out of the way, and the party was sitting around the dying campfire when they dimly saw two figures stealing out of the gloom. The newcomers wore ragged clothes. The woman had a shawl tied low over her head, shading her eyes; the man slouched behind her carrying a basket.

"Kind lady, could you give me some food? We are hungry; we have traveled all day and my baby is sick," said the woman in a nasal whine.

"What are you doing on the road with a sick baby?" The doctor's voice was stern.

"My husband is out of work and we are trying to get to my sister's," continued the woman.

Olive and Mrs. Parsons were busy collecting food for the basket while Nell questioned the forlorn looking object in the shadowy circle beyond the fire light.

"Give me the basket," said Olive in a business-like manner, going up to the man. He sidled away from her as she reached out her hand. His frame shook and he put his hand to his face.

The woman turned quickly, heaving a choking sound:

"Don't give way, John." She patted his rough sleeve. "Things will be better when we get to my sister's." He passed the back of his hand over his eyes and looked away.

"He's so broke up over the baby," explained the woman, dropping an elaborate courtesy in thanks for the food.

"Where is the baby?" asked the doctor, rising, as they turned away with profuse thanks.

"Here in our wagon." The man pointed through the dusk.

"I'll go with you. I may be able to do something for the child as I am a doctor," and he walked away with them through the trees.

"Was the child very sick?" asked Olive when he joined the group half an hour later.

"I couldn't see that there was much the matter with her. It was a trumped-up story to excite sympathy, as I expected," he said, dismissing the subject.

"Well, the food we gave them will not have to be carted back to town, and if we short-suited our breakfast we can have an early dinner all around," laughed Jo.

"Let's get to bed; we must wake early to get this on the wagon before we go," suggested the doctor.

Just as the party was sitting down to a hasty breakfast the next morning, the flap of the Scotts' tent raised, and out walked Mr. and Mrs. Scott and calmly seated themselves amid a shower of questions and exclamations.

"We missed our train," said Mr. Scott gaily, "and thought we'd look in on camp again."

"You won't get much breakfast," laughed Dick. "We gave most of our remaining provisions to a couple of tramps last night."

"I feared you would be short, and as I'd no notion of going hungry, I brought my breakfast with me." Scott went to the tent and reappeared with the identical basket the good-hearted crowd had filled the night before. While they looked in bewilderment from one to the other, the doctor slapped Scott on the back, saying:

"You see, I did not give you away. I told them your story was a trumped up tale, but they never caught on."

"I thought Fred had given the whole thing away, he got to laughing so, but I saved the day," laughed Mrs. Scott.

"You certainly deserve the prize for the best stunt," applauded Dick, while the women joined in the general approval.

ENACT 240 NEW STATE GAME LAWS

Much Local Legislation Approved to Protect Birds and Big Game.

THE CLOSED SEASONS

Nine States Adopt Measures Agreeing With Federal Migratory Bird Law—Many Changes Are Made in New Jersey Laws.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—More than 240 new game laws were enacted during 1915—a larger number than in any previous year except 1911. The largest number of new game laws passed in any one State was 61, in North Carolina; but in California, Connecticut, Maine, New Jersey, Oregon, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin the number reached 10 or more. A number of bills were introduced for the purpose of harmonizing the State laws on migratory birds with the Federal regulations. In at least nine States changes were made which brought the seasons into substantial agreement, viz, California, Connecticut, Maine, Michigan, New Hampshire, Tennessee and West Virginia, in Illinois the seasons for all migratory birds except coot and waterfowl, and in Washington for the smaller shore birds, were made to conform with the regulations under the Federal law. Uniformity was also secured by provisions in the laws of Connecticut, Maine, New Mexico, North Dakota, Washington and Wisconsin, prohibiting hunting between sunset and sunrise. On the other hand, Delaware adopted a resoluton opposing the migratory-bird law, and Ohio and Rhode Island, which had harmonized their seasons in 1914, changed the reasons on waterfowl this year.

As a result of the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States on January 19, 1914, sustaining the alien hunting law of Pennsylvania, legislation prohibiting aliens from hunting or owning shotguns or rifles was enacted in at least four States—Massachusetts, New Jersey, North Dakota, and West Virginia—but certain exceptions based on property qualifications were made in Massachusetts and New Jersey.

Hunting mountain sheep was suspended in Idaho, Montana and Washington, and goats were protected until 1918 in Montana. Moose were protected for four years in Maine, the first absolute closed season on this species for 35 years. Antelope were given indefinite protection in New Mexico and Montana. In Michigan, New Mexico and Oklahoma prairie chickens were protected for several years. Michigan extended complete protection also to quail, imported pheasants, grouse and wood ducks for five years. Minnesota protected doves, woodcock, plover and wood ducks until 1918. New Mexico gave protection to pheasants, bobwhites, pigeons and swans. Oklahoma protected doves, grouse, wood ducks and curlew. Oklahomo gave such protection to pelicans, gulls and herons. Tennessee declared ringneck pheasants, bullbats, robins and meadowlarks to be non-game birds. In a few cases protection was removed from certain species—notably the turkey buzzard in Delaware, Florida and North Carolina; owls and starlings in New Hampshire, and cormorants in Illinois and North Dakota.

For the first time in twelve years moose hunting is permitted in Wyoming, and for the first time since 1907 prairie-chicken shooting is permitted in Indiana.

Thirty-nine States still provide quail shooting. All but 14 of the States which permit quail hunting now have a limit of 20 birds or less per day.

Open seasons were lengthened in Montana on elk and deer two weeks; in Florida on deer and birds three weeks; in Minnesota on quail 20 days; and in Nevada on sage hens four and a half months, on grouse one month, and on quail two weeks. New Jersey reverted to the former plan of hunting deer on four consecutive Wednesdays instead of consecutive days.

The more important changes affecting big game included the closing of the season for four years on moose in Maine; authorization for the killing of 50 bull moose in Wyoming; lengthening the season on elk in Montana two weeks; closing the season on mountain sheep in Montana; changes affecting does in seven States, including the removal of protecton in Florida, Nevada, New Jersey and Wyoming; establishment of a limit in Arkansas; and decrease in the limits in Alaska, Michigan, Montana and Nevada.

Under present conditions deer hunting is permitted in thirty-six States, in about one-third of which the hunter is limited to one deer a season and in most of the others to two. Eighteen States protect does at all seasons and allow only bucks to be killed—namely, Alabama, Arizona, California, Georgia, Idaho, Missouri, Mississippi, New Mexico, Nevada, New York, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Texas, Utah, Vermont, West Virginia and Wisconsin. Pennsylvania requires that deer killed shall have horns two inches above the hair, New York and Vermont at least three inches long, and West Virginia four inches long, while California prohibits entirely the killing of spike bucks.

COUNTY ATHLETES ON RUTGERS TEAM

Bound Brook Boys Also Selected for First Game Saturday Afternoon.

Siler and Bracher, two Union county boys at Rutgers and veterans on the football team, will probably start the first game of the season against Albright in New Brunswick on Saturday afternoon. Both men have been showing up well in practice and will have little difficulty in making the varsity. Rockefeller and Mason, of Bound Brook, will also be in the game.

Bracher especially has been in wonderful form this season. The midget Rahwayian has been piercing the scrub lines for big gains, and is expected to repeat his record of last year, when he gained more ground than any other man on the team. Seiler is being given a hard fight for his old position at end by Ray Austin, the former Rahway High School player, who has been the choice of Coach Sanford in most of the practice scrimmages.

The Rutgers team expects to have little difficulty with Albright as the players are mostly in mid-season form after a long period of training.

The probable lineup on Saturday is, Bracher, Wittpenn, Garrett and Scarr in the backfield, and Rockefeller, Mason, Rendall, Miller, White, Nash and Austin or Seiler on the line.

NEWARK PEP'S HOPES FOR PENNANT GET K. O.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 22.—The hopes of the Newark Peppers of winning the Federal League pennant were given a knockout blow here yesterday afternoon when they dropped both parts of a double-header to the Chicago Whales, the respective scores being 6 to 4 and 9 to 6.

Newark is now six and a half games behind the leading Pittsburg Rebels, who nosed out the Buffalo Blues yesterday. Though the Peps are not altogether out of the running the lead of the Smoky City team is almost insurmountable, for the Peps, at least. By virtue of their two-time victory over the Newarkers the Whales made a gain on the pacemakers, notwithstanding that the latter won a game. The locals are only two and a half games in the rear of the Rebels. The St. Louis Fielders defeated the Baltimore Terrapins yesterday and are a game and a half behind the Whales.

TRIP FOR CHAMPIONS.

The winner of the world's series baseball championship will probably make a trip to the Panama-Pacific Exposition at San Francisco to play a picked team from the Pacific Coast, according to the statement of Ban Johnson. This will break a long-established rule in baseball, but permission for the trip will probably be granted as a courtesy to the exposition management. A committee from San Francisco, consisting of Bill Lange, Samuel Rucker and William Humphrey, President of the Olympic Club, will come East within a short time to arrange the details of such a post-season series.

PHILADELPHIA'S RACING DAY.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 22.—The Keim Stake, the sporting sweepstake and the Narberth Stake, totaling $2,400, are hung up for this afternoon's contests at Belmont track. The Pastime Stable, of Cleveland, will make its first appearance in this city, when William J. Andrew will drive Leonore McKinney in the Keim Stake race. The one-day meet promises to be one of the best ever held here.

WORLD'S SERIES MAY START ON OCTOBER 8

Ban Johnson Announces That First Game Will Be On Friday.

It is likely that the first world series game will start Friday, October 8. This is the plan of President Ban Johnson, of the American League, and he has always had his way in the past. A decision is up to Garry Herrmann and other members of the National Commission. Other influences are urging that the first game be played Saturday, October 9. Arrangements will be made within the next few days and definite announcement will be made.

According to information running loose in local athletic circles Plainfield is to have a cross-country team, which will compete in the annual cross-country run at Branch Brook Park, Newark, November 1.

Jack Fritts is promoting the idea and has approached several High School athletes relative to organizing a team. The idea sems to meet with their approval and practice will start at once. All local track men will be given a chance.

BOYS' ATHLETIC CLUB TO BE ORGANIZED SOON

Much interest was manifested in the effort to organize another boy's athletic club in this city, at a meeting held for the purpose in the High School gymnasium, last night. Messrs. Jack Ricketts and Kenneth Mair, of this city, who are the organizers of the new project, met with Henry C. White and A. B. Jones, of the Recreation Committee, to talk over the new organization. It is the intention of the young men to interest at least twenty-five local athletes in the club, which will have the privilege of using the High School gymnasium.

Basketball will probably be the principal sport entered during the winter months. Mr. Ricketts, who is one of the all-round athletes of the city, has played for several seasons on the local Y. M. C. A. basketball team and has held a position on the Holy Cross football team.

The monthly financial statement issued by the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey for August shows a gross increase in total business over August of last year of $54,473.89, the percentage of gain being 1.8 per cent. The total gross increase in total business for the eight months' period to August 31 was over $800,000, the percentage of gain for the period being 3.5 per cent.

The directors have just declared the regular quarterly dividend of one and one-half per cent. payable September 30.

MOVE TO EXPUNGE COUNCIL CANDIDATES OFF BALLOTS

New Brunswick, Sept. 22.—Justice James J. Bergen yesterday granted a rule to show cause, returnable before him at Somerville Saturday morning at 10 o'clock, as to why the names of the two-year City Council candidates in Elizabeth should not be kept off the primary ballots. Samuel Koester, representing Michael O'Hanlon, made the application, the case being a test of the companion law to the act providing for a board of public works which reduced the Council from twenty-four to twelve members.

Mr. O'Hanlon lives in the Fourth Election District of the Tenth Ward, and objects to the name of Thomas E. Humphreys being printed on the Democratic ticket as candidate for City Council. He contends no new councilmen should be elected this year. The contest is the result of a factional fight over the election of controller. It is said General Collins has his eye on the controllership and favors a small Council, while the Democrats prefer the large one.

FATAL STABBING OF BOY PUT UP TO GRAND JURY

New Brunswick, Sept. 22.—In charging the grand jury at the opening of the September term of the Middlesex county courts yesterday, Justice James J. Bergen called attention to a recent stabbing case at Perth Amboy in which Paul Goetz, fifteen, was killed by Frank Takacs, also fifteen, who is in the county jail here under a charge of murder. In an argument Goetz was stabbed through the heart. The Takacs boy claims he struck Goetz in self-defense.

Justice Bergen said if, from the facts, the grand jury found a bill for murder the trial jury would determine the degree. If the blow was struck in passion the indictment should be for manslaughter.

Justice Bergen also referred to autoists speeding on the highway without regard to the rights of others. Persons who carelessly got in the way of an automobile had no cause for complaint, he said, if injured, but autos had no right to use the public highway as a speedway.

W. Guy Weaver, of Perth Amboy, was made foreman of the jury.

P. R. R. FREIGHT HANDLERS QUIT AS CENTRAL'S GO BACK

Jersey City, Sept. 22.—More than 500 freight handlers employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad in its yards at Harsimus Cove, near the foot of Second street, went on strike for higher wages yesterday. At the same time the Central Railroad strike was settled, the men returning to work on obtaining a substantial increase in pay.

The Lehigh Valley employes will probably settle their differences with the company very shortly.

Upon learning of the Pennsylvania Railroad strike, Captain John Cody, of the City Hall Station, sent Round-Sergeant Bert Sniffen and a score of reserves to police the property of the company and Chief of Police Frank Monahan later sent an additional number of men.

Thus far the strikers have been quiet and show no disposition to riot in the manner which caused the arrest of four men and one woman on Jersey avenue last Friday evening. They show no desire to interfere with the police, but trouble is feared if the company imports strike breakers from New York.

The men, who received wages of twenty cents an hour, want an increase of five cents, a demand identical with the proposition made to the Central Railroad by its freight handlers.

CHILDREN GIVEN MOTOR RIDE.

Montreal, Sept. 22.—Fifteen hundred children of Canadian soldiers fighting for the empire are the guests today of the Automobile Club of Canada. Each year the club gives an outing to children, and this year the soldiers' children are given the distinction. All the kiddies from five to fifteen whose papas are fighting at the front were piled into the big automobiles this noon and whisked away to Sainte Rose, where candy, flags, horns and other delights of the child world awaited them. Five hundred autos were offered by local motorists for the day.

MOTHER DEMENTED AFTER CHILD'S DEATH

Fear of Diphtheria Epidemic Closes the Pluckemin Schools.

Fearing an epidemic of diphtheria, the public schools of Pluckemin were closed last Friday for an indefinite period.

One death from the disease has been reported and a second case is under quarantine. A few days ago the seven-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Struppe became ill in school and was sent home. Friday it developed that the girl was suffering from diphtheria and the schools were closed. Saturday night the girl died. Her eighteen-year-old brother, who kissed her when she was sent home, contracted the disease.

Mrs. Struppe, mother of the dead girl, is frantic with grief. She has fastened herself in the hay barn, where she remains hidden under the hay, and refuses to come out. It is believed that she is suffering from mental aberration as the result of the shock of her daughter's death. Some time ago Mrs. Struppe's mother died and for nine days she was demented.

ELKS ARE READY FOR BIG BAZAAR

Committee in Charge Has Made Elaborate Arrangements for Festival.

WILL LAST FULL WEEK

Many Features to be Added to Program Prior to October 18—Some of the Proposed Attractions—Entire Club-house Available.

The general committee in charge of the bazaar which will be held by the Plainfield Lodge of Elks in their Watchung avenue home during the week beginning October 18 is completing arrangements and indications points to a monster affair. At the weekly meeting held last night the placing of the various attractions and booths was decided. The main floor will be given over to the gypsy and fortune telling tent, the flower booth, ball throwing booth, "the country store," and check rooms for hats and coats, while the large reception parlor will be turned over to the reception committee.

The lodge room on the second floor will have booths arranged around the walls presided over by members of the soap and perfumery, novelty, cake, apron, grab-bag, chinaware, dolls and Japanese ware committees. The orchestra and entertainers will use the platform in this room, while the main floor will be reserved for dancing and the music committee reported that the well-known orchestra of Professor Harry Wetton had been secured for each evening during the entire week. The lemonade booth will be found in the reception hall of the second floor, while the handsome ladies' reception room at the front of the building will be given over to the table for fancy work and the library will be used for the display of cut glass and pennants.

The third floor will be given over to the women for the checking of wraps and dressing rooms.

In the basement will be found the prize bowling on the splendid alleys, while the rathskeller will be given over to the serving of ice cream.

Requests have been received by the local committee from various out of town Elks' lodges who would like to send delegations. With this in mind the committee decided to extend a special invitation to various lodges to attend on certain designated nights. Tuesday evening was set aside as local fraternal night. Invitations will be sent to all local fraternal organizations to send delegations on this evening. Wednesday evening will see visitors from the Elk lodges at New York, Hoboken, Jersey City and Brooklyn; Thursday evening will take in Dover, Paterson, Rutherford, Summit and Morristown; Friday evening has been set aside for Newark, East Orange, Orange, Irvington and Bayonne, while Saturday night will see big delegations from Somerville, Elizabeth, New Brunswick, Rahway and Perth Amboy.

Reports were received from the various chairmen of committees to the effect that many of the women who are assisting the general committee are working very hard and with excellent results. Other chairmen will hold meetings of their committees this week or the early part of next week.

The general committee has reached the point where certain success of the affair is in sight and this bazaar will, without doubt, be the biggest event of the kind ever held in this city.

The committee on badges and buttons reported that a big supply of badges, with the picture of an elk and the words "Plainfield Elks Bazaar, October 18-23, 1915. Meet Me," on same, had been secured for general distribution. Judging from the number of people seen on the streets wearing these buttons, this report is correct.

PICTURES AT THE THEATRE.

Manager Michael Shannon announces that if the weather is too cold to permit an outdoor show at the Aridome at Watchung avenue and Front street, the same photo-plays will be shown at the Plainfield Theatre and all admission tickets bought for the Airdome will be honored at the West Second street house.

SAY MISSING PASTOR STOLE DAILY BREAD

Somerville Woman Seeks the Rev. Holden E. Sampson, of Millstone.

Somerville, Sept. 23.—The Rev. Holden E. Sampson, head of the Millstone Mystic and Religious sect, has disappeared, and it is believed that his sudden departure was due to an illicit activity in providing his daily bread, or to be more exact, the corn from which the bread might be made.

Mrs. Bertha Day, of North Plainfield, daughter of the late Albert Voorhees, was preparing to file suit against the Rev. Sampson, seeking to recover 250 bushels of corn, which she charges he stole, or the value thereof at ninety cents a bushel. If she can find the missing religious leader she will have him arrested for stealing her corn.

On August 31, the Rev. Sampson, accompanied by a Mrs. Valentine, was before the county judge here charged with stealing two bushels of corn from the Albert Force estate. Miss Day was the prosecutor. The judge put the reverend on a year's probation and ordered him to pay fifty cents a week during the year.

It is believed that the missing man has gone to England, his former home. Papers in his case are in the hands of county authorities and will be served if he can be located.

DR. HARRISON TELLS OF WORK IN ARABIA

Missionary From Trinity Reformed Church Speaks at Mid-week Service.

Dr. Paul W. Harrison, who has been in Arabia for the past five years as a missionary from Trinity Reformed church, and who has just returned from that country, attended the mid-week prayer meeting at Trinity church last night and gave an interesting address concerning his work. Dr. Harrison expressed his great joy in returning to the church which had sent him to Arabia. He counted it a privilege to be a missionary of Trinity church.

Dr. Harrison said that he felt that all through his labors he was not laboring alone, but that his own church was helping him with their prayers. He cited a few instances of this fact. He believed that it was through the prayers of the people that he received his diploma from the Turkish government to practice in Turkish territory. In less than forty-eight hours after he had arrived in Constantinople he had received his diploma. This was a most remarkable procedure, said Dr. Harrison, for usually the applicant is held up for graft and long delays usually follow.

The missionary was very enthusiastice in speaking of his inland trip to Kateef. He opened his dispensary in that place, where never before a missionary had gained a foothold. Crowds of the sick and diseased came to him for treatment. Each morning before the beginning of his work the doctor had prayers. After he had been in this place for about five days the chief of the tribe wished to see him and objected to his saying these prayers each morning.

Dr. Harrison said that he stood his ground, but the chief insisted that he could not continue the clinic in that town with the morning prayer. As the people flocked around him in such numbers, the chief finally gave his consent to the prayers. Dr. Harrison won the good will of the chief and he is now his firm friend. Nowhere in Arabia would he be more welcome than in Kateef. He hopes still to take another trip into the interior of Arabia and establish a new Plainfield.

Dr. Harrison will speak Sunday at the rally day services of the Bible school of Trinity church at 9:45 o'clock in the morning and will preach at the morning service at 11 o'clock. He will undoubtedly be greeted by a large congregation at both of these services as he has many friends in this city.

WILLIAM A. WYNN.

DECIDE TO ENGAGE EVANGELIST TAYLOR

Boy Preacher Will Conduct Revival Here Beginning October 17.

At a meeting of the members of the Park Avenue Baptist church last night it was decided to engage Charlie Taylor, the "boy evangelist," to conduct a series of revival services in that church beginning Sunday, October 17, and lasting three weeks. The Rev. E. H. Emett, the boy evangelist's manager, was present at last night's service and outlined plans for the coming campaign. It was left to the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, to select the necessary committees to take charge of the services, and this he will do in a few days.

Dr. Hudson is very enthusiastic over the coming of the boy preacher, for he has worked with him before. While the Plainfield pastor was at Atlantic City, Evangelist Taylor conducted a series of meetings in Dr. Hudson's church and was very successful. That was three years ago when the boy was only thirteen years old. He is now sixteen. His father is a successful evangelist, and accompanies the son, but most of the actual preaching and evangelistic work is done by the boy.

The boy began assisting his father when he was only three years old, falling naturally into the work, and aiding by singing at the services. He still sings, and is accompanied by his father on his trips, as he is too young to go about alone. The Taylors are from England.

BURNING EXCELSIOR STARTS FIRE IN PACKING BOXES

A bad fire was averted this noon by prompt action on the part of the fire department. An employe unpacking boxes in the rear of the United Cigar Stores Company's place on East Front street set fire to the excelsior. The blaze was communicated to a fence. There were two cleaning establishments in the vicinity of the burning fence, and had not the fire been extinguished promptly the blaze might have been communicated to them. The loss was trifling.

REV. KEMBLE PRESIDENT.

The formation of a men's league of the Women's Political Union of Rahway was partly completed at a meeting held in the Rahway suffrage headquarters last night. The Rev. C. S. Kemble, pastor of the Trinity M. E. church, and formerly pastor of the Monroe Avenue church, Plainfield, was elected president of the league. Plans for furthering the suffrage movement were discussed and it was decided to make a house-to-house canvass of the voters of the city in the interest of equal suffrage.

INJURED TEN YEARS AGO.

Ten years ago tomorrow Garret T. Dunham, of West Front street, now overseer of the poor, was thrown from a trolley car while returning to his home, and received injuries which resulted in an unconscious condition for sixteen days. It was on October 10 that he regained consciousness and was unable to recall anything that had happened in connection with the accident.

CLASSIS OF RARITAN.

The regular fall meeting of the Classis of Raritan will be held in the Reformed church of High Bridge, Tuesday, October 12, at 10 a. m. The sermon will be delivered by the retiring president, the Rev. Isaac Sperling. The report on Synodical minutes will be presented by the Rev. Dr. E. G. Read, of Plainfield, formerly pastor of the Second Reformed church of Somerville.

The Young People's Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church will have charge of the services at the Rescue Mission tonight at 8 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to the public to attend.

PEACOCK PRESIDENT.

At a meeting of the Senior Class of the Plainfield High School this morning Herbert Peacock was elected president for the coming year. He also served in that capacity in his junior year.

NO NOMINATIONS BY PROGRESSIVES

However, 1,800 Ballots for Party Are Printed by Somerset Co. Authorities.

NAMES OF CANDIDATES

Only Contest in North Plainfield is For Office of Tax Collector—Democrats Make no Nominations in the Borough.

Samples of the ballots to be voted next Tuesday in the borough are in the hands of the voters. Three parties only are recognized—the Republican, the Democratic and the Progressive. There is not a name on the Progressive ballot sheet, yet the county had to go to the expense of printing eighteen hundred of them nevertheless. Each ballot sheet is of a different color so that they can be easily distinguished. The Republican sheet is pink, the Democratic yellow, and the Progressive green. No recognition was given the Socialist or the Prohibition tickets in the borough, as neither party has polled votes enough at an election to entitle them to a ballot at the primary. If nominations are made on either of these two tickets they will have to be made by petition after the primary.

With the exception of the contest for the Assembly nomination between Assemblyman Ogden H. Hammond, of Bernardsville, the present incumbent, and William Delaroche Anderson, of Watchung, who opposes him, the only contest in the borough will be for the office of collector on the Republican ticket. There will be no contest among the Democrats.

The local Republican candidates are as follows: For mayor, William L. Smalley; councilmen (two to be nominated), Clifford W. McGee and John Alexander Wilson; for collector (unexpired term of one year, one to be voted for), James K. Arnold, Frederick A. Martin, Frank Rowley, William J. Trembath and John V. E. Vanderhoef; justice of the peace, Fred W. Hand; county committee, Alexander Milne, John Alexander Wilson, Henry DeMott, Edward P. Smith and Howard T. Woolston, for the five districts in the order named.

Samuel S. Swackhammer, of the borough, will be unopposed for the Assembly nomination on the Democratic ticket. Petitions for the other offices were not filed except in the case of county committeemen, when petitions for the Second, Fourth and Fifth Districts were filed as follows: H. Fred Krausse, Andrew E. Kenney and William H. Day in the order named.

DUNELLEN'S TAX RATE IS INCREASED

The Figures This Year Are $2.75 as Against $2.48 in 1915.

New Brunswick will have a tax rate of $2.30 this year, which is 29 points lower than last year. This city is one of the few which will have a lower tax rate this year than last.

The rates for the various municipalities in Middlesex county were figured out at a meeting of the County Board of Taxation yesterday. New Brunswick's rate last year was $2.59.

The rate for Perth Amboy on the contrary, will be 12 points in advance of last year's. This year's rate will be $2.19 as against $2.07 last year.

An increase is also shown for Dunellen borough. This year's rate will be $2.75 as against $2.48 last year. Metuchen's rate will be $2.14 this year as against $2.11 last year. Piscataway township will have a lower rate, $1.41 as against $1.48. Dunellen has the distinction of having the highest tax rate in Middlesex county this year, $2.75 on each $100 of assessed valuation.

MARY PICKFORD POSING IN LOCAL GARDEN SCENES

Mary Pickford, the highest salaried motion picture actress in the world, was in Plainfield today. She and a company of Famous Players were taking scenes for the coming production of "Madame Butterfly" in the Japanese garden at the residence of P. D. Saklatvala, of 73 Leland avenue.

The entire company came early this morning and worked on the release until five o'clock this afternoon. BALKAN STATES CREATE ANXIETY

Grave Importance Attached to the Action of Bulgaria.

LONDON IS ALARMED

Concedes That Storm Center of States Has Thrown Lot in With Germany—New Frye Note is Satisfactory to Washington.

London, Sept. 23.—The news that Bulgaria is mobilizing, to what end has not yet been revealed, which reached here first from New York, was by far the greatest sensation of the day, and in fact is considered the most important news of weeks.

No attempt is made in any quarter to deny the tremendously grave implications of this move on the part of the State which has from the first been the storm centre of the whole tangled Balkan problem, but it is still hoped that it does not mean that Bulgaria has finally decided to throw in her lot with Germany, Austria and her traditional enemy, Turkey. On the contrary, it is suggested that this last dramatic move is the final notification to the allies that they must meet Bulgaria's terms.

None the less, all the news today from the Balkans has been steadily more alarming. The German and Austrian guns are still pounding at the Serb lines along the Danube and the Drave, attacking nearly the whole Serbian frontier.

The news from Athens indicates that Bulgaria's move is being watched there also with considerable apprehension.

Meanwhile there are indications from many quarters that Serbia is rallying all her forces to meet the gathering storm.

Artillery Duel in Artois.

Paris, Sept. 23.—French war statement.

"In Artois the enemy violently bombarded the sector of Roolincourt and our trenches to the south of La Scarpe. Our artillery responded vigorously. There was some fighting from trench to trench in region of Neuville. Our artillery directed an immense and effective fire on German trenches to north and south of Arras, as well as toward Beuvraignes. In Champagne a German mine exploded to the northeast of Perthes without causing any damage of importance. The fire of our batteries blew up numerous ammunition depots. In Argonne we bombarded in different attacks, portions of the enemy's lines where his works were reported. The German artillery replied freely. Artillery duels occurred on the Meuse Heights and between the Meuse and Moselle, accompanied by conflicts with bombs, torpedoes and grenades at Vauquois and Eparges.

LIVELY DISCUSSION OVER STREET WORK

Dunellenites Incensed Because Contractors Fail to Repair Thoroughfares.

The question of putting the streets of the borough, torn up by the sewer contractors, back in shape was discussed at length at last evening's adjourned session of the Mayor and Common Council. Many of the town-people have become incensed at the unavoidable slowness with which this work is proceeding. Another letter was received from Dr. E. G. Curry in connection with the matter.

After thanking the Council for fixing up 150 feet of Third street, opposite his property, the doctor called the attention of the municipal body to the condition of Madison avenue, stating that his automobile sank up to its hubs one evening recently. The doctor then went on to say that between the unfinished bridge across Green brook and the condition of the streets leading to his home that he and his neighbors were practically isolated. He said that the length of time taken in getting to and from the railroad station virtually made New York city farther away from his home than it was when he moved there. He said that he was getting tired of this condition and would like to sell his property.

John Peters, Jr., Charles Dodwell and Clark Ramsey submitted applications for the position of sewer inspector. They were duly appointed by the mayor and will be called upon as needed by Engineer Churchill.

A letter was read from the Plainfield office of the Public Service Gas Company in connection with the matter of extending its service for a distance of 1,500 feet along Walnut street west of Prospect avenue and thence down Fairview avenue. The communication stated that a requisition had been filed with the Newark office for this extension.

G. Sumner Smith was present and requested that he be given line and grade for the relaying of 300 feet of sidewalk in front of his home. The request was granted. Mr. Smith's request led to the discussion of the condition of other sidewalks on the side of Grove street which he lives and this resulted in the borough clerk being instructed to write all property holders residing on the north side of that thoroughfare between Prospect avenue and the rail road tracks to relay their walks

The question of the appointment of commissioners to assess benefits and damages on the Madison avenue and Front street drainage systems was laid over until the next meeting of the Council. The question of financing eighty per cent. of the cost of the systems is to be borne by the property holders benefitted and the balance of twenty per cent. by the borough. Those assessed will have five years in which to make their payments. The dates of these payments were considered at length and the mayor's recommendation that they be May and November will probably be adopted.

Sidewalk assessments aggregating $350 have not been paid by those benefitted and a resolution was passed by the Council instructing the borough clerk or notify these delinquents, most of whom are Polish, residing in the Equator Park section, that steps would be taken to make these bills a lien on their property if they were not paid at once. Bills aggregating $134.67 were ordered paid.

Benjamin Elliott settled with Jean Kandelky, both Plains residents, yesterday for $25 after the latter had brought suit in the Plainfield District Court for the second time. The affair grew out of a transaction between the two last spring when Elliot sold a horse to Kandelky. After several weeks the animal was taken sick and Elliot took the horse back and agreed to give $25 in return. He killed the horse and then refused to give Kandelky the money. William Newcorn was the attorney for the complainant and the defendant was represented by Francis J. Blatz and Judge Robeson, of Elizabeth.

A serious accident was narrowly averted on South avenue, near the Westfield line, on Tuesday by the presence of mind of a traveling salesman. He was east-bound from Plainfield in a touring car when he approached three young women in a car coming from Westfield. The one driving was evidently a novice and edged the other car over in the gutter. To avoid hitting the car containing the women the fellow took the ditch and hit a telegraph pole, breaking a front wheel and the radiator and lamps. A rear tire was burst and the mud guards bent. The young women agreed to pay the bill, as they were at fault. They declined to give their names, being so upset that one of the local young men had to drive them to Plainfield. DEPRECATES IDEA OF GOING TO WAR

Senator James E. Martine Says That We Stand for Justice to Mankind.

In a talk Tuesday night to the members of East Orange Council, Knights of Columbus, United States Senator James E. Martine urged support for President Wilson and deprecated the idea that this country is in danger of going to war with Germany.

"Men have asked me if we would go to war," said the Senator. "Why should we? With whom? With Germany? God forbid! Germany has nothing America wants, and America has nothing that Germany or any other country can have. We are not going to war, but we are going to stand as men for justice to mankind."

The Senator was applauded roundly.

Senator Martine was the guest of the council at the first of a series of smokers, which will be given every month during the season.

Commending the work of the order of the Knights of Columbus, the Senator expressed the hope that it would grow and develop without limit.

"I am not a Knight of Columbus," said the speaker, "but I am a 'knight of Columbia,' and no man can be a true Knight of Columbus without being also a 'knight of Columbia,' who would stand ready to defend the Constitution against foes within and without."

Admitting that his father was French and his mother German, Senator Martine said he was glad, however, that he was born in America and is ready to defend the Constitution.

"How best can the nation be preserved?" inquired the Senator. "By making the men and the women in it better. A nation is great according as its men and its women are good."

GRAND AND PETIT JURORS TO BE DRAWN MONDAY

The Grand and Petit juries for the October term will be drawn next Monday before Judge Connolly in the Court of Common Pleas by Sheriff Otto and Jury Commissioner Russ. By reason of an amendment to the jury law, adopted at the last session of the Legislature, thirty-five names will be picked from the list of 300, subject to Grand Jury duty, instead of twenty-four, as in the past, and from them will be chosen the inquisitorial body.

A Petit Jury panel of sixty names will be drawn to serve for two weeks, and if needed, two other panels of the same number will be drawn for similar periods. In case a fourth panel is found to be necessary, the jurors picked for that will have to do duty for the remainder of the term. The Grand Jury will begin its labors on October 5.

TOMORROW COMMENCES

NEAL OF THE NAVY

A Wonderful New Serial by the Producers of Elaine.

WILL NOT CALL CONGRESS.

Washington, Sept. 23.—President Wilson today authorized a denial of the report that he had decided to call an extra session of Congress October 18. The President has not made up his mind as to whether an extra session will be called this fall, but his action today, it is thought, precludes the possibility of any session before the regular December term.

NO HALT IN LOAN CONFERENCE.

New York, Sept. 23.—With regard to the report on Dednesday and this morning that there had been friction between American bankers and members of the Anglo-French Commission, a member of the Commission said today that there was no ground for the report. The statement was issued which said that there was an important meeting of the Commission this morning, which was attended by a number of prominent bankers and other important prominent financial interests.

CORN ROAST ON MOUNTAIN.

The Young People's Society of the German Reformed church will hold a corn roast tomorrow evening at the Saengerbund Grove at Interhaven avenue. The social committee is in charge of the outing.

Los Angeles—To be acting mayor of a great city like Los Angeles, even for one day, is a big distinction. Mrs. Estelle Lawton Lindsey, the city's one councilwoman, achieved this honor on September 9th. Mayor Sebastian was called out of town, and so Mrs. Lindsey took office with full powers as the executive. This is said to be the first time a woman has acted as head of a municipality of the size of Los Angeles.

WAR NEWS

von Hindenburg, says today's official report from the German General Staff, with his troops, has penetrated the advance Russian position west of Dvinsk, capturing 17 officers, 2,105 men and 4 machine guns. The Russian resistance on the front stretching from a point north of Oschmjany, the region east of Subodniki on the Gawja River, has been broken, it is announced. The Germans took 1,000 prisoners.

All Bulgarians In Arms.

THE WOMAN'S COLUMN

Pittsburgh — Although women rarely figure in the transactions of the steel market, especially where governments are concerned, Mme. Dorece Millerand, an accredited agent of the French government, has placed some enormous orders here. She closed a deal with a local steel company for 50,000 tons of steel billets, the kind used in the making of high velocity projectiles. She was also seeking to buy 100,000 tons more of the same material, but found the local mills unable to handle her big order. The appearance of Mme. Millerand created a stir in the steel trade. A beautiful and refined lady, she talked steel with a full knowledge of the industry and excellent acquaintance with business methods.

Seattle—Miss Ethel Hunley Caldwell, formerly of Oakland, Cal., has become dean of women at the University of Washington. Her work in the public schools of Oakland attracted the attention of prominent educators, including Dr. Henry Suzzalo, the new president of the University of Washington.

New York—Whether Sarah Bernhardt will ever be seen again on the American stage is greatly in doubt, owing to conflicting reports from France. The famous actress is said to have had trouble with her new wooden limb, or at least has found it hard to manage. On the other hand, she denies that this is the reason why she postponed her journey to America. Mme. Bernhardt was to have opened an engagement here Monday, but at the last moment cancelled her sailing.

Duluth, Minn.—Topics that will run the gamut from social problems to citizenship and highest education have been outlined in the program for the 21st annual convention of the Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs, which opened here Monday. Daily sessions will be held until Friday. Instead of the annual reception the Duluth hostesses will introduce a delightful novelty by arranging a federation luncheon on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Clarence L. Atwood, of St. Cloud, president of the Minnesota Federation, will be the principal speaker at the big session this evening. Mrs. Philip N. Moore, of St. Louis, a former president of the General Federation, and Mrs. Fannie French Morse, superintendent of the Girls' Training School at Sauk Center, will be the other speakers. Tomorrow morning Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, president of the General Federation, will be a speaker.

Boston—The heroism of American women in the afflicted, war-torn, foreign lands is every day reflected in some new avenue of accomplishment. One of the most interesting stories from Asia Minor is that of Miss Mary L. Graffam, principal of the girls' high school at Sivas, and a graduate of Columbia Teachers' College. Last winter she accompanied a relief party to stem the typhus outbreak at Erzroom. Returning to her little school, she met another emergency. The Armenian population was being deported. Finding that her pupils were thus forced to quit the town, she sought permission to go with them. She bought a spring wagon, and stocked it with medicines and food. After some weeks a message was received by the American Board of Foreign Missions that Miss Graffam had reached Malatia, some five days' ride from Sivas. She is administering relief and steadying the minds of the frightened people.

Atlanta—With the Dixie Highway, running from Chicago to Miami, ready to be dedicated and opened for practical purposes some time in November, the clubwomen of the states from the Gulf to the Great Lakes are organizing for the purpose of permanently beautifying the long highway. The initial organization was perfected at Guyton, Ga., where about 50 women banded themselves together to beautify the new highway.

Washington—Mrs. Harriett Chalmers Adams, one of the ten woman explorers in the world, is planning one of the most difficult trips of her career. She has traveled through Mexico and South America on a 40,000 mile trip, visiting many countries never before seen by a white woman. She crossed Haiti in the saddle, the only white woman ever to cross that island. She has also scured the jungles of the Philippines. Her next effort, she recently told a reporter here, will be from the Mediterranean to Bagdad, to Teheran and to Russian Turkestan and down into India. Mrs. Adams is a California woman. She travels for the pure love of adventure and study of the out-of-the-way places. Her husband is the editor of the publications of the Pan-American Union in Washington.

Washington—Four great organizations of women in close relationship to the Grand Army of the Republic are to meet here next week, each in its own national encampment and all uniting to do honor to the warriors and make their semi-centennial celebration a notable tribute of the nation's gratitude. The Woman's Relief Corps, the Ladies of the G. A. R., the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Sons of Veterans, and an independent organization known as the Daughters of Veterans are the four bodies who will bring the womanly touch to the encampment of the old soldiers. Representatives of the four societies have formed a committee with Mrs. W. E. Andrews as chairman. Mrs. Andrews has also appointed a large committee of distinguished women, from social and official life, and an honorary committee consisting of Miss Margaret Wilson and the wives of members of the Cabinet.

San Francisco—What will American girls do next is the question in quaint old Honolulu. When the liner Korea docked here a few weeks ago a dashing Ohio beauty, Miss Barbara Wick, was the heroine of the passengers. She had swam two miles from the ship in Honolulu bay, in the dazzling moonlight, alone and unaided, and spent the night on the beach. When the Korea was held at quarantine at Honolulu on her arrival from China and Japan, Miss Wick was tempted by the strains of wierd Hawaiian music to slip over the vessel's side and swim ashore. The adventure was carried out, and when the ship docked the girl was on the pier, fully dressed, and welcoming her shipmates.

Philadelphia—Dr. Lucy L. W. Wilson, the famous biologist, has brought back from New Mexico, where she has been digging in the remote caverns and cliff dwellings, with Indians as her aides, many relics of prehistoric man. Skeletons, pottery and primitive utensils she gathered galore, and she will use these to reproduce in a museum here the Pueblo life of a thousand years ago. Her discoveries reveal vividly the life of the early red men. Last July, armed with a special permit from the Department of the Interior, Dr. Wilson entered the Jemez National Forest of New Mexico. She made friends with the local Indians and lived with them to study their modern condition. With her Indian diggers, she uncovered ancient apartment houses, containing hundreds of rooms, including temples. Thirty-six rooms were dug out and their relics secured.

Declaring that there is reason to believe that transfers from one election district to another have been abused, Supreme Court Justice Swayze in Jersey City has announced that hereafter there will be a comparison of signatures of voters before transfers are granted. According to the method adopted by the court the applicant will be required to produce a certificate from the Election Board in the district in which he has registered certifying to that fact. Upon this certificate must appear for purposes of identification the genuine signature of the voter and an affidavit from the Election Board that it corresponds with the signature on the registry. The applicant then will be required to sign his name in the court's presence, and if it corresponds with the signature as certified by the Election Board an order for the transfer will be made.

Sheriff Eugene F. Kinkead, of Hudson county, made his first political speech of the primary campaign this week in Jersey City. It was expected that he might have something pertinent to say about the charge of Supreme Court Justice Swayze to the Grand Jury relating to the Bayonne strike, but those who entertained such hopes were disappointed. Neither did the sheriff refer to the alleged "kidnapping" of Jerry Baly in Elizabeth on Monday night by officers of his staff. Instead, Kinkead devoted himself to a bitter attack upon Naval Officer H. Otto Wittpenn, likening him to the Czar of Russia and charging him with trying to foist his autocracy upon Hudson county for the last decade. He predicted the defeat of the Wittpenn candidates.

Naval Officer Wittpenn has turned down a challenge of Sheriff Kinkead to debate with the latter on the issues of the campaign, declining in a letter to the sheriff. Taking the stand that neither he nor Kinkead are candidates in the campaign Wittpenn declared that any debate should be between Secretary of State Thomas F. Martin and Alexander Simpson, candidate for the Assembly, who says he is ready to accept Martin's challenge.

On the sample primary ballot mailed to voters in Newark, preference of position, on both the Democratic and Republican tickets, has been given to groups of candidates as against individuals, without regard to alphabetical order. Friends of some candidates believed at first that there had been discrimination against the individual candidates and that the names should have been printed in alphabetical order. In ordering the groups printed at the top of the columns, City Clerk Archibald adhered to a ruling made two years ago by Supreme Court Justice Swayze, who decided that the groups should precede the single names. Justice Swayze ruled that way upon section 40 for the Geran law, relating to primary ballots, as follows:

"The names of all candidates for the same office shall be printed in alphabetical order under the several designations of the office to be voted for, unless grouped," etc.

UNUSUAL ATTENDANCE AT BAPTIST SERVICES

The service last evening at the First Baptist church was a remarkable one, the attendance completely filling the large room, the number of men older and younger present being very noticeable. All the departments of this church and all its services show conditions promising an unusual year spiritually and otherwise. The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor is planning a social for tomorrow evening which doubtless will be very largely attended, and young people having no other church affiliations will be most welcome.

The mid-week services, to which attention has already been drawn, are so successful that even greater results are expected from them. It is expected that next week no less than two hundred and fifty people will be present, one hundred of this number, at least, men and boys. A special feature of the service will be the boys who now are so largely attending the mid-week meetings and who will be given special place and part next week.

RECREATION NOTES

Piano instruction for children will be given regularly at Franklin School on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

The Bryant dancing class for the children of Bryant School will be held for the first time this season on Monday afternoon at Bryant School. The nominal fee of ten cents a lesson is charged.

The public speaking class is to hold its meetings at Washington School this year. The first meeting will be held on Monday evening, October 4. Plans are being made to broaden the scope of the work this season and a larger membership is expected in consequence. Any one interested in the art of public speaking and desiring to join the class should send his name to the office of the Public Recreation Committee at Stillman School building.

YOUNGER VETERANS TO GIVE GREETINGS

Hearty Welcome to Be Extended to the Grim Old Fighters of Civil War.

Washington, September 23.—One of the interesting features of the 49th national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic at Washington, D. C. will be the official and formal presentation of greetings from the younger veterans of the war with Spain to the grim old fighters of the civil war. This presentation of good wishes and comradeship will be made in pursuance of a resolution adopted by a unanimous rising vote at the recent national encampment of the United Spanish War Veterans at Scranton, Pa. Colonel L. C. Dyer, representative in congress from Missouri and the newly elected commander-in-chief of the U. S. W. V., in a communication to Col. John McElroy, Commander of the Department of the Potomac, G. A. R. states that he will name a committee to make the presentation of greetings in open convention.

Commander-in-chief Dyer also requests permission to provide an honorary and personal escort of 100 uniformed Spanish War Veterans for General Nelson A. Miles in the big parade. General Miles is a past commander-in-chief of the United Spanish War Veterans, having been elected when the organization was in its infancy. He will be honorary grand marshal of the parade at the G. A. R. encampment. General Miles was the highest officer in the American army during the war with Spain. He is also a veteran of the Civil War.

TRY PHILA. OFFICIALS.

Philadelphia, Sept. 23.—Hearing is set for tomorrow in the equity suit brought by the City against Henry Clay, former director of public safety; John R. Wiggins and Willard H. Walls, to compel them to refund upward of $200,000 alleged to have been gained through fraudulent city contracts. Clay, Wiggins and Walls were recently acquitted of conspiracy to defraud the city on the contracts, but City Solicitor Ryan does not intend to permit the acquittal to interfere with the prosecution of the civil suit for the recovery of the money. The present action was brought after the men were convicted at their first trial.
